MEANING OF TERMS USED IN CLASSIFYING ANNOTATING CASES.

THE different expressions used to describe the effect of the annotating cases have the following meanings, and the classification of the annotating cases has been done strictly in accordance with these meanings. The annotating cases, except such as are classified as "Mentioned," are grouped according to the points in the case which they annotate: within these groups they are listed chronologically, except such as are classified as "Referred to," which come at the end of the group and are arranged inter se in chronological order. Cases which annotate the annotated case generally are grouped together after cases which annotate specific points, similarly arranged, and are followed by cases classified as "Mentioned" arranged chronologically inter se. The terms used in classifying the annotating cases are as follows:—

- "APPLIED" (Apld.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the principle of law enunciated in the annotated case has been applied to a new set of facts and circumstances in the annotating case.
- "APPROVED" (Apprvd.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the annotated case has been considered to be good law in the annotating case where the latter is in a higher court than the former.
- "CONSIDERED" (Consd.).—This expression is used where the remarks in the annotating case are devoid of adverse criticism and merely denote the giving of more or less careful consideration to the annotated case.
- "DISTINGUISHED" (Distd.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but where some essential difference (either on the facts or in law) between it and the annotated case is pointed out.
- "DOUBTED" (Dbtd.).—This expression is used where the court in the annotating case without definitely going to the length of saying that the annotated case is wrong, adduces reasons which seem to show that it is not accurate.
- "EXPLAINED" (Expld.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but the decision arrived at is justified or accounted for by calling attention to some point of fact or of law which is usually, but not necessarily, one not obvious on the face of the report.
- "EXTENDED" (Extd.).—Compare "APPLIED," supra.
- "FOLLOWED" (Folld.).—This expression is used to denote that the same principles of law are applied in the two cases. It does not necessarily imply that the facts are substantially identical in the two cases.
- "NOT FOLLOWED" (N.F.).—Compare "FOLLOWED," supra, to which it is the adverse.
- "OVERRULED" (Overd.).—This expression is used where the annotating case is on substantially identical facts with the annotated case and in a higher court and the rule in the latter case is held to be wrong.
- "REFERRED" (Refd.).—This expression is used only where the annotating case deals with the point of the Digest paragraph and is without comment of any definite character on the case annotated, and where there is no delicate shade of approval or disapproval which would justify the use of any of the foregoing words.
- "MENTIONED" (Mentd.).—This expression is used only where none of the foregoing terms apply. In other words, it is used only where the case annotated is cited on a point having nothing to do with the point in the Digest paragraph.

MEANING OF TERMS

USED IN CLASSIFYING ANNOTATING CASES.

THE different expressions used to describe the effect of the annotating cases have the following meanings, and the classification of the annotating cases has been done strictly in accordance with these meanings. The annotating cases, except such as are classified as "Mentioned," are grouped according to the points in the case which they annotate: within these groups they are listed chronologically, except such as are classified as "Referred to," which come at the end of the group and are arranged inter se in chronological order. Cases which annotate the annotated case generally are grouped together after cases which annotate specific points, similarly arranged, and are followed by cases classified as "Mentioned" arranged chronologically inter se. The terms used in classifying the annotating cases are as follows:—

- "APPLIED" (Apld.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the principle of law enunciated in the annotated case has been applied to a new set of facts and circumstances in the annotating case.
- "APPROVED" (Apprvd.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the annotated case has been considered to be good law in the annotating case where the latter is in a higher court than the former.
- "CONSIDERED" (Consd.).—This expression is used where the remarks in the annotating case are devoid of adverse criticism and merely denote the giving of more or less careful consideration to the annotated case.
- "DISTINGUISHED" (Distd.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but where some essential difference (either on the facts or in law) between it and the annotated case is pointed out.
- "DOUBTED" (Dbtd.).—This expression is used where the court in the annotating case without definitely going to the length of saying that the annotated case is wrong, adduces reasons which seem to show that it is not accurate.
- "EXPLAINED" (Expld.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but the decision arrived at is justified or accounted for by calling attention to some point of fact or of law which is usually, but not necessarily, one not obvious on the face of the report.
- "EXTENDED" (Extd.).—Compare "APPLIED," supra.
- "FOLLOWED" (Folld.).—This expression is used to denote that the same principles of law are applied in the two cases. It does not necessarily imply that the facts are substantially identical in the two cases.
- "NOT FOLLOWED" (N.F.).—Compare "FOLLOWED," supra, to which it is the adverse.
- "OVERRULED" (Overd.).—This expression is used where the annotating case is on substantially identical facts with the annotated case and in a higher court and the rule in the latter case is held to be wrong.
- "REFERRED" (Refd.).—This expression is used only where the annotating case deals with the point of the Digest paragraph and is without comment of any definite character on the case annotated, and where there is no delicate shade of approval or disapproval which would justify the use of any of the foregoing words.
- "MENTIONED" (Mentd.).—This expression is used only where none of the foregoing terms apply. In other words, it is used only where the case annotated is cited on a point having nothing to do with the point in the Digest paragraph.

SECT. 1.—NECESSITY FOR WRITING.

See Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 40.
Memorandum or note.]—See Sect. 8, post.

SECT. 2.—OFFER AND ACCEPTANCE.

SUB-SECT. 1.—OFFER.

See, generally, CONTRACT, Vol. XII., pp. 53–63;
LANDLORD & TENANT, Vol. XXX., pp. 371, 372.

1. What amounts to offer.—Whether statement of price at which willing to sell.]—The mere statement of the lowest price at which a vendor will sell contains no implied contract to sell at that price to the persons making the inquiry.—HARVEY v. FACEY, [1893] A. C. 552; 62 L. J. P. C. 127; 69 L. T. 504; 42 W. R. 129; 9 T. L. R. 612; 1 R. 428, P. C.

2. — Whether tender.—Of such sum as would exceed other tenders by two hundred pounds.—Undertaking to accept “highest net money tender.”]—The owner of certain coal mines proposed to receive sealed tenders from two parties who were competing for the purchase of them, & undertook to accept the highest net money tender. One of the competitors offered such a sum as would exceed by £200 the amount offered by the other:—Held: a tender in this form did not answer the description of the highest net money tender, & an order was made striking out the statement of claim in an action for specific performance of an alleged contract founded on such tender as disclosing no reasonable cause of action.—SOUTH HETTON COAL CO. v. HASWELL, SHOTTON & BASINGTON COAL & COKE CO., [1898] 1 Ch. 465;

3. How offer determined.—By rejection.—Counter offer.]—Deft., on June 6, offered in writing to sell his farm for £1,000; but pltf. offered £950, which deft. on June 27, after consideration, refused to accept. June 29 pltf., by letter agreed to give £1,000, but there appeared to be no assent on the part of deft., though there had been no withdrawal of the first offer:—Held: there was no binding contract within Stat. Frauds.—HYDIE v. WRENCH (1840), 3 Beav. 334; 4 Jur. 1106; 49 E. R. 132.

Annotation:—Consd. Stevenson v. McLean (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 346.

4. — — — Failure to accept within reasonable time.]—Unless a valid acceptance be given, within a reasonable time, to a written offer to sell an estate, it will be treated as abandoned.—WILLIAMS v. WILLIAMS (1853), 17 Beav. 213; 51 E. R. 1015.

5. — — — —.]—An offer to sell land, to be binding upon the person making it, must be accepted within a reasonable time. If the person making the offer die, become bkpt., or sell, before the acceptance of the offer, the land is not bound.—MEYNELL v. SURTEES (1855), 25 L. J. Ch. 257; 25 L. T. O. S. 227; 1 Jur. N. S. 737; 3 W. R. 535, L. C.

PART I. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.

b. — Statement of consideration only.]—BLACKSTOCK v. WILLIAMS (1907), 7 Terr. L. R. 362; 5 W. L. R. 85; 6 W. L. R. 79.—CAN.

c. — Offer made for valuable consideration gives option to purchase.]—An offer, though made for valuable consideration, to sell & convey land on payment of $500 to be made on or before a fixed date only gives an option to purchase which cannot be exercised as of right after the time limited, & the addition of a clause providing that, if the payment is not then made, the vendor shall be at liberty to cancel the agreement confers no additional right upon the proposed purchaser, so that the vendor may refuse a tender of the money subsequently made, although he has given no notice & has done no positive act of cancellation.—PATERSON v. HOUGHTON (1909), 19 Man. L. R. 168.—CAN.

d. — Authority given to agent to make inquiries.—Agent exceeding authority.]—GOOD v. BESCOBY (1913), 25 W. L. R. 639; 5 W. W. R. 245; 14 D. L. R. 325; 23 Man. L. R. 603.—CAN.

Depends upon language used.]—Whether a proposal is to be construed as an invitation to deal or as an offer which can be turned by acceptance into a binding agreement depends upon the language used & the circumstances of the particular case.—CANADIAN DYERS ASSOCN., LTD. v. BURTON (1920), 47 O. L. R. 259; 18 O. W. N. 83.—CAN.

f. — Instructions to agent to find buyer.]—PURNA CHANDRA DUTT v. INDRA CHANDRA ROY (1921), 1 L. R. 49 Calc. 389.—IND.

3i. How offer determined.—By rejection.—Counter offer.]—A specific counter-offer or rejection puts an end to an offer.—SHAW v. JONES, [1924] N. Z. L. R. 1133.—N.Z.

g. — By revocation before acceptance.—Offer given for value.]—

8. — Failure to accept within stipulated time.—At a sale by auction D. became the purchaser for £6,000 of certain real estate. Before the sale took place the auctioneer had received a letter from S., stating that he had been prevented from attending the sale, & asking if any of the lots remained unsold. After the sale was concluded the auctioneer informed D. that a client of his was inquiring about the property, & D. then said that he was willing to resell the same for £8,600, of which £100 should be paid to the auctioneer as commission, provided the offer was accepted within a specified time. The offer was communicated by the auctioneer by letter to S., who wrote a reply to the auctioneer accepting it. S. brought an action against D. for the specific performance of the agreement. The evidence was conflicting as to the time within which D.'s offer was to be accepted, & his contention was that it was not accepted in time. He also contended that the auctioneer's authority did not extend to making a contract, but only to bringing the parties together:—Held: the auctioneer was authorised to make a binding contract for a sale of D.'s interest under his contract; but the action must be dismissed on the ground that the offer had not been accepted within the time limited by D.—SAUNDERS v. DENCE (1885), 52 L. T. 644; 29 Sol. Jo. 356.

Annotation:—Refd. Rosenbaum v. Belson, [1900] 2 Ch. 267.

9. — By revocation before acceptance—Sale to third party.—MEYNELL v. SURTEES, No. 5, ante.

10. — Addition of new terms to proposal.—When an offer in writing is made by the owner to sell an estate on specified terms, & this is unconditionally accepted, there is a binding contract, which neither party can vary, but the owner is entitled, at any time before his offer has been definitely accepted, to add any new terms to his proposal. If these be refused, the treaty is at an end.

The time for paying the deposit may be made an essential term for entering into a contract for sale of an estate.

Pltf.'s solr. wrote to deft.'s agent that he was instructed to make him an offer of £25,000 for the purchase of his estate. Deft.'s agent wrote, in answer, that he was authorised to accept the offer, "subject to the terms of a contract being arranged" between the two solrs.:—Held: this was not a concluded contract.—HONEYMAN v. MARRYAT (1855), 21 Beav. 14; 25 L. T. O. S. 170; 1 Jur. N. S. 857; 3 W. R. 502; 52 E. R. 763; affd. (1857), 6 H. L. Cas. 112, H. L.

Annotations:—Apld. Rossiter v. Miller (1877), 5 Ch. D. 648. (See 3 App. Cas. 1124.) Refd. Chinnock v. Ely (1864), 11 L. T. 536; Rossiter v. Miller (1878), 26 W. R. 865.

11. — Necessity for formal notice—Offeree aware of withdrawal.—(1) An offer in writing for the sale of real estate, giving time for the acceptance of the offer, cannot be converted into a binding contract, if at any time before acceptance the person to whom the offer is made becomes aware of its withdrawal, although formal notice of such withdrawal may not be given to him.

(2) If a man who makes an offer dies, the offer cannot be accepted after he is dead (MELLISH, L.J.).—DICKINSON v. DODDS (1876), 2 Ch. D. 463; 45 L. J. Ch. 777; 34 L. T. 607; 40 J. P. 532; 24 W. R. 594, C. A.

Annotations:—Distd. Bransom v. Stannard (1879), 41 L. T. 434; Henthorn v. Fraser, [1892] 2 Ch. 27. Refd. Bristol, Cardiff & Swansea Aerated Bread Co. v. Maggs (1890), 44 Ch. D. 616. Mentd. Reichel v. Oxford (Bp.) (1887), 35 Ch. D. 48.

12. ——Where an offer is made under such circumstances that it must have been within the contemplation of the parties that, according to the ordinary usages of mankind, the post might be used as a means of communicating the acceptance, the acceptance is complete as soon as it is posted; but this doctrine does not apply to the revocation or modification of an offer.

Defts. handed to pltf., at their office in Liverpool, an offer in writing to sell him certain real property in Birkenhead, where he resided. On the following day pltf.'s solr. wrote by his direction accepting the offer. After the letter was posted, but before it reached its destination, pltf. received through the post a withdrawal of the offer:—Held: the acceptance was complete before the offer was withdrawn.—HENTHORN v. FRASER, [1892] 2 Ch. 27; 61 L. J. Ch. 373; 66 L. T. 439; 40 W. R. 433; 8 T. L. R. 459; 36 Sol. Jo. 380, C. A.

13. — Revocation by letter—Must reach offeree before letter of acceptance posted.—HENTHORN v. FRASER, No. 12, ante.

14. — Agreement for acceptance within specified period.—(1) Deft. having offered to purchase a house & to give pltf. six weeks for a definite answer—Held: before the offer was accepted, deft. might retract it at any time during the six weeks.

(2) Deft. offered to purchase a house upon certain terms, "possession to be given on or before July 25"; pltf. agreed to the terms, & said he would give possession on Aug. 1:—Held: no acceptance of deft.'s offer.—ROUTLEDGE v. GRANT (1828), 4 Bing. 653; 3 C. & P. 267; 1 Moo. & P. 717; 6 L. J. O. S. C. P. 166; 130 E. R. 920.

was no completed agreement.—LARKIN v. GARDINER (1895), 27 O. R. 125.—CAN.

20. Necessity for—To constitute agreement.]—Where a letter contains the entire terms of an agreement for the purchase of lands, it is not necessary for pltf. to prove that he accepted the terms. If it require pltf. to supply a term in the agreement, there must be a special acceptance in writing supplying that term, in order to take the case out of Stat. Frauds.—BOYS v. 21. ———.]—HARVEY v. FACEY, No. 1, ante.

22. Nature of—Must be unqualified.]—In order to constitute an agreement by letters, the answer to the written proposal must be a simple acceptance of the terms proposed, without the introduction of any new or different term.—HOLLAND v. EYRE (1825), 2 Sim. & St. 194; 57 E. R. 319.

Pltf. wrote to B. within that time, accepting the offer, but B did not communicate the acceptance to deft. until long after:—Held: there was a valid contract, which was not destroyed by the neglect of B. to communicate the acceptance to deft.—WRIGHT v. BIGG (1852), 15 Beav. 592; 51 E. R. 668.

B. Conditional Acceptance.

See, generally, CONTRACT, Vol. XII., pp. 62, 72-75, 83-89, Nos. 353-358, 415-433, 490-546.

27. Acceptance adding new terms—Offer to purchase—Expression of hope by vendor to give possession on specified day.]—(1) A proposal by a purchaser to take the remainder of a lease was answered by a letter, which, after acceding to the proposal, added, "We hope to give you possession at half-quarter day":—Held: the addition did not introduce a new term, but the acceptance was unconditional.

(2) Semble: where the purchaser, after transmission to him of the original lease, prepares a draft assignment & makes various objections as to repairs & other matters, but does not require production of the landlord's title he will be considered to have waived its production.—CLIVE v. a contract in a correspondence & not in one particular note or memorandum formally signed, the whole of that which has passed between the parties must be taken into consideration. Applying this rule, though the first two letters of a correspondence seemed to constitute a complete contract, the House, upon the whole of what had passed in letters & conversation, came to the conclusion that no concluded & complete contract has been established.

(2) I am disposed rather to look upon the words ["subject to the title being approved by our solr."] as meaning nothing more than a guard against it being supposed that the title was to be accepted without investigation, as meaning in fact the title must be investigated & approved of in the usual way, which would be by the solr. of the purchaser (LORD CAIRNS, C.).—*HUSSEY v. 29. — Purchaser requiring restriction against carrying on similar business.—An offer to sell property may be withdrawn at any time before acceptance, even though a period is stated during which the offer is to remain open.

M., a baker, on May 29, 1889, wrote to G., a director of an Aerated Bread co., the following letter:—"I beg to submit to you the following conditions for disposal of my business carried on at 15 Duke Street, Cardiff. Lease & goodwill, £450, lease from Sept. 29, 1888, for fourteen years. All fixtures, fittings, utensils, etc., stock-in-trade, connected with the premises to be taken at valuation. Yours truly, R.M. This offer to hold good for ten days." On June 1, 1889, G. replied: "I accept your offer for shop & lease, etc. 15 Duke Street, Cardiff. Yours truly, J.G., for B., C. & S. Aerated Bread co. Mr. R. M." M.'s solr. then sent G. a formal memorandum of agreement comprising several terms not expressed in the two letters. The co.'s solrs. added a clause restricting M. from carrying on a similar business within certain limits. A correspondence then followed between the solrs. for the co. & for M. respecting the terms of the memorandum, & on June 7, 1889, M.'s solr. wrote withdrawing the offer. In an action by the co. against M. for specific performance of the contract alleged to be constituted by the two original letters:—Held: although those two letters would, if nothing else had taken place, have been sufficient evidence of a complete agreement, yet the co. had themselves shown that the agreement was not complete by stipulating afterwards for an important additional term, namely, the restriction on M.'s carrying on business, which kept the whole matter of purchase & sale in a state of negotiation only; & M. was therefore at liberty to put an end to the negotiations by withdrawing his offer, though within the ten days mentioned in his letter.—BRISTOL, CARDIFF & SWANSEA AERATED BREAD CO. v. MAGGS (1890), 44 Ch. D. 616; 59 L. J. Ch. 472; 62 L. T. 416; 38 W. R. 393; 6 T. L. R. 227.

30. — Vendor fixing time for completion.—The agent for an intending purchaser of property having made an offer for it received in reply a letter from the vendor's agent accepting the offer & fixing a time for signing the contract. The purchaser's agent not having attended within the time named, the vendor refused to complete:—Held: the contract was complete, for the naming of a time for signing a contract did not constitute a condition of the acceptance.—BRANSOM v. STANNARD (1879), 41 L. T. 434; 28 W. R. 180.

31. — —.—It is said, however, that the agreement is silent as to the date for completion. It is the first time I have heard that a contract is not complete, so as to satisfy Stat. Frauds, unless the date fixed for completion is prescribed. It is part of the common law applicable to cases of this kind that the fixing of the date for completion is a matter which arises after the title has been accepted, or rather after the inquiry as to title. Then it is said there is no stipulation as to the payment of a deposit. Again I say I have never heard that there may not be a perfectly good contract satisfying the provisions of Stat. Frauds although there is no provision for payment by instalments. Then it is said that pltf. would have liked to have a deposit. I daresay he would, but that is quite a different matter. Mere arrangements which in the ordinary course of business are left to the legal advisers to settle, such as the date for completion, are subsequent matters which do not prevent the two letters constituting a concluded agreement (COZENS-HARDY, M.R.).—*PERRY v. Frauds.—MORRELL v. STUDD & MILLINGTON, [1913] 2 Ch. 648; 83 L. J. Ch. 114; 109 L. T. 628; 58 Sol. Jo. 12.

the sale of the lease of a lodging-house:—"We have much pleasure in forwarding for your approval particulars, inclosed were particulars of two houses, one 22 Belgrave Road, premium 250 guineas, rent £80, term about sixteen years, certain fixtures & planned furniture at a valuation." Deft. replied "I have decided on taking 22 Belgrave Road, & have spoken to my private agent, Mr. C. of, etc., who will arrange matters with you if you will put yourselves in communication with him. I leave town this afternoon, so if you have occasion to write to me please address as before to Cirencester":—Held: deft.'s reply was not a sufficient acceptance of the terms proposed in pltf.'s agent's letter so as to constitute a complete binding agreement.—STANLEY v. DOWDESWELL (1874), L. R. 10 C. P. 102; 39 J. P. 393; 23 W. R. 389.

SECT. 3.—CONSENSUS BETWEEN PARTIES.

See, generally, CONTRACT, Vol. XII., pp. 90–92, Nos. 555–565.

35. General rule.—(1) An agreement for the sale of lands, which shows on the face of it that the parties are not agreed as to the terms of the contract between them, & as to commencement of the title, does not express the intention of the parties with such certainty that a ct. of equity will enforce performance of it.

(2) Where an offer to sell lands is made by one party, & not accepted by the other within two months, the party making the offer may withdraw it at his discretion.—RUMMENS v. ROBINS (1865), 3 De G. J. & Sm. 88; 14 L. T. 717; 11 Jur. N. S. 631; 13 W. R. 979; 46 E. R. 571, L. J.

36. —[Deft. instructed her solrs. to sell her house for £10,000, subject to the conditions under which she had purchased it, & the solrs. employed a house agent to sell the house, with directions that the contract of sale was to be prepared by them. With a knowledge of these circumstances, pltf. offered to purchase the house for the sum named. Deft.'s solrs. then wrote to the purchaser, informing him, that the draft contract was being prepared, & would be forwarded to pltf. for approval:—Held: (1) this letter, coupled with the previous negotiations, did not amount to a complete sale, even if it did, deft.'s solrs. had only a limited authority, & she was not bound to complete the contract.

(2) As soon as the fact is established of the final mutual consent of the parties to certain terms, & those terms are evidenced by writing duly signed, there exist all the materials necessary to make a legally binding contract. But if to a proposal or offer an assent is given subject to a provision as to a contract, then the stipulation as to a contract is a term of the assent, & there is no agreement independent of that stipulation (LORD WESTBURY, C.).—CHINNOCK v. 38. —[—The ct. will not order the specific performance of an agreement for the sale & purchase of land, the terms of which are ambiguous & understood in different senses by the contracting parties, & where the price to be paid is uncertain not only in value but in nature and character.

Resp. agreed to sell a farm for shares in a syndicate formed to "develop" a mining property. He declined to carry out the agreement on the ground that it was a necessary implication of the agreement that the syndicate should be equipped with a reasonable working capital. The parties were not agreed as to what would constitute such a capital, or as to the meaning of the word "develop":—Held: no such implication could be imported into the contract, & it was too ambiguous to be specifically enforced.—DOUGLAS v. BAYNES, [1908] A. C. 477; 78 L. J. P. C. 13; 99 L. T. 599; 24 T. L. R. 896, P. C.

39. —[—A contract by a rector for the sale of the rectory house & glebe land belonging thereto for £4,500 was pleaded as concluded in three specified letters. Before this the negotiations for the sale between the rector & his agent & the purchaser had been conducted at interviews & by letters on the footing that 3 acres of the glebe land should be reserved for the erection of a new rectory, & that certain fixtures should be taken by the purchaser. In defence to an action by the vendor for specific performance the purchaser pleaded that there was no concluded agreement, & if there were there was no memorandum of it in writing to satisfy Stat. Frauds. Pltf.'s counsel waived the reservations in the vendor's favour, & was willing to convey the rectory house & all the glebe on payment of £4,500:—Held: an agreement such as the vendor now asserted to be subsisting had never been contemplated by the parties, & was not the subject of the present action, which accordingly failed.—ALLSOPP v. ORCHARD, [1923] 1 Ch. 323; 92 L. J. Ch. 257; 128 L. T. 823; 67 Sol. Jo. 312.

PART I. SECT. 3.

1. Material difference in subject-matter of sale—Land subject to right of way.]—Where purchaser of a house had no knowledge of a right of way, & the agreement for same made no mention of it:—Held: there was an honest mistake, but the parties were never ad idem for vendors never intended to sell save subject to the right; the right of way made the subject-matter materially different, & purchaser had the right to refuse to accept something other than he thought he was purchasing & for which the contract called.—FESSERTON v. WILKINSON (1914), 26 O. W. R. 419; 6 O. W. N. 347; 17 D. L. R. 858.—CAN.

in a contract of sale. A contract therefore that does not settle the price is valid & complete only when & if the party, to whom it is referred, shall fix it; & is otherwise totally inoperative.

The price is of the essence of a contract of sale (GRANT, M.R.).

The ct., however, has never gone the length of compelling a party to buy or sell the whole subject of his agreement at a price that he has never fixed & that was never fixed in any mode, to which he has given his consent (GRANT, M.R.).

The construction of the contract, requiring the delivery of the award in writing to each party, being, that, though the consequential acts, executing the conveyances, etc., might be done by representatives, it was with reference to the terms, to be fixed by the award, personal to the parties; one of whom died before it.—BLUNDELL v. 47. ———.]—A landowner, through whose land a railway co. proposed to pass, agreed in May, 1864, to withdraw his opposition to their bill on the terms that the co. would vary the course of their line & make certain bridges, works, & approaches. The co. gave a notice to treat, & on Mar. 20, 1867, they went into possession. On May 27, a further agreement was come to that the co. should pay £2,250 for purchase-money & compensation, & should construct the bridges askew according to an agreed plan. The co. constructed the line as agreed upon, but did not complete the works, nor pay the purchase-money, nor the interest, though completion of the works was demanded in July, 1868, & payment of interest in Dec. 1868. On Feb. 6, 1869, a substituted agreement was made between the landowner & the co., whereby it was agreed that an estimate should be made by the co.'s engineer of the cost of completing the road, & submitted to A., the landowner's agent, "for approval; in case of difference, the amount to be determined by B."; the amount, "when agreed or determined," to be paid to the landowner, "in discharge of all obligations" as to the road; & "the purchase to be completed forthwith." In Dec. 1871, A. died; & in May, 1872, the co., for the first time, sent in an estimate for the cost of completing the road. The purchase had not been completed, & neither the purchase-money nor any interest had been paid. B. was living:—Held: the submission of the estimate to A. for approval was of the essence of the agreement of Feb. 6, 1869; & inasmuch as by his death the agreement was incapable of being performed in the manner & form therein specified, the ct. could not enforce performance of it.—FIRTH v. MIDLAND Ry. Co. (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 100; 44 L. J. Ch. 313; 32 L. T. 219; 23 W. R. 509.

B. gave notice of his intention to retire; whereupon A. gave notice of his intention to repurchase; & two valuers were appointed; but after the appointment B. refused to allow his valuer to proceed with the valuation:—Held: there was no contract between the parties which the ct. could specifically enforce.—VICKERS v. See, now, Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 40.

55. Agreement to share purchase.]—A. & B. being severally in treaty to purchase a house & toft of land of S. they agree by parol, that A. shall desist, & that B. shall purchase, & let A. have part of the ground, which he wanted, at a proportionable price. B. purchases, & refuses to perform the agreement. This agreement is within the provision of Stat. Frauds.—LAMAS v. BAYLY (1708), 2 Vern. 627; 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 22; 23 E. R. 1011, L. C.

57. Sale of mortgaged estate—After foreclosure decree.]—Bill to carry into execution on a parol agreement between solrs., that there should be a decree of foreclosure, that the estate should be sold, the mtgee. paid her principal & interest, & the remainder to the mtgor., dismissed at the Rolls, as within Stat. Frauds, on appeal evidence of the agreement read de bene esse, but the decree affirmed.—COX v. PEELE (1788), 2 Bro. C. C. 334; 29 E. R. 186, L. C.

58. Agreement by tenant for payment to landlord—For consent to assignment of lease.]—A tenant having agreed with his landlady, that if she would accept another for her tenant in his place, he being restrained from assigning the lease without her consent, he would pay her £40 out of £100 which he was to receive for the good will, if her consent were obtained; & having received the £100 from the new tenant, who was cognisant of this agreement; is liable to the landlady in an action for money had & received for her use; the consideration being executed, & therefore the case being taken out of Stat. Frauds, as a contract for an interest in land.—GRIFFITH v. YOUNG (1810), 12 East, 513; 104 E. R. 201.

u. Building resting on stone pillars.]—Action to recover the price of a certain building, plea that the contract of sale was not in writing signed by the deft. Pltf. gave in evidence that the building in question was erected on land to which neither of the parties claimed title, & that it rested on stone lawfully authorised, does not amount to such a substitution of a new agreement in the place of the old contract as to operate as a bar to an action at the suit of a creditor who has signed it, it being a contract "for an interest in or concerning lands, tenements, or hereditaments," within Stat. Frauds.—ALCHIN v. HOPKINS (1834), 1 Bing. N. C. 99; 4 Moo. & S. 615; 3 L. J. C. P. 272; 131 E. R. 1055.

60. Sale of business premises & stock.—In consideration that A., who was in the possession & occupation of premises wherein he carried on the business of a milkman would yield up the possession & occupation of the premises to B., & permit him thenceforth to occupy the same, & would assign over to B. all his property in the stock & plant, & deliver the same to B., the latter promised to pay A. a certain sum:—Held: this was a contract for an interest in or concerning lands within Stat. Frauds, s. 4.—SMART v. HARDING (1855), 15 C. B. 652; 3 C. L. R. 351; 24 L. J. C. P. 76; 1 Jur. N. S. 311; 3 W. R. 245; 139 E. R. 581. Annotation.—Reid. Lavery v. Turley (1860), 6 H. & N. 239.

61. Sale of benefit of licence to use premises as slaughterhouse.—Pltf. & deft. agreed by word of mouth that pltf. should pay £37 for the interest & deft. in premises occupied by him as a slaughterhouse & for the fixtures; deft. to return £10 if pltf. were refused a licence to use the premises as a slaughterhouse. The premises & fixtures were transferred to pltf. & deft. received the £37. Subsequently this action was brought to recover £10 on an allegation that the licence to use the premises had been refused to pltf. A non-suit was directed on the ground that the contract was for an interest in land & was void under Stat. Frauds, s. 3:—Held: the contract being executed as far as regarded the land, & the promise sued on relating wholly to money, pltf. might recover, though the contract was not in writing.—GREEN v. SADDINGTON (1857), 7 E. & B. 503; 29 L. T. O. S. 144; 3 Jur. N. S. 717; 5 W. R. 593; 119 E. R. 1333.

62. Sale of benefit of mortgage on land.—Comrs. for a local improvement were incorporated by Act of Parliament, & empowered to borrow money on mtge. of the lands or funds acquired by them by virtue of the Acts or on bond. By a subsequent Act, which provided a form of bond, it was recited "that the comrs. had pursuant to a power in that behalf contained in one of their Acts, executed an indenture dated May 26, 1852, for securing the performance of the condition of certain bonds granted pursuant to a deed of settlement of even date therewith & therein referred to." The form of bond given by the Act contained the following provisos: Provided always that the lands, tenements, money, property & effects of the comrs. acquired & to be acquired under or for the purposes of the Acts, or any of them shall alone be answerable to pay & satisfy the principal sum & interest secured by the above written bond, & that no comr. or other person shall in any case be personally liable to pay the same principal & interest, or any part thereof; provided also, that the above written bond is granted by the comrs. to the intent that it may be entitled to the benefit of an indenture of mtge. dated May 26, 1852, executed by the comrs. under the authority of the above mentioned Acts, & may be subject to the powers & provisions of an indenture of settlement of the same date referred to in the indenture of mortgage:—Held: these bonds conferred upon the holder an interest in land within Stat. Frauds, s. 4.—TOPPIN v. LOMAS (1855), 16 C. B. 145; 24 L. J. C. P. 144; 25 L. T. O. S. 129; 3 W. R. 446; 139 E. R. 711. Annotations.—Distd. Powell v. Jessop (1836), 18 C. B. 336. Apld. 63. Agreement to procure transfer or sale of lease.—Pltf., being desirous of obtaining a transfer of the lease of a public-house from deft., who was a public-house broker, signed an agreement in the following terms: "Mr. H. (pltf.) now informs me he is in possession of £60 cash, & such being the case, I hereby agree to get the lease everything, for such sum of £60 cash." Deft. had no interest in the public-house himself:—Held: the contract required to be in writing under Stat. Frauds, s. 4.—HORSEY v. GRAHAM (1869), L. R. 5 C. P. 9; 39 L. J. C. P. 58; 21 L. T. 530; 18 W. R. 141.

64. Agreement for use of dock.—Defts., a municipal corp., were possessed of a dock of which they allowed the use to ships needing repairs, under certain printed regulations. Pltf. entered into a parol agreement with defts. for the use of the dock, upon the terms of such regulations. By these regulations it was provided that the dock should be "let" to parties requiring the same for the repair of vessels at such rates as the council of the borough should from time to time sanction, & that vessels entered in a book kept by the borough treasurer should be allowed to enter the dock, as far as possible, according to the order of entry in the book. The regulations contained provisions that defts. should be entitled to detain the vessel in the dock until the dockage was paid, that the corp., foreman should open & shut the dock gates, & various other provisions tending to show that defts. intended to retain possession of & control over the dock while in use by vessels. Defts. did not admit pltf.'s vessel into the dock in her turn. In an action for breach of contract by pltf. against defts.:—Held: the contract was not for an interest in land within Stat. Frauds, s. 4, & therefore need not be in writing.—WELLS v.

pillars, which pltf. built:—Held: insufficient to give the building the legal character of a chattel, & therefore the contract was void under the third clause of Stat. Frauds. Had pltf. showed that the building rested on the pillars solely by its own weight, without being affixed to the pillars or connected with the soil, the case would still have been within Stat. Frauds, s. 4.—McKENZIE v. McDONALD (1869), 8 N. S. R. (2 G. & O.) 11.—CAN.

There was no agreement in writing, & the value of the fixtures was above £10. An action having been brought for the price:—Held: the sale was not within Stat. Frauds, s. 4, as the sale of an interest in land, nor within s. 17 as the sale of goods & chattels; & the action was therefore maintainable.—LEE v. GASKELL (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 700; 45 L. J. Q. 67. —.]—Such a contract cannot be properly described as a contract for the sale of goods or chattels within Stat. Frauds, s. 17; nor could it be correctly described as "a contract or sale of an interest concerning lands," within the meaning of sect. 4 of that statute; for tenant's removable fixtures while annexed to the freehold are not goods & chattels, & the right to sever & remove them from the freehold to which they are attached, does not give the tenant an interest in the freehold itself (HANKINS, J.).—THOMAS v. JENNINGS (1896), 66 L. J. Q. B. 5; 75 L. T. 274; 45 W. R. 93; 12 T. L. R. 637; 40 Sol. Jo. 731.

68. Agreement to charge rent—In consideration of loan.]—A customer, in July, borrowed £200 from his bankers upon the terms of a verbal agreement that the loan should be repaid out of the rent of a farm which would become due to him at Michaelmas. The money was advanced by the bankers, & the customer then gave them a letter addressed by him to the tenant of the farm, by which he authorised & requested the tenant, when his Michaelmas rent became due, to pay £200 to the bankers. The letter contained no reference to the loan, & did not show that any consideration had been given for the authority. The bankers sent the letter to the tenant. The customer was adjudicated a bkpt. upon an act of bkpcy. committed in Aug.:—Held: as the rent was an interest in land, the agreement was one which, by Stat. Frauds, s. 4, could not be proved by parol evidence, & therefore the letter could alone be looked at.

The real arrangement between bkpt. & the bankers was a verbal one, he agreeing, in consideration of an advance by them, to charge in their favour rent which was not then due. That is a contract charging an interest in land, & Stat.

69. Option to purchase—Must be made in writing.]—In a conveyance of a plot of land, reserving the mines under it to the vendor, there was a covenant by the vendor with the purchaser that, in case the vendor, his heirs or assigns, should at any time thereafter sell, or agree to sell, to any person the mines under the same adjoining lands belonging to him, he, his heirs or assigns, would at the same time offer to the purchaser of the plot of land, his heirs or assigns, the mines under that plot, & give him & them the refusal of the same for one month from the time such offer should be made, at the same price per acre as the vendor, his heirs or assigns, should have agreed to sell the adjoining mines; & if the purchaser, his heirs or assigns, should accept such offer, & within such month agree to purchase the mines so offered, at the price at which they should be offered, the vendor, his heirs or assigns, should convey the same to the purchaser, his heirs or assigns:—Held: it was necessary that the offer should be made in writing, & consequently the non-acceptance within a month of a parol offer made by the devisees of the vendor did not deprive the assigns of the purchaser of their rights under the covenant.—*BIRMINGHAM CANAL CO. v. 71. Sale of building materials.]—A contract for the sale of "the building materials" of a house, with a condition that all materials were to be taken down & cleared off the ground within two months, "after which date any materials then not cleared will be deemed a trespass & become forfeited, & the purchaser's right of access to the ground shall absolutely cease," is a contract for the sale of an interest in or concerning land within Stat. Frauds, s. 4, & accordingly, from the absence of any sufficient description in the contract of the vendor, avoided.—LAVERY v. PURSELL (1888), 39 Ch. D. 508; 57 L. J. Ch. 570; 58 L. T. 846; 37 W. the right to another to cut the hay which is to grow thereon is the sale of an interest in land.—KIRK v. FORD (Sask.), [1920] 3 W. W. R. 91; 53 D. L. R. 644.—CAN.

p. Independent contract relating to previous purchase of land—Not in itself concerning land.]—Where an agreement for the purchase of lands is followed by an independent contract assign their respective shares to him, & B. signed & gave to G. the following memorandum: "Rough draft. Memorandum from G., S., & B. This is to record that in consideration of G. or his exors. paying B., or his assigns the sum of £100 on Jan. 1, 1890, & the sum of £100 on every Jan. 1 for the nine succeeding years, B. agrees to withdraw from the firm of G., S. & B." The parties intended that a more formal document should be prepared & signed by them respectively.

In an action by G. to enforce specific performance of the above agreement:—Held: although a partnership in land may be proved by parol evidence, yet an agreement by one of the partners to retire & to assign his share in the partnership assets, is an agreement to assign an interest in land & must be evidenced by a sufficient memorandum within Stat. Frauds.

(2) It is an entirely different thing to say that because the agreement is silent as regards the time, which the parties have not thought fit expressly to mention, yet the time shall be regarded as such an essential term that the contract is not good without its being mentioned (KEKEWICH, J.).—*GRAY v. 73. Sale of slag on land.—In a counterclaim by purchasers against a vendor it appeared that the vendor was the lessee of certain land part of which was composed of slag & cinders. On adjoining lands occupied by other persons were two disused cinder tips. The vendor had obtained from these persons licences to remove from the tips slag & cinders adhering to & forming part of their lands. He then agreed with the purchasers to sell to them all the slag on the demised premises & from the tips on the lands adjoining, or so much thereof as the purchasers should desire to remove, & for that purpose to give the purchasers access to the demised premises & the cinder tips on the adjoining lands. After certain slag had been removed by the purchasers & sold at a profit the lessor & licensors of the vendor intervened & prevented the further removal of slag by the purchasers.

The purchasers sued for damages for the vendor's default in delivering or giving access to the slag sold:—Held: the agreement was a contract to grant an interest in land, & as the vendor's failure to perform his contract was due solely to a defect in his title, the purchasers could not recover any damages for the loss of their bargain.—MORGAN & RUSSELL & SONS, [1909] 1 K. Writing.]—See Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 40.

79. Letter.]—The extrix. of a lessee agreed to sell to A. the residue of her term, except a day, & the fixtures on the premises for £400. This agreement was entered into by the extrix. without advice & there was no written memorandum of it except a letter written by the extrix. to her own solr. a few hours afterwards.

Qu.: whether the letter to the solr. was a sufficient memorandum in writing within Stat. Frauds.—GOODWIN v. FIELDING (1853), 4 De G. M. & G. 90; 1 W. R. 343; 43 E. R. 441, L. J.J.

80. ———.]—A. entered into a treaty with B.'s agent for the purchase of leasehold premises, fixtures & furniture, & in going over the premises, pointed out the articles of furniture which he would take at a valuation, of which the agent made a list. No agreement was executed or signed, but in the letter which passed between A. & the agent, A. consented to take the lease, & added, "the other articles which you included in your list, I will also take at a valuation":—Held: this was a sufficient note in writing, signed by the party, to take the case out of Stat. Frauds; parol evidence was admissible to show who was the principal; as deft. disputed the contract, the ct. would only allow the common reference as to title, without the inquiry when a good title could be shown.—MORRIS v. After long consideration, I very reluctantly undertake to settle it within two months, if that will be satisfactory to your client":—Held: this expressed a promise conditional on pltf.'s accepting the offer, & was therefore a memorandum of a contract in consideration that pltf. would accept the offer, sufficiently showing the consideration to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 4.—POWERS v. FOWLER (1855), 4 E. & B. 511; 24 L. T. O. S. 212; 3 W. R. 166; 119 E. R. 187; on appeal, 4 E. & B. 519, n., Ex. Ch.*

84. ——— Containing repudiation of contract.]—It is not sufficient in order to constitute a memorandum of a contract for the sale of land within Statute of Frauds, s. 4, that the name of the purchaser should merely be placed upon the memorandum without any description. It must appear from the memorandum that the name was that of the purchaser of the land.

Letters signed by the highest bidder at the auction, repudiating his liability, but recapitulating the terms of the bargain, & referring to the particulars of sale which with the conditions formed one document, may, although the conditions are not specifically referred to, constitute a sufficient memorandum to satisfy Stat. Frauds.—DEWAR v. MINTOFT, [1912] 2 K. B. 373; 81 L. J. K. B. 885; 106 L. T. 763; 28 T. L. R. 324.

91. General rule.—(1) Where a contract in writing, or note, exists, which binds one party to a contract, under Stat. Frauds, any subsequent note in writing, signed by the other, is sufficient to bind him, provided it either contains in itself the terms of the contract, or refers to any writing which contains them. The purchaser of lands by auction signed a memorandum of the contract, indorsed on the particulars & conditions of sale, & referring to them. Afterwards he wrote to the vendor, complaining of a defect in the title, referring to the contract expressly, & renouncing it. The vendor wrote & signed several letters mentioning the property sold, the names of the parties, & some of the conditions of sale, insisting on one of them as curing the defect, & demanding the execution of the contract:—Held: these letters might be connected with the particulars & conditions of sale, so as to constitute a memorandum in writing, binding the vendor under Stat. Frauds, although neither the original conditions & particulars, nor the memorandum signed by the purchaser, mentioned, or were signed by, the vendor.

(2) On a sale of a leasehold interest of lands, described in the particulars as held for a term of twenty-three years, at a rent of £55 & as comprising a yard, one of the conditions was, that if any mistake should be made in the description of the property, or any other error whatever should appear in the particulars of the estate, such mistake or error should not annul or vitiate the sale, but a compensation should be made, to be settled by arbn. The yard was not, in fact, comprehended in the property held for the term at £55, but was held by the vendor from year to year, at an additional rent. It was essential to the enjoyment of the property leased for the twenty-three years. It did not appear that the vendor knew of the defect:—Held: this defect avoided the sale, & was not a mistake to be compensated for under the above condition; although, after the day named in the conditions for completing the purchase, & before action brought by the vendee, the vendor procured a lease of the yard for the term to the vendee, & offered it to him.—DOBELL v. HUTCHINSON (1835), 3 Ad. & El. 355; 1 Har. & W. 394; 5 Nev. & M. K. B. 251; 4 L. J. K. B. 201; 111 E. R. 448.

f. Letter referring to printed conditions of sale.—A signed agreement expressed that the subscribers had purchased at auction the lot of land set opposite to their names respectively, according to the terms of sale, made known at the time of sale, & they agreed to take the deed, bond, or agreement, or lease, as the case might be, to each of them individually, on condition of their having made the payments according to the conditions of sale. The conditions of sale, thus referred to, had been printed & distributed in hand-bills & were read to the purchasers at the auction:—Held: the conditions of sale were sufficiently referred to by, & incorporated with, the signed agreement, so as to constitute a binding contract in writing, within Stat. Frauds.—DALTON v. MCBRIDE (1859), 7 Gr. 288.—CAN.

93. —[.]—Two or more documents which do not refer to each other, but do refer to the same parol contract, & which, when taken together, contain all the terms of the parol contract, may together constitute a sufficient memorandum within the Stat. Frauds. On Sept. 22, 1882, deft. verbally agreed with pltf. to sell her share in certain property for £200, & signed & gave to him the following receipt: "Sept. 22, 1882. Received of J. S. one pound of my share in the Barrett's Grove property the sum of two hundred pounds." No time was fixed for completion, & no abstract was delivered, & on Mar. 19, 1883, deft. wrote to pltf.: "Mr. S., Sir,—If the balance of £199 on account of the purchase of my share of the property be not paid on or before the 22nd instant I shall consider the agreement, made Sept. 22, 1882, not any longer binding":—Held: (1) the word "balance" in the letter sufficiently referred to the receipt to enable the two documents to be read together, & that they constituted a sufficient memorandum within Stat. Frauds, s. 4; (2) even if the word "balance" was not sufficient to connect the two documents, yet as they both referred to the same parol contract, all the terms of which were contained in one or other of them, they could be read together, & together constituted a good memorandum within Stat. Frauds.—STUDDS v. WATSON (1884), 28 Ch. D. 305; 54 L. J. Ch. 626; 52 L. T. 129; 33 W. R. 118; 1 T. L. R. 83.

94. Sale by auction—Entry in auctioneer's sales ledger—No reference to conditions of sale.—

At a sale by auction subject to conditions, the auctioneer entered in his sale book the names of the vendor & purchaser, the subject-matter of the sale, & the amount of the purchase-money, but omitted, in the entry, to embody or make any reference to the conditions of sale. There was no other memorandum or contract in writing:—Held: there was no sufficient contract in writing within Stat. Frauds, & specific performance refused as against the purchaser.—RISHTON v. WHATMORE (1878), 8 Ch. D. 467; 47 L. J. Ch. 629; 26 W. R. 827.

97. Letters of vendor & purchaser to vendor's agent.—(1) A vendor & a purchaser being in treaty for the sale & purchase of an estate, the vendor wrote to his solr., stating that the purchaser had agreed to purchase his estate for £80,000, & requested him to settle an agreement on that basis for them to sign, adding that he had given to the purchaser a copy of this letter not signed, as a memorandum. The purchaser subsequently wrote to the vendor's solr., inquiring when he would forward to him the draft of the agreement relative to the purchase he had concluded with the vendor for his estate in that county. Prior to the execution of the conveyances the purchaser made his will, by which he devised the subject-matter of the treaty to trustees upon certain trusts:—Held: at the date of his will, the purchaser had a devisable interest in the estate.

(2) A letter, signed by the purchaser, not containing the terms of the contract, but, on a fair view of the evidence, referring, though not in terms, to a memorandum containing them:—Held: sufficient within the Stat. Frauds.—MORGAN v. HOLFORD (1852), 1 Sm. & G. 101; 20 L. T. O. S. 177; 17 Jur. 225; 1 W. R. 101; 65 E. R. 45.

Semble. a telegram, if properly identified, equivalent to a letter.—COUPLAND v. ARROWSMITH (1868), 18 L. T. 755.

100. Agreement for sale of property—Memorandum indorsed on plan.—Deft. agreed to purchase a wharf, which was described as abutting on a towing path, & lately in the occupation of A. B. The contract did not refer to any plan, but at time of signing the agreement, a memorandum referring to the agreement for sale was written on a plan of the property, which showed that a strip of the wharf was to be taken off & added to the towing path:—Held: this plan was made part of the agreement, so as to satisfy Stat. Frauds; & it controlled the description in the agreement. Decree for specific performance affirmed with costs.—NENE VALLEY DRAINAGE COMRS. v. DUNKLEY (1876), 4 Ch. D. 1; 41 J. P. 101, C. A.

n. Sale by auction—Entry in auctioneer's sales ledger—Particulars of sale entered in book before sale.—On a sale of lands by public auction, the note in the auctioneer's book contained particulars taken from the conditions of sale, the biddings, a statement that the lands were sold to pltf. for £2,100, & the auctioneer's signature. The particulars were filled in before the sale; the rest of the note on the following morning:—Held: the auctioneer's note sufficiently referred to the conditions of sale to constitute with the latter a good memorandum within Stat. Frauds.—M'MEIKIN v. STEVENSON, [1917] 1 I. R. 348.—IR.

p. — Letter of repudiation by vendor offering to return purchase-money.—In an action for specific performance against a vendor, the evidence to satisfy Stat. Frauds consisted of a receipt signed by pltf. for $50. "to apply on equity on Canadian Pacific Ry. land," describing it, "at $5.50 per acre," & a letter from the vendor offering to return the $50 & referring to the sale as having been "declared off long before":—Held: the letter from deft. could be used with the receipt to satisfy the statute, although it repudiated the sale.—BERRY v. SCOTT (1905), 3 W. L. R. 84; 4 W. L. R. 282; 6 Terr. L. R. 369.—CAN.

of pltf. & deft. met on the field; deft. wished to have a piece in one of the angles, & pltf. stepped so as to mark out where a base line would cut off half an acre. Some days afterwards the same pltf. wrote to deft. asking her to let them have a letter agreeing to purchase the half acre she had selected for £350. She wrote back, not expressly referring to the other letter, that she was willing to take half an acre of the land as agreed upon for £350. Pltfs. did not obtain a contract with the owner of the land for the purchase until Nov. 4, which was three months afterwards. On Nov. 13 deft. threatened to withdraw, & on Nov. 20 her solrs. wrote that she did withdraw from the contract:—Held: (1) the second letter contained a sufficient reference to the first; & the two letters formed a valid contract within the Stat. Frauds; (2) though the two pltfs. were the purchasers of the land, & the letters forming the contract passed between deft. & one only of pltfs., he must under the circumstances be considered as agent for the other as well.—WYLSON v. DUNN (1887), 34 Ch. D. 569; 56 L. J. Ch. 855; 56 L. T. 192; 51 J. P. 452; 35 W. R. 405.

104. Receipt—For part payment—Memorandum of agreement by purchaser.—Deft., an estate agent, contracted to sell land to pltf., who paid a deposit. Deft. signed a receipt in his own name for the deposit, & pltf. signed an agreement containing the terms of the purchase. The owner of the land refused to complete the purchase, & pltf. sued deft. for damages for breach of the contract to sell. At the trial the jury found that deft. sold as principal:—Held: deft. was personally liable, & the agreement & receipt taken together formed a sufficient contract to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 4.—LONG v. MILLAR (1879), 4 C. P. D. 450; 48 L. J. Q. B. 596; 41 L. T. 306; 43 J. P. 797; 27 W. R. 720, C. A.

105.— — — — —.]—On Nov. 21, 1918, pltf. paid deft. £10 & received the following receipt:—
“6d. stamp. 21/11/1918.

Received of Mr. Auerbach . . . £10 on account of House being sold for £500 from Mr. M. Nelson Possession to be taken in six weeks after date.

Pltf. alleged & proved that on Nov. 21, 1918, before signing this receipt deft. verbally agreed to sell him his house & residence, Nelson Lodge, for £500, with possession in six weeks, & that the £10 was paid as a deposit on account of the purchase-money. Pltf. claimed specific performance. Deft. relied on Stat. Frauds:—Held: the receipt was a sufficient memorandum of the verbal contract, the date, parties & price being apparent on the face of it, & the actual “house being sold” by deft. to pltf. on that date at that price being readily ascertainable by parol evidence.—AUERBACH v. NELSON, [1919] 2 Ch. 383; 88 L. J. Ch. 493; 122 L. T. 90; 35 T. L. R. 655; 63 Sol. Jo. 683.

106.— — — — — Memorandum by auctioneers—Indorsed on conditions of sale.—A house & premises were put up for sale by auction under conditions of sale which did not contain any description of what was sold, but were so expressed that it could be inferred from them that the subject of sale was real estate. A. S. became the purchaser. After the sale, the auctioneer signed & gave to him the following memorandum at the foot of the conditions: “The property duly sold to A. S., Butcher, Pinxton, & deposit paid at close of sale,” & at the same time signed & gave to him the following receipt: “Pinxton, Mar. 29, 1880. Received of A. S., the sum of £21 as deposit on property purchased at £420 at Sun Inn, Pinxton, on the above date. G. C., owner”:—Held: (1) the receipt, memorandum, & conditions contained a sufficiently definite description of the property sold to enable the ct. to receive parol evidence of what the property consisted, & Stat. Frauds was no defence to an action by the purchaser for specific performance; (2) the receipt alone without the memorandum & conditions was a memorandum sufficient to satisfy the requirements of Stat. Frauds.—SHARDLOW v. COTTERELL (1881), 20 Ch. D. 90; 51 L. J. Ch. 353; 45 L. T. 572; 30 W. R. 143, C. A.

A. Parties.

See, generally, CONTRACT, Vol. XII., pp. 143–145.

111. Necessity for names of parties.—Or sufficient description.]—In order to satisfy the requirements of Stat. Frauds, the note or memorandum of an agreement for the sale of real estate must contain either the names of the contracting parties or such a description of them that there cannot be any fair dispute as to their identity. The term “vendor” is not of itself a sufficient description of one of the contracting parties. Real estate was put up for sale under particulars & conditions of sale which did not disclose the vendor's name, but stated that B. was the auctioneer. The purchaser of one of the lots signed a memorandum acknowledging his purchase; & B. signed at the foot of this memorandum another in these terms, “Confirmed on behalf of the vendor. B.”:—Held: the memorandum did not sufficiently show who the vendor was; & a bill for specific performance of the contract for sale was dismissed.—POTTER v. DUFFIELD (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 4; 43 L. J. Ch. 472; 22 W. R. 585.

112. ———.]—A purchaser undertook, in writing, to buy land at a certain price, & to complete within a certain time; but the vendor was not named in the writing, although there was a reference to a certain firm by name as the vendor's agents, & a provision that “the landlord” should be considered as an outgoing tenant. Subsequently the purchaser wrote a letter to the vendor's agents with reference to the payment of the purchase-money & the execution by “Mr. C. . .” of “the deeds”:—Held: there was no sufficient identification of the vendor in writing in the original document, & the subsequent letter did not so clearly refer to the original document as to supply the deficiency & satisfy the requirements of Stat. Frauds.—COOMBS v. WILKES, [1891]

111 i. Necessity for names of parties.—Or sufficient description.]—A note or memorandum in writing containing an agreement for the sale of land must, to satisfy Stat. Frauds, name both the contracting parties or describe them so that they can be ascertained without extrinsic parol evidence, & it is not sufficient that the agent of the intending purchaser is named.—*MABER v. 115 iii. ———.]—A writing signed by deft. not under seal agreeing to sell a parcel of land for $2,000 on terms stated, & acknowledging the receipt of a cheque for $100 deposit on same, but not mentioning the name of any person as purchaser or containing anything to indicate who the purchaser is, is not a sufficient memorandum in writing to bind deft. under Stat. Frauds, & if the person whose name is signed to the cheque is not acting as the agent of the purchaser in the trans-

114. ———.]—Pltf. was the lessee of vaults in the City of London under a lease granted by the Mayor & Corp. of London & the Mercers' Co. Deft. co. entered into a negotiation for the purchase of the lease. The secretary of the co. wrote to the house agents acting for pltf. a letter in which he said that the directors thereby offered to purchase the vaults for £2,500 cash, & to take over a mtge. for £3,500 on the lease, these terms to include the lease, goodwill, fixtures, etc. The house agents answered as follows, “In reply to your letter of the 7th instant we are now instructed to accept the offer therein contained, & will forward contract as soon as we obtain it from the solr.” Differences subsequently arose respecting the time when possession should be given, & eventually pltf. brought an action against defts. claiming damages for breach of contract:—Held: no binding contract had been entered into, because the name of the vendor had not been disclosed or a sufficient description given so as to satisfy Stat. Frauds; & because the letters mentioned only what was the property to be purchased & the price to be given for it, but left the other necessary terms of the agreement, such as the time when possession was to be given, to be settled by a formal contract to be prepared by a solr. in the ordinary way.—DONNISON v. PEOPLE'S CAFE CO. (1881), 45 L. T. 187, C. A.

What is sufficient description.]—See Sub-sect. 4, A. (b), post.

115. ——— Omission of purchaser's name.]—During parol negotiations for the purchase of an estate, the vendor wrote to the purchaser's solr., proposing that the solr.'s “client” should advance a sum to pay off a mtge. on the property. After further parol negotiations as to the terms, they were agreed upon by parol, & the vendor signed & handed to the purchaser a written statement of the particulars of the property & of the price. On the following day he signed & addressed to the purchaser a letter containing the following passages, “I am about to relet the land at P. for another year, concluding you will agree to it. . . . The Lady Day rents will be mine & the Michaelmas yours”:—Held: the signed statement of particulars was not a sufficient memorandum in writing, the purchaser's name not being mentioned in it, & the defect was not supplied by the correspondence.—SKELTON v. COLE (1857), 1 De G. & J. 587; 44 E. R. 850, L. J.J.

116. ——— Omission of vendor's name.]—On the sale of an estate by auction, the name of the owner did not appear in the particulars, or conditions of sale, & the agreement signed by the

115 iv. ———.]—Where in a memorandum of a contract for the sale of land the name of the broker negotiating the sale appears, but there is no mention of the name of the purchaser, the memorandum is insufficient to satisfy Stat. Frauds.—RATHOM v. CALWELL (1911), 16 B. C. R. 201.—CAN.

118. —.]—The conditions of sale of a piece of land stated that the vendors were trustees, without any further description, nor did their names appear on the particulars, nor on the memorandum of the sale, which was indorsed on the particulars & signed by the purchaser's agent, naming the purchaser, & confirmed by the auctioneers, as agents for the vendors, without naming them. An abstract of the title was delivered to the purchaser, entitled with the vendors' names, & the purchaser's requisitions were headed with the vendors' names:—Held: the contract satisfied the requirements of Stat. Frauds, as the abstract was sufficiently connected with the memorandum of the sale to be referred to in order to cure the defect of the omission of the vendors' names from the memorandum.—BOURDILLON v. COLLINS (1871), 24 L. T. 344; 19 W. R. 556.

120. Offer to agent—Acceptance on behalf of named vendor.]—Where a written offer to purchase land is made to an agent whose name, but not that of his principal, appears in the offer, & the agent accepts on behalf of his principal, naming him, it is sufficiently shown in writing who the contracting parties are to satisfy the requirements of Stat. Frauds.—FILBY v. HOUNSELL, [1896] 2 Ch. 737; 65 L. J. Ch. 852; 75 L. T. 270; 45 W. R. 232; 12 T. L. R. 612; 40 Sol. Jo. 703.

121. Purchaser.]—DEWAR v. MINTOFT, No. 84, ante.

122. — “I” — Receipt for deposit on carbon copy of contract—Purchaser's name in original contract.]—Deft.'s authorised agent signed for him as “vendor” a carbon copy of a typewritten “contract” not containing any purchaser's name, by which “I agree to purchase” premises described at a sum named, to pay a deposit, to complete within a limited time & in default pay interest on the balance of purchase-money, the vendor to show a good title. Pltf. had signed the original of which the carbon was a duplicate, & given a cheque for the deposit, a receipt signed by deft.'s agent being put on the carbon copy. In an action for specific performance:—Held: by incorporating the cheque into the carbon document; or by connecting the carbon with its original; or by identifying the person who paid the deposit with pltf. there was a sufficient memorandum within Stat. Frauds.

Qu.: whether two documents, which did not in terms or by inference refer to one another, but, when placed physically side by side, show obviously that they were produced at the same time & to that extent formed a single document, can be connected for the purpose of constituting a memorandum under Stat. Frauds.—STOKES v. WHICHER, [1920] 1 Ch. 411; 89 L. J. Ch. 198; 123 L. T. 23; 64 Sol. Jo. 292.

123. Vendor—“Proprietor.”]—Upon a sale by auction of real estate in lots, the particulars stated that the sale was by direction of the proprietor; but the name of the vendor did not appear. A memorandum indorsed on a copy of the particulars was signed by the purchaser of one of the lots, & by the auctioneer on behalf of the vendor:—Held: the vendor was sufficiently described, & the memorandum was sufficient to satisfy the requirements of Stat. Frauds; & specific performance of the agreement decreed at the suit of the purchaser.—SALE v. LAMBERT (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 1; 43 L. J. Ch. 470; 22 W. R. 478.

125. ——[—] (1) If, in a contract for sale, the vendor is described simply as "proprietor," "owner," "mortgagee," or the like, the description is sufficient to satisfy the requirements of Stat. Frauds; but not so if he is described as "vendor," or "client" or "friend" of a named agent, or as "solicitor to the vendor," even where the solr. is himself the vendor & is described in the contract as "A. B. solr. to the vendor." Semble: a mere reference in a condition of sale to a conveyance or other document of title relating to the property, the name or description of the vendor not being stated in the condition, is not sufficient to import its contents into the contract so as to satisfy the requirements of Stat. Frauds, even if such conveyance or other document does show who is the vendor. A contract which, under Stat. Frauds, is invalid through not naming or sufficiently describing the vendor, is not rendered valid by the fact that the purchaser knew, at the time he entered into the contract, who the vendor was.

(2) Neither parol evidence nor the actual knowledge of the purchaser who the vendor is can be admitted to cover the original defect in the contract; nor can the contents of a conveyance or other document referred to in the contract be imported into it for the purpose of ascertaining the owner.—JARRETT v. HUNTER (1886), 34 Ch. D. 182; 56 L. J. Ch. 141; 55 L. T. 727; 51 J. P. 165; 35 W. R. 132; 3 T. L. R. 117.

126. — "Company in possession."—An agreement for the sale of real estate did not disclose the names of the vendors, but it appeared therefrom that the vendors were a co. in possession of the property offered for sale, & that they had carried on operations thereon:—Held: the vendors were sufficiently described to satisfy Stat. Frauds.—COMMINS v. SCOTT (1875), L. R. 20 Eq.

128. — "Executors."—The particulars of sale of a leasehold house stated that it was the property of F., deceased, & that the sale was by direction of his exors., not naming them. A memorandum of the sale indorsed on the particulars was signed by the auctioneers as agents "for the vendors." F. was a domiciled Scotsman, & had, by a testamentary instrument in the Scottish form, named seven persons, & the acceptors of them, as exors. Two only accepted office, & confirmation was granted to them subsequently to the contract of sale:—Held: the contract was valid, & specific performance of it decreed at the suit of the exors.—HOOD v. 129. — "On behalf of himself & all persons interested."—A., to whom the owner of a quarry had agreed to grant a lease, agreed "on behalf of himself & all persons interested" to sell "the quarry" to B., & "that the lease agreed to be granted by the lessor should be granted as B. might direct." B. having refused to complete the purchase, A. brought an action for specific performance, & in his statement of claim stated his agreement with the owner of the quarry as well as the memorandum of agreement with B., & alleged that B. was aware of the nature of A.'s interest in the quarry, & had accepted the title. B. demurred on the ground that the memorandum was not sufficient within Stat. Frauds:—Held: the memorandum was sufficient.—MORGAN v. WORTHINGTON (1878), 38 L. T. 443.

130. — "Legal personal representative of A. B."—No person filling such character at date of contract.]—In the conditions of sale the vendor was described as "legal personal representative of A. B." At the date of the contract the vendor was not A. B.'s legal personal representative; there was no person filling that character. But the vendor was the only person in a position to become "legal personal representative." & he subsequently took out letters of administration to A. B.'s estate. The purchaser objected to the title on this ground:—Held: the objection failed; the latent ambiguity being raised by parol evidence could be got rid of by parol evidence, & there was a valid contract.—TOWLE v. TOPHAM (1877), 37 L. T. 308.

The memorandum was signed by pltf. & by C., "as agent for the vendor," & "as auctioneer." There was no further description of who the vendor was. Afterwards deft.'s solrs. duly sent the abstract of title. Pltf.'s solrs. received it & made requisitions, stating that they did so "without prejudice to any question that may arise as to the contract." Ultimately pltf. repudiated the contract on the ground that the memorandum did not disclose the name of the vendor, & brought an action for the return of the deposit. Deft. was always ready to carry out the contract:—Held: (1) pltf.'s conduct in receiving & inquiring into the abstract of title estopped him from denying the validity of the contract; (2) pltf. could not sue for return of the deposit on the ground of failure of consideration, inasmuch as the money was paid under full knowledge of the terms of the memorandum, & deft. was always willing to carry out the contract.

(3) Seemle: the contract was not sufficient to satisfy Stat. Frauds, the vendor not being sufficiently described.—THOMAS v. BROWN (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 714; 45 L. J. Q. B. 811; 35 L. T. 237; 24 W. R. 821.

It was proved that B. had a plot of ground near Church street, which was 113 feet 11 inches long by about 58 feet deep:—Held: the agreement contained a sufficiently definite description of the property to enable the ct. to receive evidence of what the property consisted; the vendor's name was sufficiently stated & Stat. Frauds was no defence to an action for specific performance.—SIDLE v. BOND-CABELL (1885), 2 T. L. R. 44.

The memorandum which was at the foot of the particulars & conditions stated that V. & Son were agents for the "vendor" who was described as "vendor" throughout the conditions. The particulars stated that the sale was by direction of the "owner." The eighth condition, by mistake, stated that the vendor was a "trustee for sale":—Held: although the word "owner" was by itself a sufficient description of the vendor, the subsequent mistake was fatal, & the vendor was not sufficiently designated.—BUTCHER v. The following day, however, his attorney wrote to the vendor's attorney as follows:—"Workington, May 10, 1872. Dear Sir.—I have been instructed by Mr. Baxter to prepare his title to the Railway Hotel & premises at Workington, which he purchased last evening. It has been proposed to my client that he should take possession forthwith, & commence selling the undisposed of stock-in-trade of the late Mrs. Cape, which it is intended to value. My client is not indisposed to do this, if the vendor will consider his taking possession as without prejudice to his right, if it is considered necessary, to object to the title. Let me hear from you hereon at your earliest convenience, & send me the abstract of title & copy conditions when ready. Yours, truly, J. Milburne." On May 17, the auctioneer wrote his name & the date across the stamp upon the conditions of sale, & he went with the vendor's solr. to deft. upon the subject, but deft. then repudiated the purchase on the ground of drunkenness. Upon this the premises were resold at a loss, & the present action was brought to recover the difference & expenses:—Held: the letter of Mr. Milburne was not a memorandum or note in writing sufficient to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 4, because it did not contain the terms of the contract; & because there was no evidence to show any authority on the part of deft. to Mr. Milburne to sign any agreement or memorandum for him. Semle: if an auctioneer has any implied legal authority to bind a vendee upon the sale of real property by signing the contract, he must sign it at the time of the sale & not subsequently.—MATTHEWS v. BAXTER (1873), 28 L. T. 669; 21 W. R. 741.

There was no agreement signed at the time, but S. signed certain receipts for money received from C., & which C. alleged were paid on account of the partnership:—Held: the agreement was for the purchase of land, & was not reduced into writing, & the receipts given were not sufficient to take the agreement out of Stat. Frauds.

Although the ct. has struggled to bring within the description of signed agreements any instrument, however informal, which does in truth disclose what the terms of the contract were, it always requires the terms to be disclosed, at least by reasonable inference.—*CADDICK v. On receipt of this signed by you across the stamp & deposit we will send you copy signed by him." The inclosure was a contract with usual conditions of sale providing for a deposit of 10 per cent., fixing a date for completion, & limiting the period of B.'s title. Three days afterwards B.'s solrs. again wrote A., "Kindly let us know whether we shall send abstract of title to you or to a solr. for you. At the same time perhaps you will send us deposit. In order to define time for delivery of abstract, & for completion, the contract sent you had better perhaps be signed, though the correspondence is a sufficient contract." 161. Exchange of duplicate parts—Unauthorised alteration by vendor's solicitor in document signed by vendor—Subsequent ratification by vendor.—On July 14, 1921, the solrs. of pltf. & deft. attended to exchange duplicate parts of a contract for the sale of two houses by deft. to pltf. & his wife. The part signed by pltf. contained his name only as the purchaser. Without authority deft.'s solr. struck out the name of pltf.'s wife in the part signed by deft., who afterwards ratified his action & instructed him to proceed with the contract. The title was accepted & a draft assignment prepared & approved by deft.'s solr. On July 26, 1921, deft.'s solr. wrote to pltf.'s solr. a letter headed "Sweet to Koenigsblatt"—"Herewith replies to requisition. I understood that vacant possession could be given & the contract was drawn accordingly. The vendors now state that vacant possession cannot be given, & further, that the purchaser does not expect or require it." Dft. refused to complete, & in an action for specific performance he pleaded Stat. Frauds:—Held: the ratification related back to the time when the acts were done, & that on July 14 it was as if deft.'s solr. had in his possession a document with alterations, signed by deft. after they were made, & with authority to hand it over as part of an operative agreement in return for a similar document signed by pltf.; & that Stat. Frauds raised no difficulty, as pltf. was suing on an agreement signed by the parties.—KOENIGSBLATT v. SWEET, [1923] 2 Ch. 314; 92 L. J. Ch. 598; 129 L. T. 659; 39 T. L. R. 576; 67 Sol. Jo. 638, C. 162. Sufficiency of description.—After certain negotiations for a purchase between the agents of the vendor & purchaser, a letter was written to the vendor by his agent, stating that the purchaser had agreed by his agent to purchase the property, which was sufficiently identified, at a certain price. The vendor frequently wrote to his agent in reference to the transaction, such letters being communicated to the purchaser's agent. Drafts were prepared, & signed by the vendor's agent in approval, but the vendor died before the sale was completed:—Held: there was a binding contract within Stat. Frauds, of which the ct. would decree specific performance.

The price being mentioned & the premises identified, under all the circumstances there was no doubt that a binding contract had been entered into (WOOD, V.-C.).—CARPENTER v. CHURCHILL (LORD) (1854), 2 W. R. 364.

163. — [An agreement was in the following words: "A. agrees to pay £625 for the cottage & stable, B. paying the expenses of the lease held by Mr. C. Signed A." :—Held: such an agreement was not sufficient within the Statute of Frauds.

If the parties contract together for the purchase of a house, prima facie the contract is to purchase the fee simple. It may be that the party purchasing may know that the vendor had not the fee simple, & then such a contract might be performed by the purchaser having all the interest of the vendor (KINDERSELEY, V.-C.).—*COX v. The other trustees afterwards refused to concur in the sale. r. —.—A contract in writing for the sale & purchase of land is not a sufficient memorandum under Stat. Frauds if no particular time for payment of the purchase-money is mentioned in the contract, & it contemplates the non-payment of the purchase-money for an uncertain period, indicated by a condition for the periodical payment of interest thereon.—*HOLMES v. 171. Necessity for statement.—CARPENTER v. CHURCHILL (LORD), No. 162, ante.

172. Effect of non-disclosure—Contract unenforceable.—Sales of land by auction are within Stat. Frauds; except sales under decree. Auctioneer's receipt for the deposit, not containing expressly or by reference the terms, viz. the price, cannot have the effect of an agreement, binding the vendor, within Stat. Frauds.

In this instance one very material particular, the price to be paid for this estate, does not appear upon the receipt: for the amount of the deposit, unless we know the proportion it bears to the price, does not show what the price is; & the receipt contains no reference to the conditions of sale to entitle us to look at them for the terms. . . . Still more should I hesitate to say, the words of the statute according to the true construction do not include sales by auction. In A.-G. v. Day, No. 248, post, LORD HARDWICKE takes occasion to state the grounds upon which sales of a particular description, viz. under a decree of the ct., are necessarily excepted (GRANT, M.R.).—*BLAGDEN v. d. What amounts to — Unsigned memorandum in handwriting of party to be charged—Letter to co-partner giving

175. ———.] — (1) Specific performance decreed; the abstract, though delivered very late, & under a notice, that the vendee would insist on his deposit, with interest, if the title should not be made out, & possession delivered, by the time of payment, having been received & kept without objection: & the vendee upon the construction & the circumstances not being entitled to insist on the time, as the essence of the contract.

(2) An agreement signed by one party only, good to charge him within Stat. Frauds.

(3) Under the circumstances therefore, whether the time is or is not an objection, founded upon the authorities the reports of this ct. furnish, which I will not discuss, let the authorities upon that point turn the scale either for deft. or plff., there is no authority that has not some reference to the conduct of the party in the meantime; & upon the conduct this deft. has no right under the circumstances to say, this contract was not performed within two months (LORD ELDON, C.). —SETON v. k. — Within scope of authority.]—CLONCURRY (LORD) v. LAFFAN, [1924] 1 I. R. 78.—IR.

l. Whether written authority necessary—To make contract required to be in writing.—An agent to purchase or sell land need not be authorised in writing in order to bind his principal. It is sufficient, under Stat. Frauds, if the agent, though authorised only by parol, has signed an agreement in writing so as to satisfy the statute.—MOLIVRIDE v. MILLS (1906), 16 Man. L. R. 276.—CAN.

m. — Proof of authority.]—Although an agent for the sale of land, having only an oral authority from the owner, may sign for him a contract of sale of the land which will be binding under Stat. Frauds, yet, if disputed, the evidence of the agent should not be accepted as sufficient proof of such authority without corroboration, unless it is of the clearest & most convincing kind & such as bears overwhelming conviction on its face.—GILMOUR v. SIMON (1905), 15 Man. L. R. 205; 1 W. L. R. 417.—CAN.

n. Frauds.—WARD v. HAYES (1872), 19 Gr. 239.—CAN.

o. — By agent within scope of authority.]—The subsequent recognition of an unsigned contract, in writing, for the sale of lands, by the signature of his lawfully authorised agent to a notice specifying & adopting the contract, is sufficient, under Stat. Frauds, to bind the party contracting to be charged therewith.—NORRIS v. COOKE (1856), 7 I. C. L. R. 37; 9 Ir. Jur. 443.—IR.

SUB-SECT. 2.—WHERE WRITING DISPENSED WITH.

A. Contract Partly Performed.

(a) In General.

See Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 40 (2).

191. General rule.—Wherever a parol agreement is begun to be put in execution, & intended to be continued, there though there be no writing, yet this ct. shall enforce the execution thereof, notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds (LORD COWPER, C.).—GUERNSEY (LORD) v. RODBRIDGES (1708), Gilb. Ch. 3; 25 E. R. 3, L. C.

192. Must be in pursuance of the agreement.—Equity will decree performance of parol agreement, if it is admitted in the answer, or if material & unequivocal acts have been done in part performance.—GUNTER v. HALSEY (1739), Amb. 586; West temp. Hard. 681; 27 E. R. 381, L. C.

Annotations:—Apld. Maddison v. Alderson (1883), 8 App. Cas. 467. Refd. Humphreys v. Green (1882), 10 Q. B. D. 148; Hodson v. Heuland, [1896] 2 Ch. 428; Miller & Aldworth v. Sharp, [1899] 1 Ch. 622; Rawlinson v. Ames, [1925] Ch. 96.

193.—Bill for a specific performance of an agreement for the sale of lands & chattels. Plea, Stat. Frauds. Deft., during the negotiation, delivered a particular of the whole signed by him. The agreement was afterwards made at a less price. Both parties gave instructions to an attorney to prepare the conveyance; & deft. delivered to him the particular, as instructions for the deed, which was prepared. This is not sufficient to take it out of the statute, & being void as to the lands, is void in toto.

The instructing an attorney to draw conveyances, & his doing so, is no part performance. To take the case out of the statute, there must be a part execution of the substance of the agreement itself (MACDONALD, C.B.).—COOKE v. TOMBS (1794), 2 Anst. 420; 145 E. R. 922.

Annotations:—Foll. Lea v. Barber (1794), 2 Anst. 425, n. Mentd. Wood v. Benson (1831), 2 Gr. & J. 94.

194.—Act of part performance, avoiding Stat. Frauds, as repairs, etc., must be in its nature almost necessarily done in pursuance of the contract alleged.—Ex p. HOOPER (1815), as reported in 19 Ves. 477; 34 E. R. 593, L. C.

195.—There is no conflict of judicial opinion & no ground for reasonable controversy as to the essential character of the act which shall amount to a part performance, in one particular. It must be unequivocal. It must have relation to the one agreement relied upon & to no other. It must be sufficient of itself & without any other information or evidence to satisfy a ct. from the circumstances it has created & the relations it has formed that they are only consistent with the assumption of the existence of a contract the terms of which equity requires, if possible, to be ascertained & enforced (LORD O'HAGAN).

196. Must not be merely ancillary to agreement.—I do not recollect any case where an act merely introductory or ancillary to the agreement, though attended with expense, has been held a part performance (LORD THURLOW, C.).—WHITBREAD v. BROCKHURST (1784), 1 Bro. C. C. 401; 28 E. R. 1205, L. C.

Annotation:—Refd. Cooth v. Jackson (1801), 6 Ves. 12.

197. Terms of agreement must be certain.—Specific performance of a parol agreement for the sale of an estate, proved by one witness, confirmed by part performance, by taking possession, & acts of ownership, refused; there being some inconsistencies in the testimony of the witness, which, with other circumstances, placed the terms of the contract in doubt.—REYNOLDS v. WARING (1831), 1 You 346; 159 E. R. 1026.

198. Ground of relief—Fraud of vendor.—(1) Sale of land by auction is within Stat. Frauds; & the name of the vendee being put down by the auctioneer is not sufficient.

(2) Payment of the auction duty is not a part performance taking an agreement out of Stat. Frauds.

(3) The ground of the doctrine of part performance is fraud.

In general the party seeking the performance must show a performance on his side; as a reason for the interference of the court in his favour; for the ground, upon which the court acts, is fraud, in refusing to perform after performance by the other party (GILANT, M.R.).—BUCKMASTER v. HARROP (1802), 7 Ves. 341; 32 E. R. 139; on appeal (1807), 13 Ves. 456, L. C.

PART I. SECT. 9, SUB-SECT. 2.—A. (a).

1911. General rule.—MAHON v. McCULLY (1868), 7 N. S. II. 323.—CAN.

1911i.—When a contract, resting on parol, or partly on parol, has been partly performed by the purchaser, the vendor will be precluded from setting up Stat. Frauds.—MOSES v. FRENCH (1914), 43 N. B. R. 1.—CAN.

1921. Must be in pursuance of the agreement.—Where acts of part performance are relied upon to take an agreement for the sale & purchase of land out of Stat. Frauds, the acts, to avail the party setting up the contract, must be referable to the con-

196i. Must not be merely ancillary to agreement.—To constitute part performance the act relied on must be such a part execution of the contract as to change the relative positions of the parties with respect to the subject-matter, that is to say, the land itself; it must affect the possession, use or

1981. Ground of relief—Fraud of vendor.—The ground on which cts. of equity have enforced parol agreements on the ground of part performance is the comprehensive power vested in them to prevent fraud. If the part performance be such that the parties can easily be replaced in the same position as if the agreement were never made, the ct. will not interfere with the express provision of Stat. Frauds. In any case, a final & concluded agreement must be conclusively proved.—MORLEY v. BOLAN (1852), 3 Ndd. L. R. 277.—NFLD.

199. Whether confined to contracts for sale of land.]—The doctrine as to part performance, whereby a contract not enforceable by an action at law, owing to Stat. Frauds, s. 4, was rendered enforceable in equity, was confined to suits as to the sale of interests in land, & its operation has not been extended by Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66).—BRITAIN v. ROSSITER (1879), 11 Q. B. D. 123; 48 L. J. Q. B. 362; 40 L. T. 240; 43 J. P. 332; 27 W. R. 482, C. A.

200. —.]—The equitable doctrine of part performance has not been confined to contracts for the acquisition of an interest in land.—McMANUS v. COOKE (1887), 35 Ch. D. 681; 56 L. J. Ch. 662; 56 L. T. 900; 51 J. P. 708; 35 W. R. 754; 3 T. L. R. 622.

201. Contract by unauthorised agent—Remedy of person injured by representations.]—Where a person assumes, without authority, to act as agent for the sale of real estate, & the contract is merely verbal, the person injured by relying on his representations has no remedy in equity against him for damages on the ground of part performance; & there is nothing in the Judicature Acts to alter this rule.—WARR v. JONES (1876), 24 W. R. 695.

202. Contracts by corporations.]—J. entered into an agreement with W., who purported to act on behalf of a co. about to be formed, to sell certain property to the co. The co. was formed shortly afterwards with a memorandum & arts. of assocn. containing provisions for the adoption of the agreement by the directors on behalf of the co. with or without modification. At meetings of the directors at which J. was present, resolutions were passed adopting the agreement accepting an offer of J. to take payment of part of the purchase-money in debentures instead of in cash, & directing that the seal of the co. should be affixed to an assignment by J. to the co. of leasehold property comprised in the agreement, & to debentures to be issued to J. The assignment was executed by J. & sealed by the co.; the debentures were issued to him, & the co. took possession of the leaseholds & carried on their business thereon. The co. was afterwards wound up, & the liquidator took from J. an assignment of other property comprised in the agreement:—Held: there was evidence that a contract was entered into by the co. with J. to the effect of the previous agreement as subsequently modified by the acceptance of debentures instead of cash.

The rule of equity that part performance will take a case out of Stat. Frauds applies to an incorporated co., & that an incorporated co. which comes within that doctrine of part performance is just as much bound by it as if it were an individual (KAY, J.).—*HOWARD v. (c) What Constitutes Part Performance.

i. Payment of Money.

203. Whether act of part performance.]—Contract for sale of land by parol is void since Stat. Frauds, although there be a considerable part payment.—ANON. (1680), 1 Freem. K. B. 486; 89 E. R. 365.

204. —.]—A. agreed with B. to make him a lease for twenty-one years of lands, rendering rent, B. paying A. £150 fine. B. paid £100 in part to A.'s agent, which A. knew of, & ordered his agent to prepare the lease; but before it was executed, A. repented & refused to grant the lease. B. having paid £100 earnest, exhibited his bill for a specific performance.

The payment of this £100 is not such a performance of the agreement on one part as to decree an execution on the others; for Stat. Frauds makes one sort of contracts, viz. personal contracts, good if any money is paid in earnest. Now that statute says, that no agreement concerning lands shall be good except it is reduced into writing; & therefore a parol agreement, as it is in this case, cannot be good within the statute by giving money in earnest; for there must be something more than a bare payment of money on the one part to induce the ct. to decree a performance on the other part, either by putting it out of the party's power to undo the thing, or where it would be a prejudice to the party performing his part, as beginning to build or letting the other into possession, etc., in such case where the agreement has proceeded so far on one part, the statute never intended to restrain this ct. from decreeing a performance of the other (LORD COWPER, C.).—*PENGALL (LORD) v. J. thereupon verbally promised that if pltf. would complete the purchase, he would devise to pltf. & his son certain other lands which belonged to him, & would also consent that the purchase-money should be reduced to £1,800. Pltf. alleged that he completed the purchase relying upon that verbal promise. J. made a will in favour of pltf. & his son as agreed, but revoked it by a subsequent will. In an action against the estate of J. to recover damages for breach of the alleged verbal agreement:—Held: the part performance relied on by pltf., namely, the completion of the purchase, being referable not to any agreement to refrain from repudiating the previous contract of purchase, but to that previous contract itself, did not constitute such a part performance of the alleged verbal agreement as to exclude the operation of Stat. There is only one other point . . . namely, the objection that there is no mutuality in this contract, inasmuch as the agent of pltf's. was not appointed under their corporate seal, & therefore they are not bound by his acts . . . pltf's. have not only been acting on the contract by entering into possession of the property, but have actually destroyed the property enjoyed by deft. previously to the contract, by making their railway over it. 227. —.]—The doctrine of part performance is founded on a change of possession, which is assented to by that party to the contract who is sought to be charged. It cannot be alleged by him that he is a trespasser. You refer his possession, if you can, to a legal origin, & you can do that by implying a contract. But you cannot make a contract by the act of a third party, who is no party to the contract itself. For instance, if A. & B. contract that A. shall sell an estate to R., & B. takes possession of it, that is evidence against B. of a contract by him to buy the estate, for otherwise he would be a wrongdoer (JESSEL, M.R.).—*Re FOSTER, Ex p. give the house to R. & her husband. She then verbally agreed with H. to purchase the house for £3,000, which was a price at which he would scarcely have sold outside the family. Shortly afterwards Mrs. A., in the presence of H. & the husband of R., said that she was giving the house to R. & her husband, & H. forthwith entered into a binding contract to take the lease. R. & her husband, with the knowledge of Mrs. A. & H., then gave up their country house & went into possession of the London house, thereby incurring considerable expenditure. The lease had not been granted, or the £3,000 paid, when Mrs. A. died:—Held: the contract was not only for a sale from H. to Mrs. A. of the London house, under which she would have been the owner of the house, but was a contract for the purchase of it for the benefit of R. & her husband, & although R. & her husband could not themselves enforce the contract, H. was entitled to insist on its being carried out for their benefit, & the entering into possession of the house by R. & her husband was a part performance of the contract which took the case out of Stat. It was thereupon verbally agreed between L. & W. that W. should buy it on L.'s behalf for £230, & have a lien on it for that sum; that L. should pay interest & continue to occupy the part he then occupied, & that W. should receive the rents of the rest to reduce the principal. An offer by W. to purchase for £230 was then sent by L.'s agent to the mtgee., who accepted it, & under his power of sale conveyed to W.'s infant daughter by W.'s direction. L. continued in occupation of the part he was to occupy, & paid interest, W. receiving the rents of the rest. This continued for about ten months, when W. died. After his death, the daughter, by her guardian, brought ejectment, claiming to be absolute owner:—Held: Stat. Frauds was no defence to a bill by L. to enforce the agreement.

L.'s continuance in possession after the conveyance, being referable only to the verbal agreement, amounted to part performance of that agreement, & excluded the operation of the statute (KNIGHT

231. — Purchase-money paid & retained.—A wife, unknown to her husband, requested her father to sell a field, to be paid for out of her savings. The father at first refused, but he received the money, & shortly afterward put the husband into possession. For ten years the money was retained by the father without payment of interest, & the field by the husband without payment of rent. The father then attempted to eject the husband, who, being made acquainted with the circumstances, insisted on retaining the field:—Held: the father was bound to convey it to the husband.

I think that this must be treated as a contract for purchase between deft. & his daughter, which her husband, when he knew of it, was entitled to adopt as his own, & having been in possession for ten years, & deft. having during that period retained the purchase-money, I think there is such a contract as this ct. will specifically perform, & that there must be a decree for a conveyance of the field to plff. (ROMILLY, M.R.).—MILLARD v. HARVEY (1864), 34 Beav. 237; 11 L. T. 360; 10 Jur. N. S. 1167; 13 W. R. 125; 55 E. R. 626.

232. What amounts to act of possession.—Purchaser requesting vendor to give notice to quit to tenants.—(1) Stat. Frauds may be satisfied as completely by a note or memorandum, signed by an agent, of the terms contained in a verbal contract, as by a note or memorandum signed by the principal himself, provided the agent had authority to sign the particular note or memorandum; & the fact that the agent was not authorised or intended to bind his principal by a contract is immaterial. T. verbally agreed with C. for the purchase of land for £700, & paid a deposit to & obtained a receipt therefor from G., but did not sign any document himself. G. at the time was acting for D., who was the owner of the property & the undisclosed principal, but afterwards alleged that he had agreed to buy the land from D. for £600 & that he was contracting with T. on his own account & sub-selling to him at an increased price. G. having commenced an action against D. for specific performance of the alleged agreement between them, X. & co., the solrs. for D., being desirous of obtaining a proof of T.'s evidence in that action, wrote to Y. & co., the solrs. for T., asking for a short statement from their client, T., as to what had occurred between G. & T. Y. & co. returned a statement by T. as to the verbal agreement with G., but this was considered insufficient. X. & co. then wrote to Y. & co. asking for replies to certain questions to be answered by T., & Y.

The statement first sent, the answers to the questions, & the two letters from Y. & co. contained materials sufficient to constitute a note or memorandum of the contract within Stat. Frauds, s. 4. The action of G. v. D. having been dismissed, D. brought an action against T. for specific performance of T.'s contract to buy the land:—Held: Y. & co. were acting in the matter as agents for T.; Y. & co. had authority to sign the particular note or memorandum on behalf of T.; & although Y. & co. were not authorised & did not intend to bind T. by any contract, there was a sufficient note or memorandum to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 4.

(2) During the negotiations & after the completion of arrangements for the conveyance of the land to T., his solrs., Y. & co., asked X. & co., the solrs. of D., to get rid of two weekly tenants who were in possession. X. & co. accordingly gave notice to the tenants who gave up possession:—Held: this was an act of part performance as unequivocally referring to the contract as if T. had himself taken possession, & was sufficient in itself to take the case out of the statute.—*DANIELS v. 254. ———.]—(1) The bill alleged that deft. had entered into an agreement for the purchase of a house on certain terms; & that the agreement was made out by the letters after mentioned, & that such letters were a sufficient memorandum of agreement signed by deft. Deft., by his answer, denied that the agreement in the bill mentioned, or any agreement, had been made out by the said letters; & that the letters did not amount to an agreement; & insisted that no binding agreement had been entered into by him:—Held: deft. had not by his answer claimed the benefit of Stat. Frauds, & was not entitled to avail himself of it.

(2) By one of the letters stated to constitute the agreement, pltf.'s agent offered deft. a house at a certain sum, but suggested that deft. had better offer to give a larger premium, & take the fixtures at a valuation. Deft. wrote in reply, that he had no objection to give £50 more of premium. Pltf.'s agent then wrote a letter to deft., stating that he had received deft.'s letter offering £50 more of premium—making £300 premium, & accepting deft.'s offer. Deft.'s solr. subsequently recognised deft.'s agreement as contained in his letter:—Held: pltf. had proved an agreement on the part of deft. to give £300 premium.—SKINNER v. D. Statute Pleaded as Cloak for Fraud.

257. Statute of Frauds not to be used to protect fraud.—Admissibility of parol evidence.]—The question was, whether parol evidence may be admitted on the part of deft., as there was no written agreement between him & plff. to establish a fact; deft. may be admitted to read parol evidence, to rebut the equity set up by the bill. The defence arises here from an imposition of plff. & therefore not affected by Stat. Frauds.

I am not at all clear, whether, if deft. had brought his cross bill to have this agreement established, the ct. would not have done it, upon considering this in the light of those cases, where one part of the agreement being performed by one side, it is but common justice it be carried into execution on the other, & deft. would have had the benefit of it as an agreement.

The allowing any other construction upon Stat. Frauds, would be to make it a guard & protection to fraud, instead of a security against it, as was the design & intention of it (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—WALKER v. WALKER (1740), 2 Atk. 98; Barn. Ch. 214; 26 E. R. 461, L. C.

The purchaser sold the benefit of the agreement to one of defts., who intended to erect a manufactory on the land, & he filed his bill to compel specific performance of the agreement:—Held: evidence was admissible of the parol understanding, & the bill was dismissed with costs.—*TRAPPES v. SECT. 10.—DISCLOSURE OF MATERIAL FACTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

261. What is a patent defect.]—Where there runs across land an unmetalled open track of a character that is compatible with the existence of a public or private right of way or of a mere accommodation track for the use of persons entitled to the land & there is in fact a public right of way along the track it does not constitute a patent defect so that a decree for specific performance can be obtained against a purchaser of the land under an open contract.

It is not enough that there exists on the land an object of sense that might put a careful purchaser on inquiry. In order to be a patent defect, the defect must either be visible to the eye or arise by necessary implication from something visible to the eye.—*YANDLE & SONS v. SUTTON, YOUNG v. But a purchaser is bound to exercise a reasonable degree of caution; &, therefore, if there be anything in the representations made by the vendor calculated to excite suspicion, or to require explanation or investigation, the purchaser is put upon his guard, & must bear the consequence of his own neglect in not making further investigation. So if a purchaser, not satisfied with the representations made by the vendor, investigates the truth of them, & has a fair opportunity of testing their accuracy, he cannot, after completion of the contract, come to this ct. for relief on the ground of misrepresentation.—*CLARKE v. G. bought the property in his own name, & was certified as purchaser. He in fact bought as agent for B. who was the owner of immediately adjoining property. On investigating the title it turned out that the vendors were only entitled to four undivided sevenths of 490a, which was a narrow close containing 7 acres, 1 rood, 27 poles having a long frontage to a high road & at one end adjoined

B.'s property. B. alleged that it was of great importance to the enjoyment of his property that he should have the whole of 490a & G., by his directions, refused to complete. The vendors then entered into an arrangement with the owners of the other three-sevenths to give them up, receiving an equivalent out of another part of the farm having a frontage to another road:—Held: G. having only purchased as agent for B. could take any objection which B., had he been the nominal as well as the real purchaser, could have taken; for the purpose of resisting completion the purchaser was entitled to say when he bought the farm as shown on the plan; as the possession of 490a was important to the enjoyment of B.'s property completion could not be compelled unless he could get the whole of it, & he was not bound to accept the arrangement by which he would obtain the whole of it by giving up another part of the purchased property; & he must therefore be discharged from his purchase.

It has never been held that a man is obliged to take a thing with compensation when the thing is substantially & materially different from that which he was induced by the representations made to him to believe that he bought (JAMES, L.J.).—*Re ARNOLD, ARNOLD v. 275. —[—An agent, commissioned by a vendor to find a purchaser, has authority to describe the property & to state any fact or circumstance which may affect the value, so as to bind the vendor; & if an agent so commissioned makes a false statement as to the description or value, though not instructed so to do, which the purchaser is led to believe, & upon which he relies, the vendor cannot recover in an action for specific performance. A surveyor was employed by the owner of a leasehold house to find a purchaser. He represented to deft. that another person, H., was ready to buy the property for £700, & that if deft. were to give £50 more, he would make a clear profit of 7 per cent.; that H. had further offered to rent the property at £300, or the ground floor only at £200. Deft., relying on the above representations & others, which were unauthorised by the vendor, & untrue, contracted to purchase for £750; but afterwards, finding out the falsehood, refused to complete.—The vendor himself also made a misleading statement to the purchaser:—Held: independently of the statement made by the vendor himself, the false statements made by the agent, being within his authority, were sufficient to vitiate the contract; & specific performance refused.—*MULLENS v. Pltf. entered into a contract for the purchase from deft. of a house on this estate for the purpose of a boys' school, on the representation of deft.'s agent that there was nothing in this deed which would prevent him from carrying on such a school on this property. On an action for rescission of the contract:—Held: the carrying on of pltf.'s school in an ordinary & reasonable way would be within the wording of the restrictive covenant, which could not be limited to trades or businesses ejusdem generis with those specifically mentioned; & pltf., having been induced by a misrepresentation of fact made by deft.'s agent to enter into this contract, was entitled in equity to rescission, even though the representation had not been made fraudulently.—*WATSON v. 280. — Informal notice given by tenant.—An agreement was entered into for the purchase of a freehold estate of 4,400 acres upon the terms of certain particulars & conditions of sale. In the particulars it was stated that the Y. farm, a farm on the estate of 605½ acres, was in the occupation of H. on a yearly tenancy. H. had before the sale written to the vendor informing him that he intended to give up the farm at the end of the current year, but this was written before the proper time for giving notice to determine the tenancy. The vendor answered this letter, & wrote, "You will of course send me a formal notice at the right time." No mention of this correspondence was made in the particulars, or at the time of the sale. After the sale H. gave formal notice to quit. The purchaser refused to complete his purchase:—Held: the non-disclosure of the intimation of the tenant that he intended to leave at the end of the year, he not having given formal notice to quit, did not make the statement in the particulars false or misleading, & the purchaser was not entitled to have the contract rescinded, but must complete his purchase.—DAVENPORT v. CHARSLEY (1886), 54 L. T. 372; 34 W. R. 391.

281. — Deed preventing acquisition of light.]—A contract for the sale of a house with windows looking over the land of a third person implies no representation or warranty that the windows are entitled to the access of light over that land, or even that the prescriptive period is running & consequently the non-disclosure of a deed acknowledging that the vendor is not entitled to that light is no ground for refusing the vendor specific performance, or allowing the purchaser compensation, though it may be a ground for depriving the vendor of his costs.—GREENHALGH v. BRINDLEY, [1901] 2 Ch. 324; 70 L. J. Ch. 740; 84 L. T. 763; 49 W. R. 597; 17 T. L. R. 574; 45 Sol. Jo. 576.

282. — Underground watercourse — Defect not sufficient for rescission.]—Where there is a latent defect in property which is the subject of a contract of sale, but the defect is not so material as to bring the case within the principle of Flight v. Booth, No. 842, post, the purchaser is not entitled to have the contract rescinded, even if the defect is known to & not disclosed by the vendor.

A contract was entered into for the sale of a house & lands adjoining described as a "residential property," but which in fact possessed advantages for the formation of building sites. The contract stated that the property was sold subject to all drainage, sewer, & other easements, if any, affecting the same, & clause 11, that if any error or misstatement in the particulars or contract should be disclosed, the same should not annul the sale, nor should any compensation be claimed or made in respect thereof by either party. Neither the particulars nor contract, nor the plan annexed, disclosed or indicated the existence of a natural underground watercourse which ran through the grounds & the lands of adjoining owners in a culvert or piping constructed by the owners of the several lands. The vendors, knowing of the existence of the watercourse, did not disclose it to the purchaser, & the purchaser's agents, when inspecting the property prior to the contract, did not see the piping, although it was then exposed to view in a hole in the lawn of the house. The purchaser bought the property primarily as a residence, but with a view in certain events to using it for building purposes. In an action by the vendors for specific performance they waived clause 11 of the contract:—Held: the watercourse was not a sewer or drain vested in the local authority, nor an easement affecting the property, nor a defect in title, but it was a latent defect in the property, although not of such materiality as would prevent the purchaser from getting substantially what she had contracted for if the contract was specifically enforced against her; & the vendors were entitled to specific performance subject to their paying compensation to the purchaser for the defect by reason of the existence of the watercourse.

There may, however, be latent defects which, though not such as to give in equity the right to rescission, may yet affect the value of the property. . . . In an ordinary case this would, in my opinion, give rise to a claim for compensation on the part of the purchaser (PARKER, J.).—SHEPHERD v. CROFT, [1911] 1 Ch. 521; 80 L. J. Ch. 170; 103 L. T. 874.

283. — Agreement preventing statutory period of prescription beginning to run.]—The existence of an agreement which prevents the statutory period of prescription beginning to run does not create an incumbrance on the property, & the non-disclosure of such an agreement does not invalidate the contract.—SMITH v. COLBOURNE, [1914] 2 Ch. 533; 84 L. J. Ch. 112; 111 L. T. 927; 58 Sol. Jo. 783, C. A.

284. — Landlord's notices to repair.]—On July 31, 1924, deft. purchased from pltf. two leasehold houses & paid a deposit. Completion was fixed for Aug. 21, 1924. Under the lease the vendors were bound to do the inside & outside repairs. The conditions of sale provided that the purchaser should execute all necessary repairs. Requisitions on title were delivered, one of which asked whether any notices from landlords had been served on the property. The answer was that the vendors were not aware of any. The answer was made in good faith, but in fact the vendors had received landlord's notices on July 7, 1924, calling upon them, within three months of July 4, 1924, to make good the dilapidations found to have accrued on the premises "as per the schedule hereto annexed." On discovering their mistake the vendors, on Aug. 20, 1924, sent copies of the notices to the purchaser, who then declined to complete unless the vendors complied with the notices at their own expense. Condition 6 of the conditions of sale provided that the production of the last receipt for rent should be conclusive evidence that all the covenants had been complied with. Condition 8 provided that if any notices were outstanding they should be complied with at the expense of the purchaser. Pltf. brought an action for specific performance of the contract by deft. Deft. counterclaimed for the rescission of the contract & the return of his deposit:—Held: (1) the notices contained material facts which it was the duty of the vendors to disclose, & the non-disclosure deprived them of the right to the special relief of specific performance; neither condition 6 nor condition 8 relieved the vendors from the obligation of disclosing the notices, because the former required the purchaser to assume to be true that which the vendors knew at the time of the sale to be untrue, & the latter only stated as a contingency that which the vendors knew to be a fact; (2) the purchaser having made out no case for the rescission of the contract it was good at law, & since the purchaser refused to complete according to its terms he was not entitled to the return of his deposit.—BEYFUS v. LODGE, [1925] Ch. 350; 95 L. J. Ch. 27; 133 L. T. 265; 41 T. L. R. 429; 69 Sol. Jo. 507.

If any error shall be found in the particulars the same shall not annul the sale, nor shall any compensation be allowed in respect thereof."

The purchaser bought the land for building purposes, & this was known to the vendors. They represented to him that it was suitable for building, & that there was no restriction as to the class of houses to be erected. Before he entered into the contract the purchaser inspected the property. Some time after the contract he discovered that there was an underground culvert for water running across the land. There was nothing in the plan which was shown to him to indicate the existence of this culvert, & the vendors, who were trustees of a former owner, were not aware of it. In the opinion of the ct. no reasonable inspection would have enabled the purchaser to discover the culvert:—Held: the above condition did not apply, & the culvert was a substantial drawback to the use of the land for building purposes, so that the purchaser would not get that for which he contracted—therefore, Flight v. Booth, No. 842, ante, applied, & a good title had not been shown by the vendors in accordance with the contract.—Re PUCKETT & SMITH'S CONTRACT, [1902] 2 Ch. 258; 71 L. J. Ch. 606; 87 L. Where representations are made with respect to the nature & character of the property which is to become the subject of purchase, affecting the value of that property, & those representations afterwards turn out to be incorrect & false, to the knowledge of the party making them, a foundation is laid for maintaining an action in a ct. of common law to recover damages for the deceit so practised, & in a ct. of equity a foundation is laid for setting aside the contract, which was founded upon a fraudulent basis (LORD LYNTHURST).—*ATTWOOD v. An objection to the title of one lot was taken after the prescribed time, that it was of copyhold tenure. It, however, appeared that, under a composition with the lord, the rights of the copyhold were such as to render the tenure hardly different from that of freehold:—Held: the misdescription did not form a ground for resisting a specific performance, although the decision might have been otherwise had the misdescription been wilful.

(2) Another lot was described in the advertisements as being sold with a certain reservoir & waterworks, yielding a yearly rental of £60, exclusively of the land & buildings. An objection was taken after the prescribed time, & was supported by the fact that this rent arose from supplying with water certain houses separated from the reservoir by the property of strangers, over which the vendor had no right to carry it, beyond a licence from year to year by payment of a rent:—Held: the description contained such a misrepresentation as to preclude the vendor from enforcing a specific performance; & the objection was not one as to title, & therefore was not obviated by the stipulation as to time.—*PRICE v. 303. Length of term for which tenant holds.—A misstatement, in the particulars of sale, of the length of the term for which a tenant of the vendor holds a portion of the property, is not, in the absence of any evidence as to whether such misstatement is to the advantage of the purchaser or not, such a misrepresentation as will enable him to resist specific performance.

Seven cottages, let to weekly tenants, were put up for sale, & described as "producing £73 14s. a year." When the particulars were issued the cottages did not produce this rental. Before the sale the vendors had entered into a contract to do certain repairs, & had given notice to the tenants that their rents would be raised, & before the day fixed for completion the repairs were done, & the rents were raised 3d. a week; so that, on the day of completion, the statement in the particulars was quite accurate:—Held: this was not such a misrepresentation as would enable a purchaser to resist specific performance.—*GODDARD v. 305. Sale of manor—Fines stated to be arbitrary.—Trustees for sale of a manor described it in advertisements, & particulars & conditions of sale, as a manor in which the fines were arbitrary; adding that the clear profits, on an average of the last eight years, had been £150 a year, & it was one of the conditions of sale, that if there should be any error or misstatement in the particulars, the vendors or purchaser, as the case might happen, should pay or allow a proportionate value, according to the average of the whole purchase-money, as a compensation either way. After the sale it was found that by the custom of the manor arbitrary fines were payable only on alienation, & that on the death of a tenant, his customary heir paid, upon admittance, a small fixed sum, & the widow was admitted to her free bench without any payment. It was also found that the clear profits exceeded £200 a year:—Held: there was no such misdescription of the property as would entitle the purchaser to compensation. inasmuch as the annual profits, which constituted the substantial value, far exceeded the amount stated. Semble: if there was a substantial misdescription, a ct. of equity would not enforce against trustees specific performance with compensation, as being prejudicial to the cestui que trust, & incapable of being ascertained.—*WHITE v. 306. Average size of timber.—Bill by the vendor for the specific performance of a contract to purchase a timber estate, where the particulars of sale described it as comprising a certain wood "with upwards of 65 acres of fine oak timber trees, the average size of which approached 50 feet," & in the particulars of the lot described it only as "65 acres, 2 roods & 12 perches of growing timber." It appeared, on the evidence for pltf., that the average size of the trees was about 35 feet, but on that for deft. that it was only about 22 feet; & deft., moreover, alleged that it was sold at a time when he had no means of seeing the wood, & that he relied on the particulars of sale:—Held: as the representation on the particulars of sale had proved to be incorrect, & as it was not shown that deft. knew it to be incorrect at the time of making the contract, the ct. would not, at all events, enforce the specific performance of the contract without compensation; &, inasmuch as the particulars of sale did not express what number of trees or quantity of timber the wood contained it was not a case in which the ct. could measure the extent of the deficiency, or ascertain the amount of compensation; & the bill must therefore be dismissed.—*BROOKE (LORD) v. 307. Result of recent valuation.—Where a purchaser, who was a solr., after viewing a farm, & being informed of the rent at which it was let, agreed to buy at £5,000:—Held: the omission on the part of the vendor to inform the purchaser of the result of a late valuation, or of the tenant having complained of the rent being excessive, & of the full amount not having been exacted, did not constitute a defence to a suit [for specific performance].—ABBOTT v. SWORDER (1852), 4 De G. & Sm. 448; 64 E. R. 907, L. C.

308. Inaccurate description of situation.—It is a misdescription in particulars of sale to describe a house as No. 58 Pall Mall, opposite Marlborough House; where the house was, in fact, not in Pall Mall, but was situate behind No. 57, Pall Mall, having an entrance with a door, which for many years bore the designation of No. 58, & a separate passage, about 65 feet long, & 3 feet 8 inches wide, across the ground-floor of No. 57, between the basement & upper stories of No. 57:—Held: the particulars having indicated no peculiarity in the access to the house, & the objection on this point having been taken as soon as it was known, the purchaser was entitled to have the contract rescinded.—STANTON v. TATTERSALL (1853), 1 Sm. & G. 529; 1 Eq. Rep. 543; 21 L. T. O. S. 333; 17 Jur. 967; 1 W. R. 502; 65 E. R. 231.

309. Dampness.—Before entering into a contract to take the assignment of a leasehold house, held at rack rent the purchaser told the vendor that he was in bad health & could not live in a damp house; the vendor assured him it was not damp, believing which, the purchaser signed the contract. In a suit for specific performance, it was proved that the house was permanently damp:—Held: the contract could not be enforced; but the purchaser not having taken the objection till after the vendor had left the house & some time had elapsed the claim was dismissed without costs.—STRANGWAYS v. BISHOP (1857), 29 L. T. O. S. 120.

310. "Well supplied with water."—A property situate in a town, & comprising a warehouse with a small steam engine, was described in particulars of sale under a decree as "well supplied with water." The property was well supplied with water, but only from the waterworks of the borough, & by payment of water rates, there being no natural supply. The manufactories in the town were generally supplied with water from wells upon the properties themselves, though small steam engines in warehouses frequently were not:—Held: there was a misdescription, & a purchaser who purchased on the faith of the description in the particulars, without knowing the real state of the case, could not be compelled to complete his purchase without compensation.—LEYLAND v. ILLINGWORTH (1860), 2 De G. F. & J. 248; 8 W. R. 695; 45 E. R. 617; sub nom. LEYLAND v. ILLINGWORTH, Ex p. WALKER, 29 L. J. Ch. 611; sub nom. LEYLAND v. ILLINGWORTH, Ex p. WEBSTER, 2 L. 312. "Let to most desirable tenant."—Pltfs. put up an hotel for sale on Aug. 4, 1882, stating in the particulars that it was let to "F., a most desirable tenant, at a rental of £400 for an unexpired term of 27½ years." The L. co. sent M., their secretary, to inspect the property. M. reported that F., from the business he was doing, could hardly pay the rent, & that the town in which it was situate seemed to be in the last stage of decay. The directors, on receiving this report, directed M. to bid up to £5,000. M. went & bought for £4,700. Before completion, F. went into liquidation, & the L. co. refused to complete. Pltfs. sued for specific performance. It was proved that on May 1, 1882, the Lady Day quarter's rent was wholly unpaid; that a distress was then threatened, & that F. paid £30 on May 6, £40 on June 13, & remaining £30 shortly before the auction, & that no part of the quarter's rent due at Midsummer had been paid. The chairman of the co. was orally examined, & deposed most positively, that the co. would not have bought but for the representation in the particulars that F. was a most desirable tenant:—Held: the description of F. as a most desirable tenant was not a mere expression of opinion, but contained an implied assertion that the vendors knew of no facts leading to the conclusion that he was not; the circumstances relating to the Lady Day rent showed that he was not a desirable tenant; & that there was a misrepresentation.—*SMITH v. 313. "Suitable for development."—Land offered for sale at an auction was described as "The capital freehold building site . . . in the midst of a capital letting class of property . . . ripe for immediate development." It was in fact land which had been filled up with refuse from roads, dustbins, etc., & under the byelaws of the London County Council could not be used for building purposes without excavating the rubbish & filling in:—Held: this was such a misdescription as to entitle the purchaser to rescind.—BAKER v. Moss (1902), 66 J. P. 360.

314. Drainage.—CREE v. STONE (1907), Times, May 10.

315. Underlease described as lease.—Under a contract of sale a vendor agreed to sell two messuages described as held by an indenture of lease dated Aug. 1, 1872, for the unexpired residue of the term of eighty years computed from Mar. 15, 1866. The title was to commence with the lease; & the purchaser was to be deemed to buy with full notice thereof. The lease contained covenants referring to the lessor & his superior landlord. The lease was in fact an underlease:—Held: as the purchaser could not be considered to have had notice that the property she was intending to purchase was in fact held by an underlease, the representation that it was held by a lease was a fatal misdescription, & a good title had not therefore been shown.—BROOM v. PHILLIPS (1896), 71 L. T. 459.

316. On vendor—To show that purchaser did not rely on representation.—A purchaser agreed to buy an estate, upon a statement in the particulars of sale that it lay upon a valuable vein of coal, which vein afterwards proved to have been mostly worked out. Subsequently the purchaser entered into an agreement with a third party to sell the colliery at a price implying the existence of a considerable quantity of coal, & afterwards discovered the fact of the exhaustion of the coal. Where the particulars of sale are likely to mislead, it is incumbent on a vendor to show that the purchaser has not been misled; & where a misrepresentation has been made by a vendor, the ct. applies the rule of "caveat emptor" with great caution:—Held: pltf. having failed to show that his misrepresentation did not influence deft. to enter into the agreement, the rule of "caveat emptor" did not apply, & pltf. must be left to his remedy, if any, at law.—COLBY v. GADSDEN (1867), 17 L. T. 97; 15 W. R. 1185, L. C.

317. ———.]—Certain property was put up for sale by auction, & in the particulars which were advertised was described as an immediate absolute reversion of a freehold estate falling into possession on the death of a lady in her 70th year. By the conditions of sale, which were read in the auction room just previously to the sale, but were not printed or circulated among those present, the property was stated to be subject to three mtgs. The property was bought by pltf. who stated that he was deaf & did not understand that he was buying an equity of redemption:—Held: on a bill filed by pltf. to have the contract for sale rescinded, the description of the property in the particulars of sale was misleading, the onus was therefore on the vendor to show that the purchaser was not actually misled, & as he had failed to do so pltf. was entitled to have the contract rescinded & his deposit returned.—TORRANCE v. BOLTON (1872), 8 Ch. App. 118; 42 L. J. Ch. 177; 27 L. T. 738; 21 W. R. 134, L. J.

319. Deft. not having seen the house, bought it, but afterwards refused to complete the purchase, on the ground of misdescription, alleging, amongst other things, that two of the rooms, called bedrooms, were too small to be used for that purpose:—Held: there had been no misdescription to vitiate the contract.—*JOHNSON v. 322. "Fertile & improvable."—The particulars of sale described a farm, forming about a third of the estate sold, as late in the occupation of A. at the rent of £290. A. had occupied the farm, which contained a good deal of grass land, as yearly tenant, at £290, but went in at Midsummer, paying only £1 for the first quarter, & quitted at Michaelmas in the next year, thus paying £291 for a year & a quarter. Since this pltf. had agreed to let the farm at £225; but the agreement had been rescinded before taking possession, & the evidence showed that the farm would not let for nearly so much as £290:—Held: (1) there was such substantial misrepresentation as entitled the purchaser to be discharged.

323. Duty of purchaser to disclose — Facts within knowledge influencing price.]—Relief given against a contract where the purchaser knew that the vendors, the assignees of a bkpt., were ignorant of a circumstance considerably increasing the value.

The purchaser is not bound to give the vendor information as to the value of the property, but a very little is sufficient to affect the application of this principle.

If a word, if a single word be dropped which tends to mislead the vendor, that principle will not be allowed to operate (LORD ELDON, C.).—TURNER v. HARVEY (1821), Jac. 169; 37 E. R. 814, L. C.

324. — — —.]—The proposition laid down by the Ct. of Appeal, that "a person desirous of buying property which is being sold under the direction of the Ct. must either abstain from laying any information before the Ct. in order to obtain its approval, or must lay before it all the information he possesses, & which it is material that the Ct. should have to enable it to form a judgment on the subject under its consideration," is too broadly stated. It does not follow that because information on some material point or points is offered, or is given on request, by a purchaser from the Ct., it must therefore be given on all others as to which it is neither offered nor requested, & concerning which there is no implied representation, positive or negative, direct or indirect, in what is actually stated.

Inasmuch as a purchaser is, generally speaking, under no antecedent obligation to communicate to his vendor facts which may influence his own conduct or judgment when bargaining for his own interest, no deceit can be implied from his mere silence as to such facts, unless he undertakes or professes to communicate them. This, however, he may be held to do, if he makes some other communication which, without the addition of those facts, would be necessarily or naturally & probably misleading. If it is a just conclusion that he did this intentionally, & with a view to mislead in any material point that is fraud; & it is a sufficient ground for setting aside a contract, if the vendor was in fact so misled (LORD SELBORNE).

Leave to bid at a sale by the Ct. granted to a solr. on the record relieves him from his fiduciary character, & places him in the same position as an ordinary purchaser.—*COAKS v. 326. — — —.]—There being no fiduciary relation between vendor & a purchaser, the purchaser is not bound to disclose any fact exclusively within his knowledge which might be expected to influence the price of the subject to be sold. Simple reticence does not amount to legal fraud, but a word or gesture intended to induce the vendor to believe in the existence of a non-existing fact, which might influence the price of the subject to be sold, would be sufficient ground for a ct. of equity to refuse a decree of specific performance, & so, a fortiori, would any contrivance on the part of the purchaser, better informed than the vendor as to value, to hurry the vendor into an agreement without giving him an opportunity of being fully informed on that subject, or taking advice as to the terms of the bargain. Where therefore an intended lessor & lessee of minerals were in the above position as to knowledge, & the intended lessee brought to the lessor a lease ready prepared, without previous negotiation as to the details of it, & induced the latter to sign it, saying he might trust to the proposed lessee for making a fair allowance if the minerals turned out more valuable than was supposed:—Held: a bill for specific performance filed by the intended lessee, offering to make a fair extra allowance, could not be sustained, & its dismissal was confirmed on appeal.

A single word, or, I may add, a nod or a wink, or a shake of the head, or a smile from the purchaser intended to induce the vendor to believe the existence of a non-existing fact, which might influence the price of the subject to be sold, would be sufficient ground for a ct. of equity to refuse a decree for specific performance of the agreement. So a fortiori would a contrivance on the part of the purchaser, better informed than the vendor of the real value of the subject to be sold to hurry the

328. — Wrongful abstraction of minerals previous to purchase.—The owners of a colliery entered into a contract with an adjoining landowner for the purchase of his estate, without disclosing the fact, of which he was ignorant, that they had, without authority, gotten a considerable quantity of coal from under it:—Held: the ct. would not enforce the contract at the suit of the purchasers, though the sale was not shown to be at an undervalue.

If a man knows that he has committed a trespass of a very serious character upon his neighbour's property, & finding it convenient to screen himself from the consequences, makes a proposal for the purchase of that property, he certainly ought to communicate to the person with whom he is dealing the exact state of the circumstances of the case (LORD HATHERLEY, C.).—PHILLIPS v. 333. ———.]—On application of cestui que trust.]—A bill was brought by one of several cestuis que trusts to compel trustees to sell part of the trust property, which consisted of a term of two hundred years, of which only nine months remained unexpired. It was not known who was entitled to the reversion expectant on the determination of the term, & plff. was anxious to buy up the residue of the term himself. The ct. decreed a sale, giving all the cestuis que trusts liberty to bid, & also directing advertisements to be made for the representatives of the original lessor, who were to be at liberty to come in under

WILKINSON (1853), 1 Eq. Rep. 556; 22 L. J. Ch. 981; 21 L. T. O. S. 297; 1 W. R. 513.*

But a purchaser cannot take the objection that the ct. has miscarried in the exercise of its jurisdiction.—WATERS v. WATERS (1866), 36 L. J. Ch. 195; 15 L. T. 406; 15 W. R. 191.*

n. Governed by English practice—R. S. C., Ord. 51, r. 1.]—The ct. ordered a sale of certain real estate of testator & directed that the sale be conducted out of ct. & that the proceeds of sale be paid to the trustee of the will. The practice to be followed, in the future, in such cases is to be in accordance with the English practice as laid down in the above rule.—BOLGER v. BOLGER (1920), 20 S. R. N. S. W. 534; 37 N. S. W. W. N. 162.—AUS.

o. Abortive sale—Whether further order needed for resale.]—Where property has been put up for sale under an order of the ct., but the sale has proved abortive for want of bidders, the property may be advertised & put up for sale again without further order.—SHERWOOD v. CAMPBELL (1859), 1 Ch. Ch. 299.—CAN.

p. Signature of judge not necessary—On licence to sell real estate.]—A licence to sell real estate need not be signed by the Judge of Probates. Being a judicial act, it is sufficient if it is signed by the registrar, as the act of the ct.—DOE d. SIMPSON v. FALLS (1863), 10 N. B. R. (5 All.) 540.—CAN.

q. Decree for sale of land under registered judgment—Other lands discovered subsequently subject to judgment—Necessity to revive suit.]—Where under a decree for sale founded on a registered judgment, certain lands were sold, & several years afterwards other lands affected by the judgment having been discovered, were ordered to be sold:—Held: it was not necessary in such circumstances to revive the suit.—DICKY v. HERON (1869), 2 Ch. Ch. 490.—CAN.

r. Decree for sale—When made—Necessity for judgment creditor to show reason for sale.]—A decree will not be made for the sale of land bound by a memorial judgment, unless the judgment creditor shows some reason why he could not have obtained the fruits of his judgment by an execution.—ROBERTSON v. ARMSTRONG (1870), N. B. Dig. 647.—CAN.

t. Invalid sale—Decree not absolute.]

336. — When sale necessary or expedient.]—Under R. S. C., Ord. 55, r. 3 (f), the ct. can only approve of a sale which the exors. or trustees of the will or deed to which the originating summons relates could have made themselves.

Under R. S. C., Ord. 51, r. 1, the ct. has power to order a sale of real estate only when it is necessary or expedient for the purposes of the action before it that the property should be sold.

No new power to order a sale is conferred.

I do not think that the rule [R. S. C., Ord. 55, 1. 3] gives the ct. any power to direct a sale in a case in which it had no power to do so previously (PEARSON, J.).—Re ROBINSON, PICKARD v. WHEATER (1885), 31 Ch. D. 247; 55 L. J. Ch. 307; 53 L. T. 865.

337. — Cause or matter relating to real estate—Action by infant heir of intestate.]—An action was brought by the infant heir-at-law of an intestate against the widow, who was the administratrix, claiming an account of the personal estate & an account of the rents & profits of the real estate received by deft. The action coming on for hearing on motion for judgment, pltf. asked, under R. S. C., Ord. 51, r. 1, for an order for the sale of the real estate. Deft. did not object to a sale:—Held: the action was not a "cause or matter relating to real estate" within the meaning of the rule; & therefore the ct. had no jurisdiction to order a sale under that rule.—Re STAINES, STAINES v. STAINES (1886), 33 Ch. D. 172; 55 L. J. Ch. 913; 35 W. R. 75.

SECT. 2.—RULES GOVERNING SALE.

SUB-SECT. 1.—MODE OF SALE.

See R. S. C., Ord. 51, r. 1A.

343. Discretion of judge.]—Where a decree in an administration action directed the accounts to be taken in a district registry, & the real estate to be sold with the approbation of the judge, the judge directed that the sale should take place in his chambers:—Held: although it might have been more convenient that the sale should take place in the district registry, yet the place & manner of the sale was a matter entirely within the discretion of the judge, & refused to interfere with his exercise of such discretion.—MACDONALD v. FOSTER (1877), 6 Ch. D. 193; 37 L. T. 296; 25 W. R. 687, C. A.

344. Most beneficial mode—Distinct lots sold as one.]—Premises, held under distinct leases, ordered to be sold in one lot, upon the speculative probability, arising from the nature of the property, that a higher price would be obtained by that mode of sale, than if they were put up in distinct lots.—COOK v. COLLINGRIDGE (1827), 3 Russ. 520; 38 E. R. 670, L. C.

345. — Property of Crown debtor.]—(1) Under the words of 25 Geo. 3, c. 35, c. 1, which directs that the "right, title, estate & interest" of a Crown debtor, may be sold to satisfy the debt, a leasehold renewable on lives may be disposed of.

(2) The ct. refused to order, at the instance of the Crown, a sale by private contract; but directed the Remembrancer to certify which was the most advantageous mode of selling the property.—R. v. LANE (1840), 6 M. & W. 489; 151 E. R. 505; sub nom. Re LANE, 9 L. J. Ex. 175; 4 Jur. 464.

346. — Parties not sui juris—Or before the court.]—The ct. has power, since the passing of the Master in Chancery Abolition Act, 1852 (c. 80), to have a sale of real estate, directed to be sold under the ct., made by auction in chambers before the Chief Clerk; & where all parties interested are sui juris, & before the ct., they may, if they think it expedient, have a sale effected in this manner. Where, however, there are parties not before the ct., or not sui juris, the duty is thrown upon the ct. of determining what is the most beneficial mode of conducting the sale, & the fact of the power having fallen into disuse tending to show that its exercise was in general inexpedient. The ct. directed a sale by an auctioneer.—PEMBERTON v. BARNES (1872), L. R. 13 Eq. 349; 41 L. J. Ch. 209; 26 L. T. 389.

347. In accordance with order of court—Sale to best purchaser.]—A trust estate was decreed to be sold for the payment of debts & legacies, & to be sold to the best purchaser. A. articles to buy the estate of the trustees, & brings a bill to compel them to perform the contract; the trustees by their answer disclose this matter; the ct. will make no new decree, but will leave the former decree to be pursued.—ANNESLEY v. ASHURST (1734), 3 P. Wms. 282; 24 E. R. 1066, L. C.

u. Jurisdiction of court.]—Ord. 50, r. 1, provides, in part: "if in any cause or matter relating to any real estate, it shall appear necessary or expedient that the real estate or any part should be sold, the ct. or a judge may order the same to be sold":—Held: this was a general power to be exercised by the ct. or a judge according to the circumstances, & is not meant to apply only where a sale is necessary or expedient for the purposes of the action.—RAINEY v. RAINEY (1906), 12 B. C. R. 494.—CAN.

a. Heir-at-law outside jurisdiction.]—The heir-at-law being absent from the jurisdiction, sale of real estate may be effectuated under the decree of the ct., the particulars of the sale stating the fact, & the purchaser buying with notice.—LEAHY v. DANCER (1829), 3 Mol. 108.—IR.

b. Effect of sale—Right of purchaser as compared with purchaser by private sale.]—A purchaser at a judicial sale is in a position different from that of a mere representative of the old proprietor, or of one who comes in by a voluntary sale made by the latter. A judicial sale transfers to the purchaser the property of the judgment-debtor against the debtor's will, & places the purchaser in a higher position than that which the judgment-debtor, by any private alienation, could confer on him.—OOMRAO SINGH v. SHIMBOO NATH (1870), 2 N. W. 38.—IND.

c. — On previous attachments.]—When a judicial sale takes place, all previous attachments effected upon the property sold fall to the ground.—KASHY NATH ITOY CHOWDHRY v. SURBANAND SHAHIA (1885), 1 L. R. 12 Calc. 317.—IND.

the ct. to be sold by auction was bought in. After which, & before the auctioneer had left the rostrum, A. signed a contract to purchase it at the reserved price, which was divulged contrary to the express instructions given to the auctioneer:—Held: there was a valid binding contract.—*ELSE v. 369. Sale stayed pending appeal.—Pending an appeal, the ct. will sometimes stay the sale of property which the decree has directed to be sold; but, if the property consists of personal chattels, remaining in the possession of applt., he must give ample security for their value.—*NEROT v. SUB-SECT. 4.—CONDUCT OF SALE.

370. Plaintiff—Discretion of court.—Under a decree, directing the sale of an estate, but not directing by whom the sale shall be conducted, the master is not bound to give the conduct of the sale to pltf., but may, in his discretion, if he considers it more beneficial to the estate, give the conduct of the sale to other parties.

Grounds on which the conduct of a sale, under the decree of the ct., may properly be given to parties other than pltf.—DIXON v. PYNER (1850), 7 Hare, 331; 19 L. J. Ch. 402; 15 L. T. O. S. 21; 14 Jur. 217; 68 E. R. 135.

Annotation.—Refd. Dale v. Hamilton (1853), 10 Hare, App. 1, vii.

371. —[—]—(1) Ordinarily, the conduct of a sale directed by the ct. is committed to pltf.; but when it appears for the benefit of the parties, it will be given to a deft. This right does not, however, depend on the extent of the interest of the parties in the property.

(2) When a sale is directed, every party to the suit having the title deeded is bound to facilitate the sale.—KNOTT v. COTTEE (No. 4) (1859), 27 Beav. 33; 54 E. R. 13.

1. Year from date of master's report.—Where a decree directed a sale of certain property at the expiration of a year from the date of a master's report, a sale at the end of a year from the date of the decree, instead of the date of the report, was allowed in special circumstances, on the ground that the decree was in effect equivalent to a judgment at law.—PORTE v. IRWIN (1879), 8 P. R. 40.—CAN.

PART III. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 4.

m. Stifling competition.—Held: it would not be inferred that a sale which took place in Nov. was necessarily affected by practices of the audience to prevent competition,

372. — Purchase-money paid into court.—Where a sale is made by the ct., & the purchasers pay their money into ct., plfts. are entitled to the conduct of the sale; but where a sale, directed by decree, is made out of ct., the trustee or exor. is the proper person to conduct it.—CORDEN v. MAYNARD (1863), 1 New Rep. 354.

376. Assignee in bankruptcy—In preference to mortgagee.—Form of Order in case of an assignee buying in, by mistake, a mtgd. estate of bkpt. at a sale under Lord Loughborough's order. On such a sale the assignees must have the conduct of it; & it is an improper practice for the sale to be conducted by the mtgee.—Re COCK, Ex p. CUDDON (1843), 3 Mont. D. & De G. 302; 1 L. T. O. S. 338; 7 Jur. 334.

377. Trustee or executor.—CORDEN v. MAYNARD, No. 372, ante.

378. Trustee & testamentary guardian—Substituted for stranger.—Where a sale has been decreed in one of two concurrent suits, the fact of the party to whom has been given the conduct of the cause being an entire stranger to the family & to the property, is a sufficient reason for taking away from him the conduct of the sale, & giving it to the trustee & testamentary guardian of the infants.—Re GARMESON'S ESTATE, GARMESON v. SHARROD (1872), 21 W. R. 98.

379. Trustee defendants—In preference to plaintiff trustee.—R. S. C., Mar. 1879, r. 7, provides that whenever the trusts of any will are being administered, & a sale is ordered of any property vested in the trustees of such will with power of sale, the conduct of such sale shall be given to such trustees, unless the judge shall otherwise direct. A., one of the trustees of, & the tenant for life under, a will, brought an action against the other three trustees for the administration of the trusts of the will. A sale having been ordered of certain property vested in the trustees, with power of sale:—Held: according to the true construction of the above rule, the conduct of the sale must be given to the three trustees, & not to pltf.—Re GARDNER, GARDNER v. BEAUMONT (1879), 48 L. J. Ch. 644; 41 L. T. 82.

380. Solicitor to plaintiff—Held as agent of all parties.—DALBY v. PULLEN, No. 517, post.

381. Independent solicitor—Injunction to restrain interference by plaintiff.—When a sale has been directed by the ct., & the conduct of it given to one party, no other party has a right to interfere in any way in the sale without the leave of the ct. Thus, where the ct. directed a sale & gave the conduct of it to an independent solr., both pltf. & left., having liberty to bid, pltf. was restrained by which had been carried on at the sale in Oct. preceding, & from which this sale in Nov. was adjourned.—LOGIE v. STAYNER, LOGIE v. JAMIESON (1863), 10 Gr. 222.—CAN.

SUB-SECT. 5.—FIXING OF RESERVE.

See R. S. C., Ord. 51, r. 4.

384. Order directing reserve—Not inserted in decree for sale—Separate order necessary.—A direction for a reserved bidding ought not to be inserted in a decree for sale, but ought to be the subject of a separate order.—BROOKER v. COLLIER (1827), 3 Russ. 369; 38 E. R. 614.

385. Amount of reserve price—Reimbursement of mortgagee.—Although in sales directed by the ct. it is usual to fix the reserved price at the amount at which the estate has been valued an exception will be made where a mtgee., who, being also a trustee, is incapable of bidding, is desirous of having it fixed at an amount sufficient to cover his debt.—TENNANT v. TRENCHARD (1872), 41 L. J. Ch. 779; 20 W. R. 785, L. C.

The mode of confirming this report & approving of the purchase is by a special notice of motion to that effect, & not, as in the common case, by orders nisi & absolute.—*DOWLE v. SUB-SECT. 7.—OPENING BIDDINGS.

See Sale of Land by Auction Act, 1867 (c. 48).

403. Reserve price not reached at sale—Subsequent private offer approved by court—Acceptance confirmed as final.—In an administration suit an estate was ordered to be sold by auction, but the reserved price not having been reached, the sale by auction became inoperative. A subsequent offer to purchase subject to the approval of the ct. within ten days was carried in before the chief clerk, who approved of the offer, & ordered the contract to be carried out, whereupon the deposit was paid & the abstract delivered. Before the order had been passed & entered a much higher price was offered. Upon summons to vary the chief clerk's certificate by setting aside the sale & directing the offer for a larger amount to be accepted:—Held: the certificate of the chief clerk, although not passed & entered, was tantamount to a confirmation of the contract; & the principle of Sale of Land by Auction Act, 1867 (c. 48), s. 7, by which the old practice of opening biddings on a sale by auction was discontinued, except upon the ground of fraud or improper conduct, applied equally to a sale by private contract entered into under the sanction of the ct. & such a contract could not be discharged where no unfairness existed. The chief clerk's certificate was therefore confirmed.—Re BARTLETT, NEWMAN v. HOOK (1880), 16 Ch. D. 561; 50 L. J. Ch. 205; 44 L. T. 17; 29 W. R. 279.

Before the day of sale, B. by his conduct & manner, if not by his direct statements, had given A. & others reason to believe that he would not be the purchaser or bid at all at the sale; & he had also used language not calculated to give a high opinion of the value of the property. On the day of the sale A. & a stranger unknown to him were the only bidders, the stranger constantly making advances on A.'s bidding, till at last A. began to think he was employed by B. to run him up, & he stopped bidding altogether, with the intention of applying to have the bidding opened afterwards, as the auctioneer had announced might be done. He accordingly applied, making a sufficiently large advance:—Held: having been misled by B. he was entitled to have the biddings opened.—MANNERS v. FURZE (1848), 17 L. J. Ch. 185; 11 L. T. O. S. 470.

405. ———.—Fraud—Or misconduct bordering on fraud.—In order to entitle parties to open the biddings after a sale by auction under the ct. since the passing of Sale of Land by Auction Act, 1867 (c. 48), there must be either fraud or such misconduct as borders on fraud.—*DELVES v. 407. — Bidding by person disqualified.]—Property sold in a foreclosure suit was purchased by W., a solr., whose name appeared on the particulars of sale as one of several solrs. from whom particulars of sale could be obtained. He was not solr. to any of the parties to the suit, but was solr. to some creditors of the mtgee., one of whom had obtained a decree for administration of the mtgee.'s estate. W. had two days before the sale taken out a summons to obtain leave for pltf. in the administration suit to attend proceedings in the foreclosure suit, such summons being returnable on the day after the sale. He had never been consulted about the sale, & did not know what was the amount of the reserved bidding:—Held: W. was not disqualified from purchasing, for that his client was at liberty to purchase, & therefore his being her solr. did not disqualify him, & the mere fact of his own name appearing on the particulars of sale as a person from whom copies of them might be obtained was not a disqualification; if W. had stood in such a fiduciary position as to be disqualified from purchasing, Sale of Land by Auction Act, 1867 (c. 48), s. 7, would not have been a bar to setting aside the purchase, though absolutely confirmed.—*GUEST v. 408. — Reserve price not reached.]—Sale of Land by Auction Act, 1867 (c. 48), s. 7, did not alter the existing practice by which the highest bidder became the purchaser on being declared or allowed to be the purchaser by the usual certificate. It merely enacts that the certificate allowing him to be the purchaser shall be given if he has bid up to the reserve price & there has been no fraud or improper conduct in the management of the sale. The certificate is still necessary for the purpose of converting the highest bidder into the accepted purchaser.

Upon a sale by the ct. in a debenture holder's action, the judge fixed the reserve price at the sum of £8,400, but by a mistake in the master's chambers the sum of £4,575 was inserted as the reserve price in the sealed instructions furnished to the auctioneer who, acting thereon, knocked down the property at £5,000 to the highest bidder:—Held: inasmuch as the judge had only authorised the sale provided the reserve price fixed by him was obtained, & as the highest bid at the auction had not reached that figure but had only exceeded a lower reserve price which, by mistake, & in contravention of the direction of the judge in person, had been supplied to the auctioneer, there was nothing to compel the ct. to certify the highest bidder to be the purchaser, & the certificate must be refused.—Re CLAYTON (JOSEPH), LTD., SMITH v. THE CO., [1920] 1 Ch. 257; 89 L. J. Ch. 188; 122 L. T. 517; 36 T. L. R. 109; 64 Sol. Jo. 176.

But the ct., on appct.'s solr. appearing by counsel, & undertaking to pay what he might receive according to the order of the ct., & appct. himself undertaking to be bound by any order the ct. might make in respect of any moneys his solr. might receive, gave liberty to the master to fix a deposit, & to direct the purchaser to pay same to such solr., such solr. to pay same into ct. on or before a time appointed by the present order.—*LYON v. SECT. 3.—TITLE.

SUB-SECT. 1.—INVESTIGATION.

A. In General.

411. Production of deeds—Person interested not party to suit.]—Production of deeds & documents will not be ordered where a deft. & another person, who is not a party to the suit, are severally interested in the estate & title deeds.

An estate was sold under a decree. Upon a summons to produce the deeds for inspection, the ct. refused to make the order, as the deeds were whether the purchaser at the sale is a stranger to the suit, or a party allowed by an order of the ct. to bid.—MITCHELL v. MITCHELL (1875), 6 P. R. 232.—CAN.

J—After the confirmation of the sale, the biddings will not be opened upon a mere advance of price.—VINCENT v. THWAITES (1843), 5 I. Eq. R. 526.—IR.

e.—Advantages to parties concerned.]—DIGBY v. BROWNE (1839), 1 I. Eq. R. 377.—IR.

f.—In opening biddings, this ct. does not tie itself down to any precise rule as to the amount of the sum to be advanced, but looks substantially to that which is for the benefit of the parties, & to the circumstances of the particular case before it.—POWER v. POWER (1841), 3 I. Eq. R. 511.—IR.

g.—The rules which permit the practice of re-opening biddings upon the sale of properties by

*h. Procedure where opening of biddings not granted.]—*The ct. will in a proper case, & upon conditions, substitute a proposed purchaser at an increased price for a person who has purchased property at a sale under a decree, instead of opening the biddings generally & directing a resale; giving the present purchaser the option to take it at the increased price.—HARRISON v. PATTERSON (1861), 1 Ch. Ch. 363.—CAN.

*k. Private tender—Reopening sale after acceptance of tender.]—*Where a private tender for the purchase of property sold by order of the ct. has been accepted, the principles applicable to reopening biddings on a sale by auction by order of the ct. will be followed.—MUNSTER BANK v. MUNSTER MOTOR CO., [1922] 1 I. R. 15.—IR.

PART III. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 8.

*1. Necessity to pay money into court.]—*Where the party having the conduct of a sale, neglects to pay into ct. the deposit paid to him by the purchaser at the time of sale, the ct. will, on the application of the purchaser, order him to do so.—CROOKS v. GLENN (1860), 1 Ch. Ch. 354.—CAN.

m. Production of deeds—To one purchaser for inspection by all purchasers of lots.]—REYNOLDS v. REYNOLDS (1843), 6 I. Eq. R. 75.—IR.

*n. Right to evidence that interested persons are living.]—*A party purchasing under a decree of the ct. has a right to call for evidence showing that persons whose interests were intended to be disposed of were alive at the time of such sale, before accepting title by held by the agents of two tenants in common, one of whom was not a party to the suit.—EDMONDS v. FOLEY (LORD) (1862), 30 Beav. 282; 31 L. J. Ch. 384; 5 L. T. 709; 8 Jur. N. S. 552; 10 W. R. 210; 54 E. R. 897.

Annotation.—Apld. Kearsley v. Phillips (1882), 10 Q. B. D. 36.

412. Reference to master.—On motion to pay money into ct., the amount of purchase-money for an estate, where the title had been reported upon by the master to be sufficient, it was ordered that it should be referred back to the master to inquire when the vendor had shown a good title.—MAJOR v. WARD (1848), 10 L. T. O. S. 364.

413. — Costs of reference.—Where an estate was sold under a decree of the ct., & one of the conditions of sale was, that the purchaser pay the purchase-money into ct. on a given day, at his own expense, it was held, that the purchaser was entitled to the costs of a reference as to the title reported good by the master.—CAMDEN v. BENSON (1837), 1 Keen, 671; 48 E. R. 466.

B. By Conveyancing Counsel.

See R. S. C., Ord. 51, rr. 7–13.

414. Whether necessary.—Under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 56, the ct. has power to dispense with the rule that an abstract of title upon a sale, under an order by private contract, shall be laid before the conveyancing counsel.—GIBSON v. WOOLLARD (1854), 5 De G. M. & G. 835; 3 Eq. Rep. 152; 24 L. J. Ch. 56; 24 L. T. O. S. 137; 3 W. R. 94; 43 E. R. 1094, L. J.J.

See Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 204.

417. Notwithstanding irregularity — & defects in decree.—A purchaser under a decree not affected by irregularities & defects in the decree, by which the application of the money may not have been properly secured.—CURTIS v. PRICE (1805), 12 Ves. 89; 33 E. R. 35.

Annotations.—Follid. Baker v. Sowter (1847), 10 Beav. 343. Reid. Beloeley v. Carter (1869), 4 Ch. App. 230. Mentid. Wykham v. Wykham (1811), 18 Ves. 395; *Colmore v. T. 787; Cooper v. Kynock (1872), 7 Ch. App. 398.

418. If court decides for validity of title.—The question of title or no title being matter of opinion for the ct., the purchaser is bound by that opinion, & cannot object to take the title on the ground that the difficulty of the question on which it depends furnishes a sufficient objection to completing the purchase.—RUSHTON v. CRAVEN (1823), 12 Price, 599; 147 E. R. 821.

Annotation.—Distd. Pyrke v. Waddingham (1852), 10 Hare, 1.

419. Erroneous order.—Where realty, which was comprised in a settlement, had been in part subjected to sub-settlements, operating through powers of appointment in the original deed, & in part emanipated from all settlement, by becoming vested in persons as tenants in fee, & in other persons as mtgees. — Held: (1) an order obtained in the matter of Leases & Sales of Settled Estates Act, 1856 (c. 120), & in the matter of the estates comprised in the original settlement, for the sale of all the lands comprised therein was erroneous. Semble: if the property had all been subject to the sub-settlements, created in the manner above specified, the order would have been valid. (2) It was competent to a purchaser, before the completion of the sale, to make an objection to the title resting on such an order.

(3) Semble: if the sale had been completed, the purchaser's title would have been good under Leases & Sales of Settled Estates Act, 1856 (c. 120).

(4) Leases & Sales of Settled Estates Act, 1856 (c. 120), is applicable to a case where the settlement contains a sufficient power of sale.—Re THOMPSON'S SETTLED ESTATES, GREEN v. THOMPSON (1859), John. 418; 5 Jur. N. S. 1343; 70 E. R. 485.

420. Concurrence of party dispensed with.—An order for sale under Settled Estates Act, 1877 (c. 18), contained a direction dispensing with the concurrence or consent of the persons entitled, whether beneficially or otherwise, to any estate or interest subsequent to a certain estate tail, without naming them. The purchaser objected to the title on the ground that the order on the face of it was irregular.—Held: under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 70, the purchaser would in any event have a good title, that sect. being applicable whether the objection to the order appears on the face of it or not, & the purchaser must complete.—Re HALL DAKE'S CONTRACT (1882), 21 Ch. 421. ——By an order in an administration action the trustees of certain land were ordered to sell it with the approval of the judge, & the first mtgees. were to be at liberty to retain all the purchase-money in reduction of their charge. There were puisne incumbrances, the persons entitled to which were not parties to the proceedings. The property was sold in lots under conditions of sale which stated that the first mtgees. would join in the conveyance to the purchasers & means of a vesting order.—SLATER v. FISKEN (1857), 1 Ch. Ch. 1.—CAN.

o. Order for delivery of abstract.—On moving to make an order nisi for not delivering an abstract of title absolute, it is necessary to show that it has not been delivered to either party named in the order.—DICK v. McNAB (1858), 1 Ch. Ch. 21.—CAN.

p. Removing objections to title.—The party having the conduct of the sale represents, for the purposes of the sale, so far as the purchaser is concerned, all the other parties to the suit, & it is his duty to remove, or procure to be removed, any objection which may properly be made to the title.—STREET v. HALLETT (1876), 6 P. R. 312.—CAN.

PART III. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.

r. Where proof of title involves no difficulty.—Where the title or the proof of it is involved in no difficulty, a condition of sale that "The vendor is not to be bound to give any evidence of title or any title-deeds or copies thereof, other than such as are in his possession, or procure any abstract," was held to be very objectionable, & one which should not be sanctioned by masters even by consent.—McDONALD v. GORDON (1867), 2 Ch. Ch. 125. — CAN.

release the property from their debt, but that as the debt to the first mtgges. exceeded the probable amount of the purchase-money no subsequent incumbrance would be abstracted or released; & that the purchaser should not require the concurrence in the conveyance of any person having only an equitable interest bound by the order for sale, other than the vendors who are selling as trustees. The first mtgges., who consented to join in the conveyance, wished to insert in the grant to the purchasers the words, "according to their estate & interest in the premises & not further or otherwise," & the words, "subject to such right or equity of redemption, if any, as is subsisting in the hereditaments, & is not by these presents conveyed or released":—Held: the purchasers were protected against the equitable interests of the puisne incumbrancers by Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 70, & they were entitled to an absolute conveyance of the estate in fee simple without any qualifying words, & to a declaration that the subsequent incumbrancers were bound by the order of the ct.—MOSTYN v. MOSTYN, [1893] 3 Ch. 376; 62 L. J. Ch. 959; 69 L. T. 741; 42 W. R. 17; 9 T. L. R. 635; 37 Sol. Jo. 700; 2 R. 587. C. A.

When it is conceded that you have before the ct. every living person who could be properly made a party, the decree for sale is a good decree, & binds the interest of everybody else, whether unborn or already born, in the sense of living, but not sustaining the character of the person taking the property. In all such cases the decree binds the equity (JESSEL, M.R.).—BASNETT v. MOXON (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 182; 44 L. J. Ch. 557; 23 W. R. 915.

427. --.]—By an agreement dated Dec. 15, 1900, the vendor agreed to sell to the purchaser

428. Notwithstanding non-compliance with formalities.—After an estate has been sold by auction under a decree of ct., the purchaser's title is not to be attacked merely on the ground that the holder of the decree had not complied with all the statutory formalities for the conduct of such sale; as, for example, the want of due notice of sale; & the burden of proof of such compliance is not on the purchaser.—SINGH v. SINGH (1863), 9 L. T. 129, P. C.

430. ———.]—A. agreed to sell land to B., who accepted the title, paid part of his purchase-money, & was let into possession, but took no conveyance. A. subsequently obtained a decree against B. for sale of the property, & payment of the balance of purchase-money out of the proceeds:—Held: a purchaser under the decree could not be compelled to complete without the concurrence of the registered judgment creditors of B., whose judgments were prior to the decree, & who were not parties to the suit.—GREY-COAT HOSPITAL (GOVERNORS) v. WESTMINSTER IMPROVEMENT COMRS. Under such circumstances, notwithstanding the order of the ct. & the provisions of s. 70, that person has a good title as against the purchaser.—JONES v. BARNETT, [1900] 1 Ch. 370; 69 L. J. 435. Payment in before title accepted—Right to possession deferred.]—Notwithstanding the general rule, the ct. may, under special circumstances, permit a purchaser to pay his purchase-money into ct. before he has accepted the title; but in such case express provision must be made against his taking possession until he shall have accepted the title.—DEMPSEY v. DEMPSEY (1847), 1 De G. & Sm. 691; 63 E. R. 1253.

437. —.]—Parties interested in an estate which was sold for a large sum of money, asked that the purchaser might pay a part of the purchase-money into ct. without prejudice to objections to the title:—Held: such an order would be contrary to the rule of the ct.; & though such rule was not inflexible, the ct. refused to make the order, even with the consent of the purchaser.—OUSELEY v. ANSTRUTHER (1819), 11 Beav. 399; 18 L. J. Ch. 157; 13 L. T. O. S. 63; 50 E. R. 871.

438. — No right to possession.]—A purchaser under the ct. will not be allowed to take possession "without prejudice to objections to the title," even upon payment of his purchase-money into ct.—HUTTON v. MANSELL (1840), 2 Beav. 260; 48 E. R. 1180.

439. Application of purchase-money paid in—Right of purchaser to direct.]—A message belonged to testator, who devised his real estate in trust for sale. An adjoining message was vested in the trustees of his settlement upon trust for sale, & the purchase-money, subject to the payment of definite sums, belonged to testator's estate. Under a decree for administering testator's estate the two messages were put up for sale together in one lot, & it was provided that the purchase-money should be paid into ct. to the credit of the cause, "The proceeds of the sale of testator's real estate." The trustees of the settlement had obtained liberty to attend the proceedings as to the sale. The purchaser objected to the title on the ground that the two properties were sold together for one lump sum, without any provision for apportioning it, & that it was to be paid into ct. in a suit unconnected with the settlement:—Held: this objection was not sustainable, for the ct., having the money in its custody, would see it properly applied. The ct., however, for the satisfaction of the purchaser, ordered that the purchase-money should be apportioned, & the part apportioned to the settled message paid into ct. to a separate account.—*CAVENDISH v. Investment of purchase-money—At risk of purchaser—Unless order for investment on notice to all parties.]—Purchase-money invested under an order of the ct., obtained by the purchaser without notice to all parties, is at the risk of the purchaser—but the investment is made at the risk of the estate if the order for investment is made on a motion, of which all parties had notice.—McCANN v. FORBES (1817), 1 Hog. 13.—IR.

—Held: the purchaser was entitled to have paid to him out of the purchase-money in ct. sums in respect of the following items: (a) the costs of obtaining the orders under which he succeeded in getting possession; (b) an occupation rent for the time during which he was kept out of possession; (c) compensation for deterioration of the property during the same period; (d) arrears of tithes which he had been compelled to pay.—*THOMAS v. The conveyance generally.]—See Part IX., post.

453. Form of conveyance—Order of judge—Right to appeal.]—One of the conditions of sale of certain freehold property sold under the direction of the ct. provided that the conveyances of the respective lots should contain proper reservations & provisions & covenants by the purchasers for the purpose of securing the liabilities & rights under certain reservations & stipulations as to the property mentioned in the particulars of sale, the form of such reservations, provisions, & covenants, in case of dispute, to be settled by the judge.

A dispute arose between the vendor & a purchaser as to the form of the covenant, & the judge settled the covenant, adding a proviso that if the purchaser assigned the property purchased, & the assignee entered into a similar covenant, the purchaser should be freed from any further liability:—Held: (1) the order of the judge settling the form of the conveyance was subject to appeal; (2) the vendor was entitled to an unqualified covenant, & the proviso must be struck out.—POLLOCK v. RABBITS (1882), 21 Ch. D. 466; 47 L. T. 637; 31 W. R. 150, C. A.

454. Concurrence of Incumbrancer—Where prior concurrence in conditions of sale.]—Deft., who is an incumbrancer on an estate sold under the decree of the ct., & who has concurred in settling conditions of sale, describing such estate as to be sold free from incumbrances, will be ordered to concur in carrying the sale into effect, & to execute the conveyance of the estate to the purchaser free from his incumbrance.—TOMLIN v. HATFIELD (1839), 9 L. J. Ch. 119.

455. Concurrence of cestuis que trust—Whether necessary.]—Testator devised all his real & personal estate to trustees upon trust after the death of his wife absolutely to sell the whole of his property in such manner as they should think fit & to pay one-fourteenth part of the proceeds to each of his fourteen children at twenty-one or marriage with further provisions under which his daughters' shares were settled on them for life with remainders over. A suit having been instituted for the administration of the estate & the wife being dead an order was made in the suit for sale of part of the estate by the trustees:—Held: the concurrence of the children constituting the tenant for life under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), was not necessary upon the sale by the trustees; but even if such concurrence would be necessary the order of the ct. was sufficient to enable the trustees to sell without joining the fourteen children or any of them in the conveyance to the purchaser.—TAYLOR v. PONCIA (1884), 25 Ch. D. 646; 53 L. J. Ch. 409; 50 L. T. 20; 32 W. R. 335.

456. Death of confirmed purchaser—Conveyance to devisee.]—Where a confirmed purchaser of premises under a decree of the ct., died before any conveyance had been made to him, having in the meantime devised his interest therein to trustees, the ct. ordered that a conveyance should be made to them, without the consent of testator's heir-at-law, he being an infant.—R. v. GREGORY (1817), 4 Price, 380; 146 E. R. 497.

457. Sub-sale before conveyance—Conveyance to sub-purchaser.]—Lands having been purchased at a sale by auction under an extent, & the purchaser having resold them for a less sum than that which he had contracted to give, the ct., with the consent of the A.-G., made an order that the name of the second purchaser should be substituted in the contract, & that the conveyances should be made to him, the original consideration being expressed in the deed.—*R. v. A. made default in payment of his purchase-money, & a resale was ordered, with the usual direction that A. should make good any deficiency, & pay the costs of the resale. The order also directed that A. should be discharged from his purchase:—Held: the latter part of the order was incorrect, & it was, consequently, discharged.—*HARDING v. The purchase was by private contract, subject to the conditions of sale, & also subject to the purchase being approved by the ct. The purchase-money was a fund in ct., & after a long delay the conveyancing counsel approved of the title for the purchasers:—Held: neither party being to blame for the delay, the purchasers could not be relieved from their obligation to pay interest.—*Re NEWCASTLE & DARLINGTON JUNCTION RY. 484. Misdescription—Effect of delay.]—A suit was originally instituted by pltf. on behalf of himself & other creditors, in which a sale of certain lands, etc. was ordered for their benefit, & conditions of sale settled by the master, one of which was, that if there should appear any error or mistake in the description of the premises, or any other mistake or error whatsoever, respecting the premises or any part thereof, such mistake or error should not annul the sale, but a compensation or equivalent be given or taken, as the case might require; such compensation or equivalent to be determined by the master, in case the parties could not agree, etc. One of the lots was not sold at the sale, but afterwards by private contract, subject to the same conditions, to A. It was described as containing 14 acres, which were proved to be customary acres, or 27 statute acres. The sale was approved by the master & confirmed by the ct. Four years afterwards, a creditor presented his petition, praying for a reference to the master to ascertain & report what amount of compensation beyond the amount of the purchase-money agreed to be given, should be allowed for the excess in the quantity of land comprised in the lot purchased, or that the order might be discharged, & the premises put up for sale again:—Held: petitioner came too late, in petitioning four years after discovery.—*PRICE v. 494. Service of petition—Who must be served.]

—Defts. in a cause, where there has been a sale under a decree, ought to be served with the petition of a purchaser to be discharged from his purchase.

In Sept. 1848, a purchaser bought under a decree, & by his requisitions on the title required a receipt to be given by a trustee having power to give receipts, but who was by mistake stated in the pleadings to have disclaimed, & was not a party to the cause. Afterwards the purchaser required that the trustee should be brought before the ct. by supplemental bill. In the course of the discussions on these subjects it was objected by the purchaser that an additional cestui que trust ought to have been brought before the ct. Pltf. acceded to this, & promised that the defects complained of should be supplied & remedied by a proper supplemental suit, & petition of rehearing, in which, as all parties were amicable, a decree might be obtained in three weeks. This took place in Mar. 1849. The purchaser, in answer to the proposal, declined waiting any longer, & demanded back his deposit & costs. He then presented a petition to be discharged from his purchase; but, before the petition came on to be heard, the defects in the suit had been supplied:—Held: not a case for discharging the purchaser.—SHERWOOD v. BEVERIDGE, THURPP v. BEVERIDGE (1849), 3 De G. & Sm. 425; 13 L. T. O. S. 361; 13 Jur. 1042; 64 E. R. 545.

498. — Right to interest on deposit—Notwithstanding conditions of sale.]—A sale in chambers under a decree in a partition suit having been declared invalid on the ground that the sale took place before the certificate in answer to the inquiries directed by the decree was made:—Held: the vendors could not avail themselves of a condition enabling them if unwilling, or unable for any reasonable cause to remove or comply with any objection or requisition by a purchaser, to rescind on payment of the deposit without interest & without costs on either side; & the discharged purchaser was entitled to the stock arising from his deposit, which had been paid into ct. & invested with the dividends thereon, or the actual amount of deposit & the produce, with costs, charges, & expenses.—*POWELL v. SUB-SECT. 2.—WHEN GRANTED.

A. Irregularity in Decree.

See, now, Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 204.

500. Right to discharge—General rule.]—A purchaser under a decree is not to be relieved from his purchase, merely because there are irregularities in the decree, where there is no want of jurisdiction or parties.

Real estate was devised to & vested in trustees, in trust for certain persons, amongst whom were an infant & persons not in esse. In a suit for carrying the trusts into execution, the debts & legacies were paid out of the personal estate, before any provision was made for payment of the costs of suit. While there was personal estate remaining, & before the facts had been so ascertained as to make a sale of the real estate proper, a decree was made for the sale of the real estate for payment of the costs:—Held: although the decree was not such as would have been pronounced, on due consideration, & would have been varied upon a rehearing, yet a purchaser under it was not entitled to be discharged from his purchase, on the ground of irregularity, there being no want of jurisdiction or parties.—BAKER v. SOWTER (1847), 10 Beav. 343; 16 L. J. Ch. 333; 9 L. T. O. S. 530; 50 E. R. 614.

501. — Decree obtained by fraud.]—Very doubtful whether a purchaser for valuable consideration under a decree of ct. fraudulently obtained, though ignorant of the fraud, can protect himself, when the fraud appears on the face of the proceedings.—GORE v. STACPOOLE, STACPOOLE v. GORE (1813), 1 Dow, 18; 3 E. R. 607, H. L.

502. — Proceedings for rectification pending.]—Purchaser of estates sold under a decree, discharged, on motion, from his purchase, upon error in the decree being shown though the parties are proceeding to rectify it. Qu.: whether he is entitled to his costs.—LECHMERE v. BRASIER (1821), 2 Jac. & W. 287; 37 E. R. 637, L. C.

503. — —.]—SHERWOOD v. BEVERIDGE, THURPP v. BEVERIDGE, No. 494, ante.

504. — Want of jurisdiction.]—A trader who had freehold, copyhold, & personal estate died in Sept. 1832, leaving an infant heir. His estate was insufficient to pay his debts & charges. His partners, however, by deed, took upon themselves to pay all the debts, & secured the principal part of his property for his family. A suit was instituted for carrying the deed into execution, & the master found that it would be for the benefit of the infant heir, that the real estate should be sold, & applied in the manner mentioned in the deed. A decree was made for sale, & the infant was declared a trustee within 1 Will. 4, c. 60:—

Held: a sale under the decree could not be enforced; the ct. had no jurisdiction to order the sale; the infant was not a trustee within the Act; the purchaser was not bound to wait till the error was corrected, & the ct. therefore discharged him with his costs, charges, & expenses.—CALVERT v. GODFREY (1843), 6 Beav. 97; 12 L. J. Ch. 305; 49 E. R. 761.

510. ——— Inquiry as to necessary parties.]—A purchaser under a decree of leaseholds presented a petition to be discharged from his purchase, on the ground that a share in the property had been bequeathed upon trusts, & that the bequest appeared, by inference from the pleadings, to have been assented to; but that some of the cestuis que trust were infants, & were not before the ct. The assent was disputed:—Held: the purchaser was not entitled at once to be discharged, but only to a reference to the master as to title.—WHITFIELD v. LEQUEUTRE (1849), 3 De G. & Sm. 464; 64 E. R. 563.

511. ——— Sale under decree nisi.]—Under a decree directing the sale of an estate, which, as against T., one of defts., was only a decree nisi, & before the decree was made absolute the estate was sold, & A. was reported the purchaser: afterwards, on the application of A., an order was made by the judge discharging him from the purchase, on the ground that the decree was not absolute as against T.; pltf. immediately gave notice of a motion before the Lord Chancellor to discharge that order, & that motion having stood over a considerable time, the decree was made absolute as against T. before it was heard:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to be discharged at the time when the application was made, & he, having been once discharged by an order which was right at the time when it was pronounced, the contract could not be revived by the proceedings subsequently taken by the vendor to make the decree perfect.—COSTER v. TURNOR (1830), 1 Russ. & M. 311; 8 L. J. O. S. Ch. 98; 39 E. R. 120, L. C.

512. ——— Sale notwithstanding inquiry as to parties interested.]—By a decree for administration in a county ct. a sale of real estate devised to A. & six other persons parties to the suit was ordered, & an inquiry was directed before the registrar of the ct. as to A., who had not been heard of for many years. On an affidavit produced to the registrar showing that A. had not been heard of for seventeen years, the sale was effected without any certificate as to the result of the inquiry being made. The sale produced more than £500, & the cause was transferred to the Ct. of Ch. On motion by the purchaser to be discharged & to have his costs paid, on the ground that the sale was invalid as having been made before a certificate in answer to the inquiries had been made:—Held: A. must be presumed to be dead without issue, & as all parties interested were in fact before the ct. at the hearing, & were willing to convey, & a good title could be made independently of Partition Act, 1868 (c. 40), the purchaser was bound to accept such a title, & could not rely upon the technical informality in the decree.—RAWLINSON v. MILLER (1875), 1 Ch. D. 52; 46 L. J. Ch. 252.

513. ———.]—A decree in a partition suit directed inquiries as to the persons interested, & whether a sale would be more beneficial than a partition, & if so found, directed a sale. The sale took place before the certificate was made:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to be discharged, but the decree was not wrong in directing a sale without reserving further consideration.—POWELL v. POWELL (1874), 10 Ch. App. 130; 44 L. J. Ch. 122; 31 L. T. 737; 23 W. R. 201, L. C. & L. J.

B. Defect in Title.

514. Right to discharge.]—CALVERT v. GODFREY, No. 504, ante.

515. ——— Notwithstanding condition for acceptance of title.]—The ct. having directed a sale of certain property which had belonged to testator in the cause, it was put up for sale, under conditions of sale, which provided that the title should commence with a conveyance on sale in 1838, & that the purchaser should accept such commencement as a good substantial root of title, & not make any objection or requisition in respect of any prior title, or evidence of prior title, notwithstanding any recital or other disclosure of such prior title. The title of the vendor of 1838 being, in the opinion of the ct., bad:—Held: the purchaser was not precluded by the condition from taking the objection, & the contract for the purchase was annulled, & he was entitled to be freed from his contract, & to get all his costs.

But in a sale under the authority of the Ct. of Ch., which, above all things, ought to teach others, & set them an example of straightforward dealing, & telling the truth, & the whole truth, such a condition in the circumstances of the case, is in my opinion, binding on no one (ROMILLY, M.R.).—ELSE v. Sect. 9.—Discharge of purchaser: Sub-sect. 2, B.; sub-sect. 3. Sect. 10. Part IV. Sect. 1: Sub-sect. 1.]

1813, the purchaser of certain lots, &, after a long resistance to the title, was in 1824 compelled to pay the purchase-money into ct. & was let into possession: two years afterwards, & before the conveyances were executed, having discovered, by means of the information of third parties, a circumstance which constituted a material defect in the title, & which, there was reason to believe, had been long before known to the solr. of pltf., he obtained a reference back to the master; the master reported against the title; to the report exceptions were taken, & before the exceptions came on to be heard the vendors had cured the defect:—Held: the purchaser had a right to be discharged from his contract, & a further reference of title ought not to be directed; in a sale under a decree, the solr. of pltf., having the management of the sale, is to be considered, as between the vendors & the purchaser, to be the agent of all the parties to the suit.—DALBY v. PEARSON (1869), L. R. 7 Eq. 246.

519. — Sale of property of person of unsound mind—No consent by committee.]—On a petition presented under Leases & Sales of Settled Estates Act, 1857 (c. 120), an order was made for the sale of an estate to which A. B., a person of unsound mind, but not so found by inquisition, was entitled for life in remainder. A. B.'s brother had been previously appointed, under sect. 35 of the Act, the guardian of A. B. & of certain infants, for the purpose of consenting on their behalves to the application, & he was to be at liberty on behalf of the infants to consent. The order for the sale was made upon hearing counsel for A. B. by his guardian, & the guardian by his counsel consenting. The purchaser objected to the title on the ground that only a committee properly appointed could consent on behalf of A. B.:—Held: the objection was well founded: & a summons taken out by the vendors to compel the payment of the balance of the purchase-money, interest, & the costs, dismissed.—Re CLOUGH'S ESTATE (1873), L. SECT. 10.—COSTS.

528. Right of purchaser to costs—No reference as to title.]—Where a sale had been directed under a decree, but there was no reference to the master as to the title, & no available fund in ct.:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to be reimbursed by pltf. the costs of investigating the title & confirming the purchase.—BERRY v. JOHNSON (1837), 2 Y. & C. Ex. 564; 1 Jur. 474.

529. — Out of estate—Costs of settling conveyance from infant.]—Under a decree in a creditors' suit, the real estates of a debtor, who had died intestate, leaving an infant his heir, were ordered to be sold. The estates were accordingly sold by auction in lots. Under the conditions of sale was this note: "N. B. This sale is made by an order of the Ct. of Ch., etc., & the property being vested in an infant, the purchaser will have no covenants for title." A. purchased one of the lots:—Held: the costs attending the settling of the deed of conveyance from the infant to A. by the master, by reason of the infancy of the heir, ought to be borne by intestate's estate, & not by A.—BROWN v. LAKE (1845), 15 L. J. Ch. 34.

530. — Costs of petition to obtain purchase-money out of court.]—A purchaser under the ct., after having obtained his conveyance, ought not investigating the title, but not to interest on the one-fourth.—FEELY v. KILKENNY (1842), Fl. & K. 456.—IR.

520 viii. —.]—A purchaser who has been discharged from his purchase on report of bad title is entitled to interest on his one-fourth of the purchase-money from the date of its lodgment, up to the lodgment of the residue.—LINAHAN v. COTTER (1845), 8 I. Eq. 11. 104.—IR.

PART III. SECT. 10.

d. Right of purchaser to costs—Necessity to wait until completion.]—A person who has made a deposit upon being declared the highest bidder at a sale under a decree is outbid at a subsequent setting up to sale, he is entitled to have his deposit back to appear upon a petition to obtain the purchase-money out of ct., & he will not be allowed his costs of so doing.—BARTON v. LATOUR (1854), 18 Beav. 526; 52 E. R. 207.

531. — Costs of assignment of term—Not provided for by conditions of sale.]—On the sale of the P. estate under an order of ct., one of the conditions provided, that if the purchaser should require a conveyance of any outstanding legal estate which should not have been referred to or noticed in any of the abstracted deeds or other documents dated within the last thirty years, or of any outstanding term, all the expenses attending the getting in & conveyance of such estate, etc., should be borne by the purchaser. The P. estate was in 1823 conveyed to trustees for a term of one thousand years, to secure the payment of a sum of money, the payment of which was under orders of ct. provided for. The purchaser of the estate required an assignment of the term from the representative of the surviving trustee, on the ground that it was not satisfied, but he refused to pay the costs of such assignment:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to an assignment of the term, the costs of which, not having been provided for by the condition of sale, must be borne by the vendors.—STRONGE v. HAWKES (1856), 27 L. T. O. S. 150; 2 Jur. N. S. 388.

532. — Costs of appearance on further consideration—Purchase-money paid into court subject to shop order.]—A purchaser under the ct., who had not obtained his conveyance, paid his money into ct. subject to a stop order:—Held: he was entitled to his costs of appearance on further consideration, he having been served with notice.—NOBLE v. STOW (1861), 30 Beav. 272; 54 E. R. 894.

533. Liability of plaintiff—Where no fund in court.]—BERRY v. JOHNSON, No. 528, ante.

CREWE* (1846), 8 L. T. O. S. 153.

535. Costs of suit exceeding funds in court—Borne rateably by parties.]—Where the real estates of intestate were sold under a decree in an administration & the heir-at-law was a feme covert, who declined acknowledging the conveyance to the purchaser, in such a case where the costs of the suit exceeded the funds in the cause the ct. directed the costs of the purchasers occasioned by the refusal of the married woman to make the acknowledgment to be first taxed & paid; & subject thereto, that the costs of plffs. & defts. should be taxed & paid rateably.—*BILLING v. SECT. 1.—GENERALLY.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

See Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 46.

536. Construction of conditions—Strictly against person framing them.]—Conditions of sale must be construed strictly against the person who frames them.

A condition, that the vendor shall be at liberty to rescind the contract, if the purchaser should "show any objection of title, conveyance or otherwise, & should insist thereon": was held, not to authorise the vendor to rescind the contract, without attempting to answer the requisitions, although some of them were untenable; held, also, that he was bound to answer them, & give the purchaser an opportunity of either waiving or insisting upon them.

The vendor, notwithstanding such a condition, was held bound to comply with a requisition, that a mtgee. of the property, by underlease, should be paid off & concur in the conveyance.

A vendor has duties, in that character, which he cannot get rid of by such conditions of sale.—GREAVES v. WILSON (1858), 25 Beav. 290; 27 L. J. Ch. 546; 31 L. T. O. S. 68; 4 Jur. N. S. 271; 6 W. R. 482; 53 E. R. 647.

o. Alteration of conditions by seller—Without notice to purchaser.—STRAND WOOD CO., LTD. v. ALEXANDER, [1906] T. S. 486.—S. AF.

When property is sold in lots, described in particulars of sale, a vendee is only affected with notice of what concerns the lots which he purchases, & is not to be taken as having read all the particulars of all the lots.

Real estate, all belonging to the same owner was sold by auction under the order of the Ct. of Ch., in lots. Lot 9 was sold as building land to S., with right of way over lot 16. At the time of the sale a right of footway only existed. But by the conveyance, which was duly executed, a right of way for carts & carriages was granted. S. conveyed lot 9 with the right which had been conveyed to him to C. Lot 16 was sold to T. who had no notice that a larger easement than the original one had been conveyed to the purchaser of lot 9. C. employed a builder to carry materials with carts, etc., over lot 16, but T., the owner of the latter lot, interfered. C. accordingly filed his bill for an injunction, & T. answered & filed his cross bill for a declaration that C. was entitled to a footway only. C. had not completed his purchase. Conflicting evidence was given as to inquiries & conversations at the sale, & it appeared that C. was present during the whole of the sale & noted down the biddings; in consequence of which T. attempted to fix him with notice that lot 16 was subject only to the more limited right:—Held: C. being in possession of the legal estate, & having purchased the land as building land, was entitled to his injunction against T., who was only an equitable owner, although T. purchased subject to the limited right only, & had no notice of the larger right actually conveyed.—CURTIS v. THOMAS, THOMAS v. CURTIS (1875), 33 L. T. 664.

C. put up a leasehold house for sale by auction, at which W. & his agent attended: the house was not sold, but W. through his agent offered to the auctioneer £3,200 for the premises, which was unconditionally accepted. Upon a bill for a specific performance:—Held: the offer & acceptance formed a contract to purchase the premises; but the attendance at the previous auction & the knowledge of the conditions of sale did not make them a part of the agreement.—*COWLEY v. 554. ——— Amounting to warranty of right to convey.—Real property settled upon A. for life, with remainder to trustees upon trust for sale, & to stand possessed of the proceeds for all the children of A. equally, to be paid on their attaining twenty-one, was contracted to be sold by the trustees in the lifetime of A. A's children had attained twenty-one, & had conveyed their interests to trustees for the benefit of their children, who were minors, without any power of sale being given to such trustees. One of the conditions of sale was as follows: "The purchaser shall not object to the vendors' title on the ground that the sale is taking place in the lifetime of A. The children of A., or the assigns & trustees of such of them as have aliened or settled their estates & interests, shall, if required, join in the conveyance to the purchasers":—Held: this amounted to a warranty that the children, or those representing them, were in a condition to join in an effectual conveyance to the purchaser, & the purchaser was not precluded from relying upon this defect of title.—MOSLEY v. HIDE (1851), 17 Q. B. 91; 20 L. J. Q. B. 539; 17 L. T. O. S. 100; 15 Jur. 899; 117 E. R. 1216.

555. ——— Legal effect not stated.—Conditions of sale must express in distinct terms a difficulty of title, & therefore when a condition set out facts from which the conclusion in law was that the vendors showed no title, but this conclusion was one which would not occur to an ordinary purchaser, & was not stated in the condition:—Held: the sale could not be enforced.—WILLIAMS v. WOOD (1868), 16 W. R. 1005.

556. ————A vendor of property inserted in the conditions of sale a provision that "no objection or requisition should be made by the purchaser by reason of the non-acknowledgment of an indenture dated Dec. 18, 1841, by a married woman who was a party thereto." The effect of this was that no title would be given to one-fifth of the property. The purchaser refused to complete, & an order was asked for to compel him to do so:—Held: the condition, as framed, was misleading; the vendor should have stated explicitly that he had no title to one-fifth of the property; & the vendor could not avail himself of such a condition.—Re CUMMING TO GODBOLT (1884), 1 T. One of the conditions of sale was, that the title to the beneficial ownership to the property should commence with the will of C., dated in 1829, & the purchaser should assume that C. was at his death beneficially entitled to the property in fee simple, free from incumbrances. On an investigation of the title it appeared that C. had in 1824 contracted for the purchase of the estate, but the vendor not at that time being able to make a good title, C. took possession & invested the purchase-money, & it was not till long after the death of C. that the title was made out & the purchase-money paid:—Held: in a suit by H. for specific performance of the contract, the statement in the conditions of sale was erroneous & misleading, & was consequently not binding on the purchaser, & the bill was dismissed with costs, ut having declined to take an open reference as

560. — Omission to disclose reservation of part of estate.—Where specific execution of a contract is sought, there must have been perfect truth & the fullest disclosures by the vendor in order to entitle him to relief. The ct. will otherwise, even where there has been no intentional suppression of fact, relieve the purchaser who has been thereby deceived, provided he has acted throughout reasonably & fairly.

A building estate was offered for sale by auction, in plots, under conditions of sale which stipulated that no public-house should be erected thereon. Deft. bought one of the plots & accepted the title, but refused to complete on discovering that the whole of the vendor's estate, as had been deft.'s impression, was not included in the sale, but that a plot had been reserved, within 100 yards of deft.'s purchase, to which the vendor contended the above stipulation did not extend. This impression was produced by the conditions of sale being framed as if including the whole estate without any reservation, & also by the reserved plot not being coloured or marked with the vendor's name. Deft. thereupon refused to complete, unless with covenants on the part of the vendor including the reserved plot; & in a suit for specific performance instituted by the vendor:—Held: he could not compel deft. to execute the contract if he, pltf., insisted on retaining the plot free from any restrictive covenant; & pltf. was entitled, at his option, either to a decree for specific performance with a covenant including the reserved plot, or to have his bill dismissed, & must in either case pay the costs of the suit.—BASCOMB v. 561. — Dependent on vendor's knowledge or belief.—(1) An estate was sold by an order of the ct. in an administration action, & the vendor, the devisee in trust, who was a solr., submitted a statement of his title to one of the conveyancing counsel. One of the conditions of sale as settled by him required the purchaser to assume that B. was seised of & entitled to the property in fee simple in possession, free from incumbrances in 1835, & up to & at her death in 1861, & that it was not accurately known how she acquired the property; & it was expressly stipulated that no other title should be required or inquired into, whether in the vendor's possession, power or knowledge or not. The statement of title submitted by the vendor showed clearly that these assumptions were not based on fact, B. having been a mtgee. in possession, & having acquired a prescriptive title under Stat. Limitations by adverse possession, commencing in 1844. The purchaser having discovered these facts brought a summons to rescind his contract for purchase:—Held: the condition was a misleading condition, & he was entitled to have a good holding title notwithstanding the condition, & if the vendor elected to show that title then to have a reference to chambers to ascertain whether a good holding title could be made out; & if not, rescission of the contract.

(2) In sales made under the order of the ct., the conveyancing counsel, though in one sense the officer of the ct., is the counsel of the vendor, so that in case of a mistake, as between vendor & purchaser, the vendor is liable to the same extent as if the mistake had been made by a counsel not appointed by the ct.

(3) A vendor is not entitled by his conditions to require a purchaser to assume that which the vendor knows not to be true; a purchaser can at the most be asked to assume something of which the vendor knows nothing.—Re BANISTER, BROAD v. MUNTON (1879), 12 Ch. D. 131; 48 L. J. Ch. 837; 40 L. T. 828; 27 W. R. 826, C. A.

562. ——]—A condition of sale requiring the purchaser to assume certain facts is not misleading, if the vendor believes the facts to be true, even though the condition is intended to cover a flaw which goes to the root of the title. Subsequently to the sale vendor's solr. communicated to the purchaser information obtained from the mtgor. prior to the sale as to the intermediate title, & tending to throw suspicion on vendor's title to sell at all, whereupon the purchaser took out a summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), to have it declared that the title was not such as he ought to be compelled to accept:—Held: the condition cast upon the purchaser the burden of proving a defective title, & to relieve him from his contract, it was not enough for him to show merely that the title was doubtful or open to suspicion; & therefore, the vendor was entitled to a declaration that a good title had been shown "according to the terms of the contract."

564. ———.]—The vendor put up for sale by auction property described as “an eligible freehold investment comprising a house & shop No. 349, Whitechapel road.” One of the conditions of sale was “The property was formerly held with other property under an indenture of lease dated Jan. 31, 1672, for a term of five hundred years at a yearly rent of 1s., but the property was assigned in the year 1828 free from the rent, which has never been paid by the vendor, & the purchaser shall assume that the rent has been released & is not now charged upon the property sold. By a deed poll in 1902 under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), the property was expressed to be enlarged by the beneficial owner into a fee simple. . . . It shall be assumed that the deed poll operated as an effectual enlargement according to its tenor.” The lease was from the lord of the manor of Stepney. The facts stated in the condition were true, & the property had been assigned to the vendor in 1902 as free from the rent, but subject to the lease, but in the abstracted deeds between 1828 & 1902 it was described as held at a rent of 1s. The purchaser objected that the assumption he was required to make in the particulars was to the vendor's knowledge untrue & the statement in the particulars that the property was freehold was a misrepresentation, & brought this action for rescission of the contract & return of his deposit. It was proved at the hearing that a search in the records of the manor showed that no rent had been paid for fifty years, & there was no certain evidence that it had ever been paid at all:—Held: the vendor might reasonably believe that the property was freehold & was therefore justified in so describing it in the particulars, & then, by the conditions, requiring the purchaser to assume the facts establishing the freehold title, which the vendor knew he would have a difficulty in proving. There was therefore no misrepresentation.

It is not the function of the particulars to deal with title at all; that has to be dealt with on evidence, & it is the function of the conditions to state what evidence of title the purchaser is to have (WARRINGTON, J.).—*BLAIBERG v. 571. ——— Description of property by lots—No presumption to sell undivided estate.—After a sale by auction of a messuage & lands, one of the conditions of which was that any mistake or error in the description of the property, or any other error in the particulars, should not annul the sale, but, except where otherwise provided for by the conditions, a compensation should be given or taken, to be settled by two referees or an umpire—it was found that one of the lots contained about 20 acres more, & another about 10 acres less, than the quantity of land described in the particulars:—Held: upon the construction of the condition, the mistake or error thereby contemplated was such a mistake or error as would annul the contract; (2) the excess of the quantity of land in one of the lots, & the deficiency in the other, were both subjects of compensation within the condition; & the ct. would, if necessary, refer it to the master to settle the amount of such compensation, notwithstanding that, from the variety in the nature of the different portions of the land in which the variations occurred, there was no uniform standard for computing such amount; (3) whether a vendor could or could not in equity be relieved on the ground of mistake from a contract for the sale of lands inaccurately described as to quantity, & which description had been prepared by his solr. from former particulars & conditions relating to the same property, drawn up by another solr. on the report of a surveyor, equity would not in such circumstances enforce the contract against the vendor, unless the case should be one for compensation, & the purchaser should submit to make such compensation.

The actual designation in the particulars of the property offered for sale of the number of acres contained in a lot:—Held: to negative the presumption of any intention on the part of the vendor to sell the estate in the lump.—LESLIE v. TOMPSON (1851), 9 Harc. 268; 20 L. J. Ch. 561; 17 L. T. O. S. 277; 15 Jur. 717; 68 E. R. 503.

property with perfect accuracy & not leave it to inference.—SWAISLAND v. DEARSLEY (1861), 29 Beav. 430; 30 L. J. Ch. 652; 4 L. T. 432; 7 Jur. N. S. 984; 9 W. R. 526; 54 E. R. 694.

573. — Misrepresentation.]—In a sale by the direction of the ct. the particulars of sale stated that lot 12 comprised a house “at present in the occupation of C., at a rental of per annum £42.” The purchaser of this lot paid the deposit, & his purchase was confirmed by order absolute, & he then obtained an order for payment of the remainder of the purchase-money into ct. The purchaser afterwards discovered that C. was not tenant to the vendors, but to some person who claimed by an adverse title:—Held: the description in the particulars of sale must mean that C. was tenant to the vendors for a limited period at a given rent, & that this was a representation so different from the fact that it amounted to such bad faith on the vendor’s part as would induce the ct. to discharge the purchaser from his contract.—LACHLAN v. REYNOLDS (1853), Kay, 52; 2 Eq. Rep. 713; 23 L. J. Ch. 8; 22 L. T. O. S. 211; 2 W. R. 49; 69 E. R. 23.

574. — Effect of knowledge of purchaser.]—A house was stated in particulars of sale to be “in the occupation of the C. J. company under a lease.” The co. were in occupation by virtue of a lease, which, however, had not been granted to them, but to A., B. & C., who were their trustees. The vendor’s solr. immediately before the sale told the purchaser that he did not remember the names of the lessees, but believed that A. & B. were two of them. The purchaser objected to the title on the ground that the above-statement in the particulars amounted to a representation that the co. were the lessees:—Held: assuming the statement to be such that if the case had stood on the particulars only the contract ought to have been rescinded, the purchaser, having bought with the above information, must be held to his bargain.—FAREBROTHER v. GIBSON (1857), 1 De G. & J. 602; 44 E. R. 857, L. J.

575. ——In a sale of property under administration in the County Palatine Ct. of Lancaster, the particulars of sale described one of the lots as leasehold, held under a lease, the date & parties to which were stated. There was no attempt made to state the terms of the lease, & no mention was made of a ground rent of £43 17s. 6d., to which the lot was subject. The lot was sold at auction for £1,400. The purchaser afterwards claimed to have the sale rescinded, on the ground that the particulars being silent on the subject of ground rent, he had been misled & induced to believe that there was no ground rent, or only a nominal one. In his affidavit he stated that if he had known of the ground rent he would not have bid more than £700. The property had been previously valued at £1,450 by a professional valuer, who had taken the ground rent into account, & who at the sale bid £1,390:—Held: the particulars were misleading & the purchaser was entitled to have the sale rescinded.—*JONES v. 577. Omissions in particulars—Failure to disclose service of notices to pave.]—The omission by a vendor, without fraudulent intent, to disclose, before sale, to the purchaser of town leasehold property the fact that he, the vendor, had been served by the local authority with the usual notices under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), to pave, etc., the street fronting the premises, is not such an “omission in the particulars” tending to depreciate the value of the property as to entitle the purchaser, if he completes his purchase, to compensation under the usual general condition, where the works are not executed by the local authority, & the expenses thereof do not therefore become a charge on the premises, until after the completion of the purchase.

Qu.: whether such an omission on the part of the vendor, even though without fraudulent intent, would have afforded the purchaser sufficient ground for resisting specific performance of his contract, or for an action for rescission.

A condition of sale indemnifying the vendor against expenses “in complying with any requirement enforceable against him & made after the sale by the local authority in respect of paving, etc., the streets” is not such an implied statement that no requirement has been made by the local authority before the sale as to entitle the purchaser to relief on the ground of deception on discovering that notices under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), had been served on the vendor before the sale.—Re LEYLAND & TAYLOR’S CONTRACT, [1900] 2 Ch. 625; 69 L. SUB-SECT. 4.—TIMBER.

583. Condition to take at valuation—Timber wholly on copyhold land—Sale of land of mixed tenures.—On a contract for the sale of lands, described as partly freehold & partly copyhold, & the timber thereupon, the latter at a specified valuation, upon a condition that the vendor should not be required to distinguish the freehold land from the copyhold, nor the respective boundaries thereof, it was held that, upon the particulars & conditions, the contract for the land & timber was one contract, & not separate contracts; & that the purchaser was bound to pay for the timber at the valuation, notwithstanding the fact that it might be wholly upon the copyhold land, & therefore subject to the rights of the lord, & the restrictions of the custom.

Where, upon a contract for the sale of an estate, a separate & distinct contract is made for the sale of the timber upon it the ct. will not enforce the latter contract unless the vendor can give the purchaser such possession & dominion over the timber as will entitle him to fell & remove it; but, if an entire contract be made for the sale, both of the estate & the timber, notwithstanding the purchase-money is made up of distinct sums for each, the vendor is only bound to make out his title to the land according to the contract; & the title to the land is the title to the timber upon it.

The purchaser of undistinguished freehold & copyhold land & timber, under a single & entire contract, must be considered as estimating, in the price he pays for the land, the price he pays for the timber.—*CROSSE v. SUB-SECT. 5.—TITLE.

A. Commencement of Title.

(a) Title to Commence at Specified Time.

See, now, Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 44.

588. Meaning of forty years' title.]—Property was put up for sale by auction on June 11, 1890. The particulars described the property as "freehold." The conditions of sale provided that the title should commence with a mtge. dated July 29, 1852, & that the purchaser should within fourteen days after the delivery of the abstract send to the vendor's solrs. all his objections & requisitions as to the title, & that subject thereto, the title should be deemed to be accepted.

An abstract of title, commencing with the mtge. of July 29, 1852, was delivered to the purchaser on June 24, 1890. On July 8 the purchaser sent various objections & requisitions to the vendor's solrs. He was not satisfied with the vendor's replies, & on July 23 he delivered further requisitions. On Aug. 9 he issued a summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), asking for a declaration that his requisitions & objections had not been satisfactorily answered by the vendor, & that a good title had not been shown in accordance with the particulars & conditions of sale. On Oct. 16 the purchaser filed an affidavit in support of his summons, in which he raised as an objection to the title the existence in a deed of Mar. 3, 1847, through which the title to part of the property was traced, of a covenant restricting the right of building on that part. The purchaser had discovered the contents of this deed by means of inquiries which he had made of a third party with reference to another matter; but the objection was not mentioned to the vendor until the affidavit of Oct. 16 was filed. The ct. was of opinion that the purchaser must be deemed to have acquired notice of the covenant shortly before July 23:—Held: the purchaser having acquired notice of the restrictive covenant, would be bound by it; it formed a valid objection to the title; he was not too late in raising the objection; & he was entitled to be relieved from his contract.

Semble: as the purchaser had agreed to accept a title of less than forty years, he would, even if he had not discovered the covenant, have had constructive notice of it, since it would have been disclosed by the abstract, if a proper forty years' title had been shown.

If a purchaser chooses to take property with a thirty-eight years' title, without going any further back, he has, in my opinion, constructive notice of that which he would actually have known if he had required a forty years' title to be shown, & had investigated the title during that period. . . .

When I say a forty years' title, I mean a title deduced for forty years, & for so much longer as it is necessary to go back in order to arrive at a point at which the title can properly commence. The title cannot commence in nubibus at the exact point of time which is represented by three hundred & sixty-five days multiplied by forty. It must commence at or before the forty years with something which is in itself, or, which it is agreed shall be, a proper root of title (NORTH, J.).—Re COX & NEVE'S CONTRACT, [1891] 2 Ch. 109; 64 L. T. 733; 39 W. R. 412.

590. — Affecting purchaser from squatter.]—Neither a squatter who has acquired a good title by possession, nor a purchaser from him, is exempt from liability arising through his not insisting on & obtaining a full forty years' title. Therefore, if any purchaser under the squatter's possessory title chooses to accept less than a forty years' title, he is fixed with constructive notice of all such equities affecting the land as he would have discovered by reasonable inquiries under a title for the full period.

Thus, where, on a purchase for value of freehold land, the purchaser agreed to accept a title commencing with a possessory or squatting title acquired within forty years prior to the purchase, he was held to have constructive notice of restrictive covenants affecting the land entered into within the forty years by an owner before the squatter took possession.—Re NISBET & POTTS' CONTRACT, [1906] 1 Ch. 386; 75 L. 591. Whether purchaser entitled to documents executed before specified time.]—The vendor contracted to sell land in England under a contract fixing the commencement of title in 1874, & stating that he was selling as tenant for life under his statutory power under Settled Land Acts. The settlement in question was a compound settlement created by several instruments, some of which, including a will made in 1836, were dated or made prior to the time fixed for the commencement of title, & the last of which was a resettlement made in 1902. The vendor had, however, voluntarily furnished an abstract of all the earlier documents constituting the compound settlement except the will of 1836, which was recited in one of these documents dated in 1860. The compound settlement originally comprised land in Ireland alone, & by an order of the High Ct. of Justice in Ireland made in 1908, the present trustees were appointed trustees of the compound settlement for the purposes of Settled Land Acts. In 1910 the land in England, the subject of the contract was conveyed to the trustees & their heirs to the uses, upon the trusts & subject to the powers, charges, & provisions to, upon, & subject to which under the compound settlement the freehold lands therein comprised stood limited. The conveyance contained a statement to the effect that the purchase was made at the direction of the tenant for life out of capital moneys in the hands of the trustees arising under the compound settlement:—Held: the purchasers were precluded by Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 3 (3), from requiring production of the probate of the will of 1836 or an abstract or copy thereof.—Re ARRAN (EARL) & KNOWLESSEN & CREER'S CONTRACT, [1912] 2 Ch. 141; 81 L. J. Ch. 547; 106 L. T. 758.

596. —.]—The conditions of sale of a freehold estate provided that the title should commence with a conveyance on sale dated 1892 deducing the title by recitals from 1844; & that it appeared from such recitals that on payment off of a mtge. in 1868 no reconveyance was executed, & that in that year the estate, which was in fact of freehold tenure was assured to the vendor at the sale in 1892 by a form of assurance applicable only to copyholds, & that the purchaser should raise no objections in respect of these matters or require the legal estate, if outstanding, to be got in, but should be satisfied with the recitals. By the deed of 1892, which recited that by a voluntary settlement of 1868, the settlor covenanted to surrender the estate, which was subject to a mtge. of £700, to the use of trustees of the settlement upon trust for sale, to pay off the mtge. & thereupon to cause the estate to be conveyed or surrendered so as to vest in the trustees freed from the mtge., the estate was conveyed by the trustees to the predecessor in title of the present vendor. The mtge. was paid off, but no reconveyance was executed. The estate was purchased by the auctioneer at the present sale, who refused to complete. Upon summons by the vendor under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78):—Held: the purchaser was told he would not get the legal estate; although he might claim the legal estate by reason of the covenant to surrender & the declaration of trust for sale, he could not call upon the original settlor to pass the legal estate.—Re WILLIAMS & PARRY'S CONTRACT (1895), 72 L. 597. —.] Stipulation that no earlier title be investigated.—Upon a sale by auction of leasehold premises one of the conditions was as follows—"the lessor's title will not be shown, & shall not be inquired into." In a suit to enforce specific performance by the vendor against the purchaser the latter objected that the lessor's title appeared by Acts of Parliament produced by the purchaser, which showed that the lessors had no power to lease the premises:—Held: the condition provided that the title should not be shown, also precluded inquiry for every purpose; & specific performance was decreed.—HUME v. By the conditions of sale, no evidence was to be required of the receipt or payment or existence of the fee farm rent, other than that disclosed by a certain conveyance; "nor should any objection be taken to the title in consequence of the non-payment or non-receipt" of the fee farm rent. It was discovered that in fact the rent had not been paid or received for twenty years before the sale: & the purchaser contended that it was therefore extinguished under Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (c. 27), s. 34, & had ceased to exist at the time of the sale:—Held: he was not entitled to repudiate the contract on this ground, but must be considered to have purchased, under the conditions of sale, the chance of the rent being obtainable.—*HANKS v. 600. ————] — BEST v. HAMAND, No. 699, post.

601. ————] — A contract entered into in 1882 for the sale of freehold estate provided that the title should commence "with an indenture dated Oct. 18, 1845," & made between persons whose names were mentioned, & that the earlier title should not be investigated or objected to. From the abstract of title delivered by the vendors to the purchaser it appeared that the deed of 1845 was a conveyance by a person, who purported to be the absolute owner, of freehold & leasehold property to trustees, on trust for himself for life, & after his death on trust to sell the property, & to hold the proceeds of sale on the trusts declared by a deed of even date. An express power was reserved to the grantor to revoke the trusts. The deed was a voluntary one, except for the consideration which resulted from the liability assumed by the trustees in respect of the leaseholds:—Held: inasmuch as the fact that the deed of 1845 was a voluntary one would influence the purchaser in determining whether he would agree to accept a title commencing within forty years, the vendors ought to have stated in the condition of sale the nature of the deed; the omission to state this rendered the condition a misleading one; & the purchaser was not bound by the contract to accept a title commencing with that deed.

602. ————] — Upon a sale of land as belonging to the vendors in fee one of the conditions of sale provided that the title should commence with a conveyance dated in 1869, & that the prior title "shall not be required, investigated, or objected to." The purchaser refused to complete his purchase, & took out a summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), for the return of his deposit, on the ground that he had discovered aliunde that, by reason of the will of testator, who died prior to 1869, the grantor in the deed of 1869 had only a life estate in the property, & that consequently the vendors could not show a title to the fee:—Held: the purchaser was bound by the condition; it precluded him from raising the objection to the title, & the summons must be dismissed.—Re NATIONAL PROVINCIAL BANK OF ENGLAND & MARSH, [1895] 1 Ch. 190; 71 L. 603. ————] — Defect discovered aliunde.—T. becoming possessed of certain copyhold premises, mortgaged the same to P., & by the indenture of mtge. covenanted to surrender them into the hands of the Dean & Chapter of W., the lords of the manor, to the use of deft., who was to be a trustee to sell the premises, in the event of default being made in payment of the mortgage money. T. made no surrender in pursuance of the above indenture, but died after devising all his real property to certain trustees; subsequently to the death of T., the lords of the manor, at the nomination of deft., granted the property in question to certain persons upon the said trusts, etc., mentioned in the indenture of mtge. T., in his lifetime, surrendered other property to the lords of the manor, by way of mtge. to C., in consideration of a loan of £100, & by an indenture of even date, covenanted, amongst other things, to repay the money borrowed, & gave the mtgee. a power of sale, in case of default in payment of the money. That indenture was stamped with an ad valorem stamp of £1 10s. Deft. sold the whole of the above property to pltf. under the following conditions of sale:—that he should deduce a good title to the premises for the lives by which they were held under the Dean & Chapter of W.; but that no earlier or other title should be deduced, or any deed or document produced anterior to the last copy of court roll, by which the premises were granted:—Held: deft. showed no title in himself, as no surrender of the premises had been made to his use by T., & the vendee was not precluded by the conditions of sale from making this objection to the title, as it appeared on the face of the abstract delivered.

By the conditions of sale the defendants are not bound to produce any earlier title deed than the last copy of court roll: that protects them from any other title anterior to that court roll: but still pltf. is at liberty to show aliunde that the title is void (ABINGER, C.B.).—*SELICK v. Deft. having agreed to purchase the premises, discovered that W. had previously to May 1, 1869, mortgaged the premises. Deft. objected that the legal estate being outstanding, W. had no power to grant the lease of May 1:—Held: deft. was not precluded by the condition from taking the objection, & he was not bound to complete the purchase.—*WADDELL v. 619. —[—]—Pltf. purchased a house & premises at a sale by auction. The third & fourth conditions of sale stipulated that the vendors would deliver an abstract of title, commencing with a conveyance of the property to J. D. dated in Jan. 1800; that the quantities, which in the particulars of sale were stated to be 76 feet frontage & upwards of 217 feet into the main road, were to be taken, more or less. The fifth condition stated that the said J. D. died in 1800, having devised the property to his wife for life or widowhood; that he appeared to have made no devise of the reversion, & the property had been since dealt with on that supposition. The abstract of title traced the title from J. D. through his sons & co-heirs-at-law, the property being gavel-kind. J. D. had made a will, by which he devised the property in question to his wife for life, or so long as she should remain a widow; & with the rest, residue & remainder of the produce of the sale of certain other property directed to be sold, after payment of certain legacies, he directed the same to be placed at interest, & he gave to his wife for life or widowhood the whole of such interest; & after her decease or second marriage, to his three sons & his said daughter Ann, equally to be divided between them, share & share alike; but if the share of his said daughter should not be legally claimed within three years after his wife's decease, then to his said three sons equally, or the survivors of them. The title deeds stated the property to be only 204 feet in depth:—Held: the fifth condition precluded pltf. from objecting that the persons beneficially interested in the property should join in the conveyance, & the slight difference as to measurement between the particulars & the title deeds was not material.—LETHBRIDGE v. C. Other Conditions.

626. Stipulation by vendor to give satisfactory title—Purchaser confined to usual objections.]—A stipulation to give such a title as shall be satisfactory to the purchaser, does not authorise the purchaser to make any other than the usual objections to the title.—LORD v. STEPHENS (1835), 1 Y. & C. Ex. 222; 160 E. R. 90.

627. Condition that parties to be bound by recitals of fact.]—As it appears from condition 7 that the parties are to be bound by any recitals of fact, they are clearly bound by this statement, that J. was admitted tenant-in-tail & not to a fee simple conditional (WOOD, V.-C.).—*GOOLD v. 629. —.]—Trustees for sale sold by auction certain leasehold properties. One of the conditions of sale stipulated that no objection should be made if any lease was an underlease, or that the premises were held on the same lease with other property, or that the same were liable to superior rents or covenants. A purchaser objected to this condition as depreciatory:—Held: the solr. who prepared the conditions should have ascertained whether the leases were underleases or not; there should have been a statement of fact as to each lot, & not, as this was, a statement which might apply to any of the lots; & this was a depreciatory condition, & ought not to have been inserted by trustees. —Re RAYNER'S TRUSTEES & GREENAWAY (1885), 53 L. T. 495.

630. Condition providing for evidence of payment of charge—Whether purchase bound.]—Copyholds were sold with a condition that "no evidence shall be required of the payment or discharge of any legacy or sum of money charged on the property which became payable twelve years or upwards prior to the day of sale." The court rolls contained an entry of a conditional surrender by way of mtge. made in 1865 by the predecessor in title of the vendors. The mtgee. had not been admitted & no payment or acknowledgment in respect of either principal or interest had been made for more than twelve years prior to the day of sale:—Held: the condition precluded the purchaser from requiring the conditional surrender to be vacated by satisfaction being entered on the court rolls in the usual way.—HOPKINSON v. CHAMBERLAIN, [1908] 1 Ch. 853; 77 L. J. Ch. 567; 98 L. T. 835.

631. Representation of limited title of vendor.]—A lease contained an agreement that the lessee should have the right of purchasing the premises of the lessor at any time during the term, to which was added, "it being understood that B., the lessor, is possessed of the same premises for his own life & the life of Mrs. M. & the survivor of them":—Held: this amounted to an agreement for title to an estate for the lives of B. & Mrs. M.

With reference to the agreement for title, it is suggested that deft. does not undertake to show title because the earlier part of the agreement is silent upon the subject. But the subsequent words cut down what would otherwise be an absolute agreement for title into an agreement to deduce a limited title only. Those words cannot be taken as a mere idle statement because then pltf. would undertake to pay a considerable rent upon the chance of deft. having any or no estate (MAULE, J.).—WORTHINGTON v. WARRINGTON (1848), 5 C. B. 635; 3 New Pract. Cas. 42; 17 L. J. C. P. 117; 10 L. T. O. S. 415; 136 E. R. 1027; subsequent proceedings (1849), 8 C. B. 134.

Annotation:—Reid. Doe d. Croft v. Tiddbury (1854), 14 C. B. 301.

632. Condition for assignment of "the beneficial interest."]—Where the conditions of sale provided that the purchasers of a leasehold should be satisfied with an assignment of the beneficial interest only, & the legal estate was outstanding in trustees, who, at the time of the sale, were dead. On a claim filed by the vendor:—Held: the purchaser was not bound to complete the contract without administration being taken out by the vendors to the survivor of the trustees; & though the vendor only undertook to convey the beneficial interest, & not the legal estate, yet the whole beneficial interest was to be assigned, & it could not be ascertained whether the vendor could assign it till there was a personal representative to the survivor of the trustees.

The subject-matter of the contract is the beneficial interest in the leaseholds. Now it is "the beneficial interest" not "such beneficial interest as the vendors have" that is stated in the conditions of sale. If it were the latter, the vendors might probably insist upon the purchaser completing the contract without their being at the expense of taking out administration to the survivor of the trustees; but it is not so (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—SMITH v. ELLIS (1850), 15 L. T. O. S. 451; 14 Jur. 682.

633. Condition precluding requisition as to one document.]—On a sale of a public-house by a co. it appeared upon the investigation of title that the co. had previously purchased the public-house in question, with other property, from one of their own directors, under circumstances which might have rendered the transaction voidable at the option of the shareholders of the co. One of the conditions of sale under which the co. sold to defts. contained a statement that a memorandum of a certain character had been indorsed upon a trust deed; & precluded defts. from making requisitions or inquiries as to the deed in question. The memorandum was in fact insufficient, & defts. claimed that they were not bound by the conditions of sale. There were also certain debentures upon the assets of the co. which were not disclosed by the abstract of title. The co., however, assented to the demand by defts. that the debenture holders, & also the shareholders of the co., should join in the conveyance. Defts. having subsequently repudiated the contract, the co. brought an action for specific performance:—Held: defts. were not entitled to rescind on the ground of the nature of the original sale to the co., having regard to the fact that the debenture holders & shareholders would concur in the conveyance; assuming the condition of sale as to the

634. Estate "free from incumbrances"—Resolution by local authority registered as land charge.—By clause 1 of a contract, dated Dec. 10, 1926, the purchaser agreed to purchase certain premises "for an estate in fee simple absolute, free from incumbrances," except as thereafter mentioned. Clause 2 provided that the property was sold subject to the restrictive & other covenants contained or referred to in a conveyance, dated Sept. 28, 1925. The deposit was paid by the purchaser on the same day. Shortly before the date fixed for completion the purchaser discovered that the property was included in the area proposed to be dealt with by the local authority by a resolution dated Oct. 26, 1925, under Town Planning Act, 1925 (c. 16), s. 2, which resolution had been registered as a land charge under Land Charges Act, 1925 (c. 22), in Jan. 1926. Neither the vendor nor the purchaser was aware of the existence of this resolution at the date of the contract.

On an application by the purchaser for a declaration that the vendor had not shown a good title to the property sold in accordance with the contract & for repayment of the deposit:—Held: the mere passing & registration of the resolution by the local authority did not operate to impose on the land any subsisting incumbrance within the meaning of clause 1 of the contract; the sects. of the Act of 1925 showed that the purpose of the registered resolution was not so much to impose restrictions on the land as a prevent unreasonable claims being made by persons who bought up land subject to the scheme; & there was nothing like an interference with the property which made it different from that which was contracted to be sold; even if the registered resolution was an incumbrance, it was an incumbrance of such a nature that the purchaser must, under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 198, be deemed to have contracted with actual notice of its existence, & was therefore precluded from refusing to complete the contract.—Re FORSEY & HOLLEBONE'S CONTRACT, [1927] 2 Ch. 379; 91 J. SUB-SECT. 6.—ABSTRACT OF TITLE.

A. Time for Delivery.

(a) In General.

635. Whether time of the essence of the contract.—A seller of an estate ought to be prepared to produce his title deeds at the particular day. A Court of Equity, indeed, will, under particular circumstances, enlarge the time; but then those circumstances, entitling him to such indulgence, must clearly appear (LORD KENYON).—BERRY v. YOUNG (1788), 2 Esp. 640, n.; 170 E. R. 482.

RICHARDSON, [1907] V. L. R. 218.—AUS.

m. Condition for production of only certain title deeds & abstract.—A clause in the conditions of sale that the vendors shall only produce certain title deeds & an abstract of the registrar, & that the purchaser shall not be entitled to call for any other proof of title, does not exempt the vendors from showing otherwise a good title.—CANADA PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY v. WALLIS (1880), 8 Gr.

636. —.]—Conditions of sale stated that an abstract of title would be furnished within seven days from the day of sale on the application of the purchaser for the same, & provided that all objections should be taken within eight days of such delivery or be considered as waived. The purchaser's solr. called for the abstract two days after the sale, but owing to the estate being in mtgce. & the mtgee. being abroad, the abstract was not delivered till thirteen days after the sale. The purchaser brought an action for the deposit. The vendor filed a bill for specific performance & an injunction:—Held: the time of the delivery of the abstract was not of the essence of the contract, the importance of stipulations as to time being differently regarded in cls. of law & equity.

Time may be made to be of the essence of a contract, by express stipulation between the parties, by the nature of the property, or by surrounding circumstances, showing the intention of the parties that the contract was to be completed within a limited time. The question here is, whether in the absence of any of these circumstances, time is to be considered of the essence of the contract. I have always considered that the ct. looks at the substance, & not at the mere form of a contract (TURNER, L.J.).—ROBERTS v. BEURY (1853), 3 De G. M. & G. 284; 22 L. J. Ch. 398; 20 L. T. O. 637. Duty of purchaser to ask for delivery.—Neither deft. demanded nor pltf. tendered, the abstract immediately. I do not agree, that it is solely incumbent upon the vendor to move by making a tender of the abstract. Something is also incumbent upon the purchaser, to ask for it (GRANT, M.R.).—GUEST v. HOMFRAY (1801), 5 Ves. 818; 31 E. R. 875.

638. Time stipulated for delivery—At one of several places—What is good compliance.—Where a vendor covenants to deduce a good title at A., B. or C., on or before a certain day, a plea that he was ready to deduce a good title at that time, without averring notice to the covenantee at which place he would be ready to deduce such title, is insufficient.

So, a plea that by a subsequent agreement, not under seal, made before breach, the time for deducing such title had been enlarged, & deft. was ready to deduce such title within the enlarged time. So, a plea that in consideration deft. would deduce a good title & convey after breach pltf. agreed to accept such title & conveyance at a later day.—RIPPINGHALL v. LLOYD (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 742; 2 Nev. & M. K. B. 410; 110 E. R.

642. —.]—Time will, in equity, be deemed of the essence of the contract, in all cases where it can be collected from the terms of the contract, that the parties intended that the time for its completion should be strictly adhered to. But where, upon an agreement for the purchase of an estate, the parties entered into a stipulation that an abstract of title should be delivered immediately, & that, in case the contract was not completed by a given day, the purchaser should be released from his contract, & the abstract was not immediately delivered, but communications on the subject of the title were continued between the parties until the time limited by the contract had expired :—Held : under these circumstances, the benefit of the stipulation as to time was waived by the purchaser.—HIPWELL v. 644. Abstract of such title as available at time of delivery.—BLACKBURN v. SMITH, No. 668, post.

645. —.]—By the conditions of sale of leasehold property, it was provided, amongst other things, that an abstract of the title of the vendors should be delivered to the purchaser on the tenth day after the sale; & that, "if any requisition on or objection to the title of any lot be made, whether arising out of the abstract furnished or otherwise, which the vendors may be unable or unwilling to remove or comply with, it shall be in the option of the vendors, by notice in writing to be given to the purchaser, to rescind the contract, unless such purchaser shall, within ten days after such notice shall have been given, waive such objection or requisition; & in case such purchaser shall not, within ten days after such notice shall have been given, waive such objection or requisition, the deposit money shall thereupon be returned to such purchaser, but without any interest, costs, or expenses." The abstract delivered showed the title to be in the vendors jointly with the exors. of deceased partner. The purchaser thereupon required that the exors. should join in the conveyance. It was afterwards discovered that two years before the exors. had released to the vendors all their interest in the property of the firm, & the purchaser was furnished with a further abstract of that deed. Conceiving that deed to be insufficiently stamped, the purchaser still required that the exors. should be conveying parties. This they refused, & thereupon the vendors gave the purchaser notice, under the above condition, that they elected to rescind the contract, & offered to return the deposit money. In an action against the vendors for not delivering a proper abstract, the deposit having been paid into ct. :—Held : the purchaser was entitled to recover for the breach of contract, but only, under the circumstances, to nominal damages.—STEER v. CROWLEY (1863), 14 C. B. N. S. 337; 2 New Rep. 128; 32 L. J. C. P. 191; 9 Jur. N. S. 1292; 11 W. R. 861; 143 E. R. 475.

646. — Good title not essential.—A condition of sale was that in case the purchaser should raise objections to the title which the vendor should not be able or willing to remove, the vendor might rescind the contract on notice & repayment of the deposit to the purchaser; & objections not delivered within fourteen days after delivery of the abstract to be treated as waived, in which respect time was to be essential. The purchaser returned the abstract with queries within the fourteen days, & the vendor answered the queries; the purchaser on the same day objected to the answers; the correspondence on the subject of the title continued for several weeks, & then the vendor gave notice that he rescinded the contract :—Held : (1) the continuance of the treaty for the completion of the title after the first objection of the purchaser was a waiver of the condition as to his rescinding of the contract; (2) such a condition of sale ought to be discouraged & ought not to receive a construction oppressive on the purchaser; (3) the vendor's right to rescind the contract under the condition must be co-extensive with the purchaser's right to object to the title under the same condition.

Semble : the vendor was only bound bond fide to deliver an abstract of such title as he had at the time of delivering it; & so long as the condition remained in force, was not bound to deliver any supplemental abstract of title afterwards acquired.

If by the expression "perfect abstract" is meant the most perfect abstract in the vendor's possession, actual or constructive, at the time of his delivering it, I should probably accede to pltf.'s argument; for, undoubtedly, a ct. of equity would not permit a vendor, who had a good title, & the means of showing such title on his abstract, fraudulently to deliver an imperfect abstract to which objections would necessarily be taken; & upon these objections being taken, avail himself of his own fraud to avoid his contract, under the condition (WIGRAM, V.-C.).—MORLEY v. 647. — —.]—Deft., with A., since deceased, sold a farm to pltf. under conditions of sale; by the third condition it was stipulated that the vendors should deliver an abstract of title within seven days, & "all objections & requisitions not stated in writing & delivered to the vendor's solr. within fourteen days from the delivery of the abstract shall be considered as waived, & in this respect time shall be of the essence of the contract," & by the fourteenth condition, "if the purchaser shall fail to comply with these conditions, his or her deposit shall be thereupon actually forfeited to the vendors," who were to be at liberty to resell, & recover any deficiency & the cost of resale from the purchaser. Pltf. paid a deposit of £300. An abstract of title was delivered within seven days; & from the abstract it appeared that the vendors sold as trustees under a will which devised the estate to them on trust to pay the income to F., testator's son-in-law, for life, or to permit him to receive the same, & after his decease, on trust to sell the estate, & hold the produce "upon the trusts for the children of F. as therein mentioned"; it was further stated in the abstract that F. would join in conveying the property. It was objected by the purchaser, but not till after the expiration of fourteen days from the delivery of the abstract, that F. being still alive, the vendor's power of sale had not arisen. It subsequently appeared that the trusts of the will as to the produce of the sale were for the benefit of such of the children of F. by H., testator's daughter, who should be living at testator's death, to be paid to them at twenty-one, or, if daughters, at twenty-one or on marriage, with limitations over for the benefit of survivors on the death of any child under twenty-one or before marriage. There were eight children of F. & H. living at testator's death, of whom some had since married & settled their shares. In an action brought by the purchaser to recover his deposit:—Held: he was entitled to succeed on the ground that no complete abstract had been delivered.

Provided a vendor gives a true abstract of the title which he has at the time, the abstract is good, although the title shown by it is bad (POLLOCK, C.B.).—WANT v. STALLBRASS (1873), L. R. 8 Exch. 175; 42 L. J. Ex. 108; 29 L. T. 293; 21 W. R. 685.

648. ———. —Deft., in Mar. 1868, as surviving devisee in trust, sold by auction to pltf.'s testator land & tolls, lots 3 & 4, under certain conditions. Condition 3 provided that the vendors were to deliver to the purchaser an abstract of title within seven days from the sale, the purchaser was to make his objections & requisitions within twenty-one days of the delivery of the abstract, & all objections & requisitions not made within that time were to be taken to be waived; "& in case any purchaser shall make any objection or requisition on the title of the respective lots which the vendors shall be unwilling or unable to answer or comply with, the vendors reserve to themselves the option, notwithstanding they may have attempted to answer or comply with such objections or requisitions, or may have partly done so, at any time to rescind the contract for the sale of the lot or lots, in respect of which such objections or requisitions shall be made, upon repaying or tendering to such purchaser or purchasers the deposit money, without interest, costs, or expenses, in full of all claims or demands for the investigation of title or otherwise." An abstract was delivered, on which the purchaser made & insisted on two objections, of which one, as to lot 3, was frivolous, & the other, as to lot 4, was an objection as to quantity, in respect of which he was, under another condition, only entitled to compensation, which was offered. Deft. thereupon, on July 24, filed a bill in Chancery for specific performance, & the purchaser on Sept. 23, put in an answer, in which he reiterated his objections, & also objected to complete on the ground of certain transactions affecting lot 4 which had not been disclosed by the abstract. These transactions were known to the vendor at the time of the sale, & were intentionally but bonâ fide omitted from the abstract, as it was supposed they did not affect the title. The contents of the deeds relating to these transactions were first communicated to pltf. by an affidavit, made by deft. in this action under an order for discovery; but the deeds were previously known to his attorney, who had been a clerk in the office where they were prepared. On Dec. 2 the purchaser died; on Jan. 26, 1869, the vendor's solr. wrote to the solr. of the purchaser requesting particulars of the probate of his will; & on Feb. 12, the vendor, now deft., announced his intention to rescind, & afterwards formally rescinded the contract & tendered the deposit. An order was made in the suit that deft., pltf. in the suit, should revive it or that the bill should be dismissed without costs, & the suit not being revived, the bill was dismissed accordingly. In an action brought by pltf. against deft. for not deducing a good title, & for fraudulently representing that he had & would deduce a good title, the arbitrator, to whom the facts were referred, having negatived fraud:—Held: deft. had, by filing his bill, elected not to rescind on any of the original objections, but the third condition applied to all objections to the title whether appearing on the abstract or not; deft. was, therefore, entitled to rescind on account of the objection as to lot 4 raised by the answer, & founded on the transactions which were omitted from the abstract; & the delay from the filing of the answer on Sept. 23, 1868, to Feb. 12, 1869, was not unreasonable. Qu.: whether, if an action had been brought against deft. for breach of his contract to deliver a true abstract, pltf. could, under the circumstances, have recovered substantial damages.—*GRAY v. 649. ———. —In 1884 two leases were granted to a co. from which the present vendors derived title. In the same year the co. went into liquidation for the purposes of reconstruction, & sold all its assets, including the leases, to a new co. of the same name; but there was no formal assignment of the leases, & the old co. was shortly afterwards dissolved. In 1901 these leases were sold by order of the ct., subject to conditions which limited the time for sending in requisitions & objections to title. After the prescribed period the purchaser objected that the vendors had shown no legal title to the leases. The lessor had received rent from the new co. & its successors in title from 1884 until the present time, & the vendors offered to procure the consent of the lessor to the assignment of the leases to the purchaser:—Held: the purchaser was precluded by the conditions from insisting upon his objection as to the outstanding legal estate, which had become vested in the Crown as bona vacantia, inasmuch as the objection related, not to the root of the title, but to the subsequent devolution thereof.

It appears to me to have been the most perfect abstract the vendors could furnish at the time of its delivery; & that being so, the abstract is not imperfect or insufficient because it shows a defective title, or even no title at all (JOYCE, J.).—*PRYCE-JONES v. 650. Difficulty of obtaining skilled persons to abstract title during war time.—By an agreement made in Sept. 1915, the vendor as tenant for life in possession under an indenture of settlement of June 28, 1895, agreed for the sale to the purchasers of the T. estates for an estate in fee simple in possession, together with certain mineral rights. It was provided that the vendor should deliver an abstract of his title to the property agreed to be sold & that the title should commence with the indenture of settlement, the prior title not to be investigated or made the subject of any requisition or objection except at the purchasers' expense. The preparation of a complete abstract involved the examination of a very large number of documents; & questions having arisen as to what was the obligation of the vendor in respect of the abstract:—Held: the vendor was only bound to furnish abstracts or copies of leases or tenancy agreements & of conveyances reserving minerals executed after June 28, 1895; & such obligation of the vendor would, in view of the difficulty at the present time of obtaining skilled persons to abstract documents, be satisfied by the delivery as part of the abstract of the counterparts of leases or tenancy agreements & the completed drafts of conveyances.—BOND v. BASSETT (1917), 87 L. J. Ch. 160; 117 L. T. 551.

653. — With interest—Failure to deliver within reasonable time.]—On Aug. 25, 1890, a contract was entered into for the sale of a farm, of which the purchaser was to have personal possession at or soon after Michaelmas, 1890. The contract provided for the delivery of an abstract of title, but was silent as to the period within which such delivery was to take place. Some abstracts were sent on Aug. 27, but, as was pointed out by the purchaser's solrs. on Aug. 30, the title to a part of the property was not then properly shown. After another request for a further abstract the deeds in the vendor's possession were sent to the purchaser's solrs. on Sept. 4. After further requests for the title the purchaser's solrs., on Oct. 13, gave the vendor's solr. a notice in writing that unless a proper abstract was sent within fourteen days the purchaser would treat the contract as at an end, & require a return of his deposit & damages for the breach of contract. On Oct. 16, the vendor's solr. sent an abstract of title, but this, as pointed out by the purchaser's solrs. on Oct. 20, did not refer to the title called for. No abstract of this title was sent until Nov. 29, & on Dec. 2 all the abstracts were returned to the vendor's solr. The purchaser shortly afterwards brought an action for the return of his deposit & for damages:—Held: the period of fourteen days, mentioned in the notice of Oct. 13, was a reasonable period within which to require delivery of a proper abstract; & no proper abstract being delivered within that period, the purchaser was entitled to rescind the contract & recover his deposit & the expenses of investigating

The conditions of sale under which a purchase was made provided that the abstracts should be delivered within twenty-one days from the day of sale. When seventy-eight days had expired without any abstract having been delivered, the purchaser gave notice to the vendor that he declined to complete. After one hundred & eighteen days had elapsed, abstracts of the title to some of the lots were delivered to the purchaser, & the abstract of the remaining lot was delivered a fortnight later, but were returned by the purchaser on the same days on which they were delivered. On a bill to enforce specific performance of the contract:—Held: as the vendor had failed to deliver the abstracts within a reasonable time after the day named, he could not enforce the contract against the purchaser, & the bill must be dismissed with costs.—VENN v. CATTELL (1872), 27 L. T. 469.

657. Purchaser relieved of condition as to time for objections.]—By conditions of sale it was stipulated that the vendor of an estate which was sold in lots should deliver an abstract of the title to the purchasers, & deduce a good title; but that as to a part of the estate, acquired under an inclosure, he should not be bound to show any title thereto prior to the award; & it was further stipulated that the vendor should deliver up to the largest purchaser in value all the title deeds & other documents in his custody, but should not be required to produce any original deed or other documents than those in his possession & set forth in the abstract:—Held: on the construction of these conditions, they did not relieve the vendor from his liability to verify the title shown upon the abstract by producing the title deeds themselves, or, if any of them were not in his possession, by other satisfactory evidence.—*SOUTHBY v. D. Other Cases.

660. Right to possession of abstract—On refusal to complete purchase.]—Upon a contract for the sale of an estate, the title & abstract to be made at the vendor's expense, the purchaser is entitled to the custody of the abstract, until either the purchase is finally rescinded by consent, or declared impracticable by a ct. of equity. When the contract is determined, the abstract becomes the property of the vendor. If the sale proceeds, the abstract is the property of the vendee. But an opinion written thereon, as it was necessarily written on the seller's paper by his consent, continues the property of the purchaser. A proviso that in case the vendor of an estate cannot deduce a good title, or the purchaser shall not pay the money on the appointed day, the agreement shall be utterly void, gives an option to the vendor to rescind the sale, in case the vendee does not pay the money, & to the purchaser to rescind, in case the vendor does not make a title, but not vice versa.—*ROBERTS v. 663. Effect of delay in delivery of abstract—On liability for interest on purchase-money.]—The declaration stated that by certain arts. of agreement pltf. agreed to sell, & deft. to purchase, a piece of land, & pltf. agreed to deliver an abstract of title & to deduce a clear title within a month from the signing of the contract, or from being required so to do; that deft. agreed to pay a portion of the purchase-money on the signing of the contract, & the residue on or before a future fixed day, & to pay interest in the meantime half-yearly; & that pltf. did, within one month from being required, deliver an abstract of title & deduce a clear title. Breach, non-payment by deft. of half a year's interest. Plea, that pltf. did not deliver an abstract of title & deduce a clear title in manner & form, etc. Upon demurrer, for immateriality & duplicity:—Held: the plea was bad, for raising an immaterial issue, the delivery of the abstract & the deduction of title not being a condition precedent to the payment of the money.—DICKER v. JACKSON (1848), 6 C. B. 103; 17 L. J. C. P. 234; 11 L. T. O. S. 222; 12 Jur. 541; 136 E. R. 1190.

g. Right to verification of abstract.]
—Before an abstract was asked for, the purchaser had sold small portions of the land, & he & his vendee had cut down some of the wood thereon; but

SUB-SECT. 7.—REQUISITIONS.

A. Time for Requisitions and Objections.

(a) In General.

664. Whether time essence of contract.]—(1) In a condition of sale, that objections to the vendor's title are to be sent in within a given time, time is of essence of the contract.

(2) The "delivery of an abstract" is the furnishing by a vendor of a document which contains with sufficient fullness the effect of every instrument which constitutes part of his title.

(3) If the condition is not observed, if an abstract is not delivered within the time specified, the purchaser has a right to say, "The vendor has not performed the conditions, & therefore I repudiate the purchase." On the other hand, if the vendor has performed the condition of delivering the abstract within the specified time, or if he has not, if the abstract were accepted, & that condition waived by the purchaser, then if the purchaser does not deliver his objections, or if he does deliver his objections, if there be any objection not contained in what are so sent in, but afterwards thought of, such objection shall be considered as waived, & the title to that extent accepted (KINDERSLEY, V.-C.).—OAKDEN v. PIKE (1865), 34 L. J. Ch. 620; 12 L. T. 527; 11 Jur. N. S. 666; 13 W. R. 673.

665. Where no time stipulated—Delivery must be within reasonable time.]—Specific performance refused on the laches & trifling conduct of pltf.; the contract being for a sale to pltf. under a bkpey. of a reversionary interest for life, which in the interval fell into possession. Defts. having also been in some degree remiss, the bill was dismissed without costs upon delivering up the agreement.—SPURRIER v. HANCOCK (1799), 4 Ves. 667; 31 E. R. 314.

Annotations:—Refd. McDonald v. Hanson (1806), 12 Ves 277; Southcomb v. Exeter (3p.) (1817), 16 L. J. Ch. 378.

666. ——— Effect of unreasonable delay.]—A purchaser having retained the abstract for five months, made no objections to the title, but simply required the vendor to verify the abstract with the title deeds:—Held: he must be deemed to have accepted the title.—PEGG v. WISDEN (1852), 16 Beav. 239; 20 L. T. O. S. 174; 16 Jur. 1105; 1 W. R. 43; 51 E. R. 770.

Annotation:—Refd. Green v. Sevin (1879), 13 Ch. D. 589.

667. From when time runs.]—(1) All objections to a title were to be taken within twenty-one days from the delivery of the abstract, or be deemed waived, & time was, in that respect, to be considered the essence of the contract:—Held: the twenty-one days did not begin to run, until a perfect abstract had been delivered.

(2) A mtgee. had a power of sale in case of default being made in payment of mtge. money:—Held: the unsupported solemn declaration, under Statutory Declarations Act, 1835 (c. 62), of the mtgee. alone, of a default having been made, was not sufficient evidence of that fact, as between vendor & purchaser.—HOBSON v. BELL, GLENN v.

668. — From delivery of proper abstract.]

By agreement in writing, deft. agreed to sell & pltf. to purchase, a piece of land, & to pay part of the purchase-money down, & the remainder on a future day; & it was agreed that pltf. should have immediate possession, & that deft. should furnish pltf. with a full & sufficient abstract of title to the land, & upon payment of the balance of the purchase-money, a conveyance of the fee simple should be made: that all objections to, & requisitions in support of the title, not delivered in writing in a month after the delivery of the abstract, should be deemed to be waived. Pltf. paid the deposit, & took possession of the land. Deft., in due time, delivered an abstract, containing a statement of all the deeds, etc., in his custody, power, or knowledge, but tracing the title for a period less than sixty years, & showing it to be in a trustee. No objection was made within the month. Afterwards the trustee died intestate; & it not appearing in whom the legal estate vested, pltf. gave notice that he rescinded the contract, & brought an action to recover back the deposit, & in one count of the declaration, declared specially on the agreement, & assigned as a breach the non-delivery of a "full & sufficient abstract" of deft.'s title to the land, which was traversed by a plea:—Held: no objection having been made within the month, the issue was satisfied by the abstract delivered, it having been a full & fair statement of all the muniments which deft. had in his possession, power, or knowledge, & a fair statement of the deduction of his title, though it did not go back sixty years.—BLACKBURN v. 670. — — — Objection treated as waived.]—(1) What is a complete or proper abstract is a question of degree.

(2) Conditions of sale provided that all requisitions as to the title not made by the purchaser within a month after the time fixed for the delivery of the abstract should be deemed to be waived. An abstract of title was duly delivered, but the purchaser did not make any requisitions as to the title within the proper time, & did not complete his contract, insisting that no proper abstract had been delivered. Upon a bill filed against him by the vendor for specific performance:—Held: in the absence of any evidence as to the imperfection of the abstract, the purchaser must be taken to have waived his objections to the title; he must specifically perform the contract.

(3) Where a purchaser objects that the abstract is insufficient, it lies upon him to show in what respects it is imperfect (ROMILLY, M.R.).—WARD v. GRIMES (OR GHRIMES) (1863), 8 L. T. 782; 9 Jur. N. S. 1097; 11 W. R. 794.

The land, part of which was over a railway tunnel, had been purchased by deft. from a railway co. who had no Parliamentary powers to make the sale, so that the conveyance, being ultra vires, was void. The conditions of sale provided that the title was to commence with the conveyance from the railway co. to deft.; that the purchaser should not make any objection to the conveyance or the title prior to the date thereof; & that he should object to the title within seven days from the date of the delivery of the abstract. Pltf., after the expiration of the seven days, objected that deft. could not make a title to the land, & refused to complete. In an action to recover the deposit:—Held: pltf. could not recover, because, although deft. was not able to make a title, being merely in possession of the land, the objection thereto was taken too late.—ROSENBERG v. 674. — — — Interest payable by purchaser—Delay caused by state of title.]—(1) It was provided by a contract for sale that an abstract of title should be delivered before Jan. 25, 1844, & that if from any cause whatever the purchase should not be completed by Apr. 25, the purchaser should pay interest on his purchase-money from that day. The abstract of title to the bulk of the estate was delivered on Mar. 1, 1844, but as to part of the estate no abstract was delivered till the end of Nov. 1844. A good title was not completely made out & verified till July 31, 1847:—Held: the purchaser must pay interest from Mar. 1, 1845, being the day on which the purchase ought to have been completed, allowing for its completion the same period from the actual delivery of the abstract of Nov. 1844, as was allowed by the contract from the time when the abstract ought to have been delivered.

(2) Where there is no vexatious conduct, wilful delay, or unfair dealing on the part of the vendor, delay arising from difficulties occasioned by the state of the title will not disentitle him to interest under such a stipulation as the above.

(3) The right of the vendor to interest under such a stipulation will not arise until he performs his part of the contract, by delivering an abstract, showing that he was a title to the property; but it is not incumbent upon him, before he can claim

Eighteen years after the death of testator the widow entered into a contract for sale of the leasehold house. Her solrs. informed the purchaser that there were no debts of testator remaining unpaid. No reason for selling was suggested. The purchaser objected to the title, unless the concurrence of the son was obtained, but this was refused:—Held: under the peculiar circumstances of the case, the purchaser having actual notice that there were no debts of testator remaining unpaid, & no reason being suggested for the sale, the title was not one which ought to be forced on a purchaser.—Re VERRELL'S CONTRACT, [1903] 1 Ch. 65; 72 L. t. Questions of title—No title shown.]

—In an action for specific performance of a contract for the sale of land it was contended by plff. that the title could not now be objected to by deft. as by the terms of the contract all objections to the title were to be notified by Dec. 26, 1887, & the objection in question was not taken until a week later:—Held: such a condition did not apply to the case of the vendor being unable to give a good title, but only to objections & requisitions which might have been properly enforced against a vendor who had a valid title; & the objection here might go to the root of plff.'s title.—

declaration of trust—For last day of term.]—By an indenture made in 1865 a lease was granted to J. G. P. for a term of ninety-nine years from Mar. 25, 1865, at a rent of £3 16s. 4d. The lease became vested in H., who on Aug. 6, 1885, granted S. H. an underlease for the whole of the term, less eleven days, at a rent of £12. H. then mortgaged for the whole term, less one day, of which there was a declaration of trust, & on Sept. 29, 1896, the mtgees. sold to W. S. The vendors were the legal personal representatives of W. S., & the purchaser had entered into a contract to buy what was described in the particulars as “an improved leasehold ground rent of £8 3s. 8d. arising out of a ground rent for £12 amply secured on property held on lease . . . having fifty-three years unexpired in Mar. & subject to an original ground rent of £3 16s. 4d.” The conditions provided that the title should commence with an indenture of underlease dated Aug. 6, 1885, & that the purchaser should not question the validity of the underlease, but should assume a good title was vested in W. S. for the residue of the term. The purchaser contended that he was entitled to an assignment of the original lease, & that, as there was an outstanding day, he was entitled to a declaration that the vendor had not made out a good title, & to the return of his deposit. The vendor said that he had only contracted to sell the term for which the ground rent of £12 was payable. The purchaser, moreover, had delivered no requisitions, & it was submitted that the objection was out of time:—Held: the objection was not out of time, as the objection was one of conveyance & not of title; what was contracted to be sold was the improved ground rent for the whole term during which it was payable.

Semble: even if the contract had been to assign the whole of the original term, the vendor could have enforced the contract, as there was a declaration of trust of the last day of the term.—Re SCOTT & EAVE'S CONTRACT (1902), 86 L. T. 617.

690. — Corresponding as to objections delivered after time.]—Conditions of sale stipulated that the sale should be completed on a certain day; & that objections to the title not made within twenty-one days from the delivery of the abstract should be considered as waived; & that, if the purchaser should not comply with the conditions, his deposit should be forfeited, & the vendor be at liberty to resell the property. The purchaser did not deliver his objections until several weeks after the expiration of the twenty-one days, & after the day appointed for completing the purchase: the vendor's solr., however, received them, & entered into a long correspondence with the purchaser on the subject of them, but without coming to a satisfactory conclusion. Finally, the vendor resold the property, but at a less price, notwithstanding the purchaser protested against the resale, & gave notice to the vendor of his intention to file a bill to enforce the contract. About six months afterwards he filed his bill, making the auctioneer & the purchaser at the resale, to whom he had some months before given notice of his prior contract, co-defts. to it. The ct. held that the benefit of the conditions had been waived by the vendor's solr. & decreed a specific performance, with a reference to the master as to title, & dismissed the bill, with costs as against the auctioneer, because he denied that he had ever intended to part with the deposit, & without costs as against the purchaser at the resale, who claimed the benefit of his contract if the ct. should think that plff.'s ought not to be performed.—CUTTS v. THODEY (1842), 13 Sim. 206; 6 Jur. 1027; 60 E. R. 80; on appeal (1844), 1 Coll. 223, n., L. C.

Testator died in 1815. P. & L. accepted the trusts, & P. died in 1851. In 1852, L. sold by auction:—Held: he could alone make a good title to the premises.

(2) A special condition of sale stipulated, that by a fixed day the purchaser should either reject or accept the title, & if not rejected it was to be good. Within the time fixed the purchaser took an objection, but stated at the same time he did not reject the title upon that ground, but wished to hear how the vendor met the difficulty. The vendor insisted at first on the condition, by which the purchaser, not having rejected the title, was to be held to have accepted it, but subsequently entered upon a long correspondence. Semble: the vendor had by his conduct waived the condition.—LANE v. DEBENHAM (1853), 11 Hare, 188; 22 L. T. O. S. 143; 17 Jur. 1005; 1 W. R. 465; 68 E. R. 1241.

692. Right of objection waived by purchaser—Not unless question raised in abstract.]—(1) The conditions of sale provided that all objections to the title disclosed by the abstract, not taken within a certain time after delivery of the abstract to the purchaser, should be deemed to be waived:—Held: the time for objecting was not to be computed from the time of the delivery of an imperfect abstract; & the purchaser was not precluded from taking an objection which arose out of evidence called for before the expiration of the time fixed.

(2) The sale took place under a decree. The abstract stated that the person, at whose death the sale was to be made, proved the will of testator, but it did not state the pleadings in the cause, or whether that person was living or dead:—Held: this was not a sufficiently distinct intimation to the purchaser that the time of sale had, without any sufficient ground, been anticipated.—*BLACKLOW v. 696. Numerous attempts to remove objections—Interest on returned deposit.] —(1) A purchaser under a decree having accepted the title & paid his purchase-money into ct., discovered that a will had been misstated in the abstract, in such a manner as to conceal an important defect in the title. Upon petition, before conveyance, he was discharged from his purchase, & his purchase-money was ordered to be repaid; but as his solr. had neglected to examine the original will, although the abstract showed that it was of a very peculiar nature, & although reminded of the necessity of doing so by the counsel who advised upon the abstract:—Held: he was not entitled to interest & he must pay the costs of all parties, except of the person who had the conduct of the sale.

(2) A purchaser is not conclusively bound by the acceptance of the title by his counsel; but if he pays his purchase-money into ct., he is bound. This rule, however, does not apply to a case where the counsel is misled by the abstract of title.

(3) A condition that, if any objection or requisition should be made which the vendor should be unable or unwilling to remove, it should be lawful for him to rescind the contract; & that, in that case, the purchaser should be entitled to a return of his deposit, without interest, but should not be entitled to any costs or damages, does not entitle the vendor, after making numerous fruitless attempts to remove an objection made by a purchaser desirous of being discharged, to return him his deposit only, but the vendor must then pay interest upon the deposit, & the costs of the purchaser.—M'CULLOCH v. GREGORY (1855), 1 K. & J. 286; 3 Eq. Rep. 495; 24 L. J. Ch. 246; 24 L. T. O. S. 307; 3 W. R. 231; 69 E. R. 466; subsequent proceedings (1856), 3 K. & J. 12.

697. Whether reservation of right depreciatory—Sale by mortgagee.] —A condition of sale on a sale by a mtgee. under a power of sale, entitling the vendor to rescind the contract in case he should be unwilling or unable to answer any requisition, is depreciatory in a sense, but not so depreciatory as to be improper, being one that a prudent owner would introduce, & therefore held binding on the mtgor.—FALKNER v. EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY SOCIETY (1858), 4 Drew. 352; 4 Jur. N. S. 1214; 7 W. R. 73; 62 B. R. 136; sub nom. FAULKNER v. EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, 28 L. J. Ch. 132; 32 L. T. O. 698. Effect of condition being unreasonable—Purchaser to pay all expenses of investigating title.] —

Pltf. contracted to purchase of deft. the lease, etc., of a public-house, by a memorandum in the following form:—"Received from Mr. Moeser the sum of £80, being the deposit on account of £800, the purchase-money for the Wheat Sheaf Tavern, the contract for which is now being prepared, to be signed by the vendor & purchaser when completed & ready for signature. B. B. Wisker." The contract tendered to pltf. for signature contained, amongst others, stipulations that the purchaser should pay the expenses of the investigation of the vendor's title, & that, if the purchaser should insist on any objection or requisition as to title which the vendor should be unable or unwilling to remove or comply with, the vendor might annul the sale, & return the deposit, but without any interest or costs of investigating the title; & that if the purchaser should fail to comply with the above conditions his deposit should thereupon be forfeited to the vendor, who should be at liberty to resell the property. Pltf. refused to sign this contract, on the ground that it contained unreasonable terms, & deft. resold the property:—Held: that pltf. was entitled to recover back his deposit.—MOESER v. WISKER (1871), L. R. 6 C. P. 120; 40 L. J. C. P. 94; 24 L. T. 134; 19 W. R. 351.

Annotation:—Expld. Chillingworth v. Esche, [1924] 1 Ch. 97.

699. Purchaser insisting on objection he was precluded from making.] —A contract for the sale of freehold land stipulated that the title should commence with a conveyance of the land to a railway co., & that the purchaser should "assume & admit that everything, if anything were necessary, was done & performed by the co. to enable them to sell & effectually convey the said land as surplus lands," & should "not call for or require production of any evidence to this effect." There was also a condition that, if the purchaser failed to comply with the terms of the contract, his deposit should be forfeited.

The vendor having refused to comply with a requisition by the purchaser requiring some evidence to be furnished that a waiver of the rights of pre-emption conferred on the prior & adjoining owners by Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), had been obtained, the purchaser brought an action for the return of his deposit & for damages for breach of contract. The vendor then rescinded the contract, & forfeited the deposit.

Pending the action the vendor obtained a waiver of the rights of pre-emption & sold the land to a third party:—Held: the purchaser was bound by the contract to accept such title as the vendor had, & having insisted on an objection which he was precluded from taking by the terms of the contract, was not entitled to any relief.—BEST v. HAMAND (1879), 12 Ch. D. 1; 27 W. R. 742; sub nom. HAMAND v. BEST, 48 L. J. Ch. 503; sub nom. HAMMOND v. BEST, 40 L. T. 769, C. A.

Clause 6 of the agreement provided that any error therein should not annul the sale, but that compensation should be allowed in respect thereof, & clause 8 gave the vendor the usual right to rescind; but there was no stipulation as to the lands being sold subject to all rights of way, etc. It subsequently appeared that a right of way existed over a portion of the lands, & as A. insisted on compensation in respect thereof, B. rescinded the contract:—Held: notwithstanding clause 6, the right of way was a defect of title, & B. was entitled to rescind.—ASHBURNER v. SEWELL, [1891] 3 Ch. 405; 60 L. J. Ch. 784; 65 L. T. 524; 40 W. R. 169; 7 T. L. R. 736.

It turned out that the vendor had absolutely no title. After considerable delay the vendor gave notice of rescission to the purchaser, & tendered him his deposit, which was refused. Condition 4 provided that if the purchaser should insist on any requisition as to the title with which the vendor should be unable or unwilling to comply, the vendor might "notwithstanding any negotiation or litigation" in respect thereof rescind the contract unless the requisition was withdrawn within seven days. The purchaser sent in a requisition that the property was subject to restrictive covenants, not disclosed by the contract, & that he reserved his right to object to the title on this ground. On July 22, 1920, the purchaser issued a vendor & purchaser summons for a declaration that a good title had not been shown, & for a return of the deposit paid by him under the contract. On July 29, 1920, the purchaser's solrs. wrote repudiating the contract. In Oct. the vendor's solrs. wrote that she was not disposed to continue the litigation & giving notice of rescission under condition 4. Nothing further occurred in the litigation, & the vendor paid the purchaser's costs of it. If any objection or requisition shall be made & insisted on, which the vendors shall be unable or unwilling to remove or comply with, the vendors shall be at liberty by notice in writing to rescind the sale." The purchaser accepted the vendors' title as shown by the abstract & sent them a draft conveyance for approval. The vendors then required that the conveyance should be taken subject to certain "covenants, conditions, & restrictions," the nature of which they did not explain, but which they alleged were contained in a deed recited in an abstracted deed forming the commencement of title. As the abstract did not show the existence of any such covenants, conditions, or restrictions, & as the conveyance to the vendors' immediate predecessor in title did not in any way refer to them, the purchaser declined to take a conveyance subject to them without, at all events, being first informed of their nature, whereupon the vendors wrote purporting to rescind the contract. Upon a summons by the purchaser under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78):—Held: the vendors had no power to rescind, & the purchaser was entitled to a conveyance without the insertion of the words required by the vendors.

715. Persons beneficially interested—On sale by trustee.—Trustees of a will put up land for sale, subject to a condition that, if any objection or requisition as to (inter alia) title, or abstract or conveyance should be insisted on, & the vendors should be unable or unwilling to remove or comply therewith, they should be at liberty to annul the sale. The abstract delivered to the purchaser showed that the conveyance to the vendors' testator was of the land, together with a wall on the east side of it, "which wall is to be ever hereafter repaired & kept in repair" by testator, his heirs, & assigns. This obligation was not mentioned in the particulars & conditions of sale, & the purchaser did not know of it until the delivery of the abstract. He accepted the title, & tendered to the vendors the draft of a conveyance to himself of the land with the wall, omitting all reference to the obligation to repair the wall. The vendors' solrs. added the words "subject to & with the liability for ever to repair the wall" by the purchaser, his heirs & assigns. The purchaser would not agree to the addition, & the vendors thereupon gave notice to rescind the contract. The purchaser then brought an action for specific performance of the contract, claiming the right to a conveyance without the additional words:—

Held: (1) if the obligation to repair the wall ran with the land, it was immaterial whether it was mentioned in the conveyance or not, because the purchaser would be bound by it in either case; but, if it did not run with the land, the vendors, not having mentioned it in the particulars of sale, could not impose it on the purchaser. Consequently, the vendors were not entitled to rescind the contract. (2) Seem: a condition of sale giving the vendor a right to rescind the contract, in the event of his being unable or unwilling to comply with a purchaser's requisition as to conveyance, is not in general a proper condition.

Only one case occurs to me in which it would be proper to insert such a condition. If the sale were made by trustees the purchaser might require that the persons beneficially interested in the property should be made parties to the conveyance to him, & I can conceive it possible that the vendors might not be able to procure their concurrence. In such a case it might be very reasonable that the vendors should be able to say to the purchaser, "You may be in strictness entitled to have the concurrence of the beneficiaries, but you will get a perfectly good title without it, & as we are unable to procure their concurrence we will rescind the contract (PEARSON, J.).—*HARDMAN v. An abstract was delivered, but it did not show the real state of the title. After requisitions were sent & replies received, the purchaser's solrs. were informed by mtgees. that the property had been mortgaged by deposit of an underlease to them. The vendor, Rentcharge.—The ct. will not, under the power given to it by Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 5, compel a vendor of land to pay money into ct. for the purpose of discharging an incumbrance upon the land, when the result of so doing would be to inflict a great hardship on him, as, for instance, if the incumbrance is a perpetual rentcharge, & the sum necessary to procure its discharge would far exceed the amount of the purchase-money payable to the vendor.

A railway co. contracted to sell some superfluous land "free from incumbrances," for £868. The contract provided that, if the purchaser should decline to waive any valid objection to the title, the co. might at any time rescind the contract, without paying the purchaser any costs or compensation. The abstract of title showed that the land was subject to a perpetual rentcharge of £63 issuing out of it, this being the consideration for which the co. had purchased it under their statutory powers, for the making of a railway, which, by a subsequent Act, they were authorised to abandon. The purchaser required the co. to procure the release of the land from the rentcharge. This they declined to do, but offered to indemnify him against it. He declined to waive his requisition:—Held: the co. were entitled to rescind the contract under the condition, & they were not bound to apply to the ct., under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 5, to declare the land freed from the rentcharge, or to take any other steps to procure the release of the rentcharge.—*Re GREAT NORTHERN RY. The premises were described in the particulars as freehold & without mention of incumbrances. The premises were in fact subject to a rentcharge of £5 7s. 9d., as might have been discovered by resps. on any examination of their title. By the conditions of sale it was (inter alia) provided that each lot was sold subject to all chief rents, that the vendors might be at liberty to rescind the sale if the purchasers insisted on any objection or requisition which the vendors might be unwilling to remove or comply with; & that any incorrect statement, error, or omission should not annul the sale or entitle either the vendors or the purchaser to any compensation. Appets. insisted upon resps. discharging the incumbrance, & thereupon resps. claimed to rescind the sale:—Held: resps. had acted honestly under a mistake, & not recklessly or unreasonably, & had done nothing to disentitle them to rescind.—Re SIMPSON & MOY (THOMAS), LTD.'S CONTRACT (1909), 53 Sol. The eleventh condition provided, "No mistake as to quantity or tenure, or other omission in the particulars, as to the description or quality of the property, or as to the vendor's interest or otherwise, if capable of compensation, shall annul the sale, but compensation shall in every case be given or taken. But this condition shall not limit the vendor's right to rescind the contract under the eighth condition." It was afterwards discovered that the fine was one year's & not two years' improved value; & the purchaser claimed compensation by reason of the misdescription. He also raised a question of title. The vendor refused to give compensation, but offered to rescind the contract. The purchaser filed his bill for specific performance, & insisted by his bill

The purchaser objected that certain minerals under the land appeared to belong to the lord of the manor; the vendors answered that this would not be compensated for, being the result of an enfranchisement as to which there was a condition. The purchaser persisted in the objection, & the vendors gave notice that they should rescind the contract. The purchaser then filed his bill for specific performance with compensation, & the vendors by their answer alleged that they had in fact a title to these minerals, but had rescinded under the conditions:—Held: the objection taken by the purchaser was an objection to title to part of the property sold, the removal of which might involve a long & expensive inquiry; the vendors had a right to rescind, & performance with compensation would not be compelled.—*MAWSON v. 725. Effect of bonâ fide belief in truth of representation—On reasonable grounds.—A statement made by a vendor on the faith of a promise or representation by a third party that he will concur in the sale, without having previously made an agreement with that third party binding him to do so, is not necessarily "reckless" within the meaning of the authorities on the point.

A vendor ought not to be held disentitled to exercise a clear & unambiguous power of rescission reserved to him in the contract because he has made an untrue statement of fact concerning the property agreed to be sold, if the statement was made under the bonâ fide belief & with some substantial ground for believing that it was true.

At a sale of lands by public auction in lots the particulars stated that the tenancy of lot 3 would expire at Michaelmas, 1919, when vacant possession might be had. The fifth condition of sale provided that if the purchaser should insist on any objection or requisition as to the title, which the vendor should "be unable or on the ground of expense unwilling to remove or comply with," the vendor might by notice in writing at any time & notwithstanding any negotiations or pending litigation, rescind the sale. Lot 3 was held on a yearly tenancy determinable only by a year's notice on either side expiring at Michaelmas in any year. The result of interviews which the vendor had some months previously to the sale, with the exors. of deceased tenant & with their sub-tenant, was that the vendor, although no formal notice to quit was given on either side, had substantial grounds for believing that their tenancies would determine at Michaelmas, 1919. Pltf. purchased lot 3 at the sale & then the question arose as to vacant possession being given of that lot, & eventually the exors. declined to give up possession on the ground that no notice to quit had been given & their sub-tenant claimed to remain in possession until Michaelmas, 1921. On pltf. suing the vendor for specific performance with compensation the vendor gave notice to rescind the contract under the fifth condition of sale:—Held: under the circumstances the vendor was not guilty of such recklessness in stating the termination of the tenancy & the giving of vacant possession of lot 3 as disentitled him to exercise the power of rescission reserved to him by the fifth condition of sale, & consequently the notice to rescind was valid.—*MERRETT v. This resp. refused to do on the ground of expense, & on appct. persisting in his demand, resp.'s solrs., by a notice in writing, purported, on his behalf, to rescind the contract:—Held: resp. had acted recklessly & unreasonably; he was not entitled to rescind the contract under clause 5; the notice to rescind was void & of no effect, & he was bound to make the necessary application to the ct.—Re DES REAUX & SETCHFIELD'S CONTRACT, [1926] Ch. 178; 95 L. The purchasers made requisitions, & the vendor, for reasons stated, declined to comply with several of them. The purchasers insisted, & the vendor served them with notice that “being unable or unwilling to remove or comply with” the requisitions, he rescinded the contract. The purchasers, in reply, denied the vendor’s right to rescind, withdrew their requisitions, & stated that they were willing to complete:—Held: the contract had been duly rescinded.

740. Conditions precedent to exercise.]—Where a sale takes place under a condition providing that if the purchaser makes any requisition which the vendor is unable or unwilling to comply with the vendor may, by notice in writing, annul the sale, the vendor may, if the purchaser insists upon a requisition, after being informed that the vendor is unable to comply with it, rescind the sale by notice, & such notice need not give the purchaser a time within which to waive his requisition.

A vendor entitled to an underlease for a term of twenty-four years, less three days, put up the property for sale, as held under a lease for twenty-four years, relying on the promise of the persons entitled to the three days to concur. They afterwards refused to concur:—Held: the vendor could not be considered to have made a misrepresentation, so as to disentitle him to the benefit of the above condition.

Upon the construction of that condition, there are four matters which must concur before there is a right to give a notice to rescind the contract. First, there must be an objection to the title; secondly, there must be an inability or unwilling-ness on the part of the vendor to remove that objection; thirdly, there must be a communication to the purchaser of the existence of this inability or unwillingness; & fourthly, there must be an insisting by the purchaser on his objection, notwithstanding this communication (CAIRNS, L.J.).—*BUDELL v. Condition for rescission if purchaser should “make” objection—Right to rescind on making of requisition.]—Land was contracted to be sold under a condition that if the purchaser should “make any objection to or requisition on the title” which the vendors should be “unable or unwilling to remove or comply with” the vendors might by notice in writing annul the contract. Requisitions were sent in, & thereupon the vendors, who were trustees, passed a resolution that as some of the requisitions could not be complied with, & others would cause great trouble & expense, notice should be given to rescind the contract; &, without attempting to answer them, they served a formal notice on the purchaser annulling the contract & stating that they were “unwilling to remove or comply with” the requisitions or any of them:—Held: the right to rescind arose directly the requisitions were made; the vendors were not bound to state their reasons for rescinding; though the word “unwilling” ought to be interpreted “reasonably unwilling,” yet on a general statement that the rescission was bonâ fide, & in the absence of any evidence of caprice or mala fides, the ct. ought not to infer that the vendors were acting unreasonably, & consequently the contract had been duly annulled.—Re STARR-BOWKETTS BUILDING SOCIETY & SIBUN’S CONTRACT (1889), 42 Ch. 742. ———.]—Freeholds were put up for sale by auction subject to conditions which stated that the vendor was a trustee for sale, & that if any purchaser should make any objection or requisition which the vendor should be “unwilling to remove or comply with,” the vendor might annul the sale. The abstract of title supplied to a purchaser showed that the property was devised by the will of testator, who died in 1858, upon trust for A. for life, & after her death upon trust for sale & division amongst her children, but if A. died without leaving a child the property was to be conveyed to B. & C. as tenants in common. In answer to the purchaser’s requisitions the vendor gave the date & place of A.’s marriage & the names, but not the addresses, of her children. The purchaser pressed for the date of birth of any one child of A. living at her death in order to obtain a certificate of birth to prove that notice in writing, to annul the sale, is to be taken strictly against the vendor. A vendor under such a condition is not entitled, on receiving requisitions, at once to rescind, but must answer each of them, & say whether he is unable or unwilling to comply, & bring the matter to a point with the purchaser, showing how far he is unable or unwilling to comply. The purchaser is to have a reasonable time to consider whether he will insist upon his objections or take the land withdrawing his objections.—MACGREGOR v. TEMPLETON (1882), 8 V. L. R. 195.—AUS.

743. Must be within reasonable time.]—By a memorandum of Aug. 19, 1862, defts. contracted to sell certain freehold premises to plffs. for £2,850, £285 to be paid at once to the vendors' solr. as a deposit, & the residue on Oct. 29, & it was mutually agreed that the vendors should deliver an abstract, & that the purchasers should within twenty-one days after the delivery of the abstract, deliver in writing to the vendors' solr. their objections, if any, to, or requisitions on, the title. It then went on to provide that, "in case any objection or requisition shall be so delivered, & the vendors shall be unable or unwilling to comply therewith or remove the same, they are to be at liberty, by notice, etc., to rescind their contract & return the deposit money, without interest or other compensation, notwithstanding any attempt made to remove or comply with such objection or requisition." An abstract was delivered to the purchasers' solr. on Sept. 6. On Sept. 22, objections & requisitions were delivered to the vendors' solr. On Nov. 4, which was six days after the time mentioned in the contract for the completion thereof, the vendors' solr. forwarded to the purchasers' solr. replies to the requisitions on title. Nothing further was done until Nov. 29, when plffs. issued a writ against the vendors' solr. to recover back the £285 deposited with him. The deposit was thereupon returned; & on Dec. 11, the vendors gave notice to rescind the contract. In an action brought by the purchasers on Dec. 16, to recover interest on the deposit, & their costs of investigating the title:—Held: the vendors were not bound to exercise their option to rescind immediately on receiving the objections & requisitions, or before the day named for the completion of the contract; but, time not being the essence of the contract, they might do so within a reasonable time, & their notice was given within a reasonable time.—SHOREDITCH VESTRY v. HUGHES (1864), 17 C. B. N. S. 137; 4 New Rep. 465; 33 L. J. C. P. 349; 10 L. T. 723; 12 W. R. 1106; 144 E. R. 55.

745. After judgment.]—A vendor sold an estate under conditions of sale, one of which was, that if the vendor should be unable or unwilling to meet any requisition or objection, he might annul the sale & return the purchaser's deposit, without interest or costs, notwithstanding any previous negotiation or litigation. An objection to the title having been taken by the purchaser, the vendor took out a summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), to decide the question, & judgment was given against him:—Held: it was too late for the vendor, after the judgment, to exercise his power of annulling the sale.—RE ARBIB & CLASS'S CONTRACT, [1891] 1 Ch. 601; 60 L. 746. Before final judgment.]—Property was sold under conditions of sale empowering the vendor by notice to rescind the sale if any objection should be insisted on which the vendor should be unable to remove, "notwithstanding any intermediate negotiation," & that on rescission the purchaser should be entitled to receive back his deposit without interest or costs. The condition was silent as to intermediate litigation. The purchaser insisted on an objection that the particulars misrepresented that the property was freehold, & that the title shown was only to a term under an underlease; & on this ground he commenced an action on Nov. 30, 1896, for rescission of the contract, return of his deposit, & payment of the expenses of investigating the title. Before further proceedings were taken the vendor, on Dec. 4, 1896, gave the purchaser notice of the rescission of the contract, & offered to repay the deposit. On the evidence it was held that the misrepresentation was not made out:—Held: the notice was in time, & the purchaser was only entitled to a return of his deposit without interest, & to the costs of the action up to the time of the receipt of the notice to rescind, & he must pay deft.'s costs as from that date.—ISAACS v. TOWELL, [1898] 2 Ch. 285; 67 L. J. Ch. 508; 78 L. T. 619; 42 Sol. Jo. 469.

750. —[Plff. purchased land of defts., subject amongst others to the following conditions of sale: (1) that within twenty-one days from the date of the sale the vendors shall deliver an abstract of title to the purchaser; (b) that if any purchaser make any objections or requisitions in respect of the title within thirty-five days from the day of sale, the vendors shall be at liberty at their election either to answer such objection or to rescind the sale on repaying the deposit without interest, & without incurring any liability to pay any of the expenses for investigating the title; (c) that all rights of the vendors to hold the purchaser to have waived all objections or requisitions not made within the time specified as aforesaid, & such right of the vendors to rescind the contract shall not be deemed to be waived or in any manner affected or prejudiced by any negotiation as to any objections or requisitions or attempt to obviate or comply with the same. The sale took place on July 30, 1861, & a deposit of £100 was paid to the vendors' solr. The abstract of title was not delivered until Nov. 2. On Nov. 8 the vendees' solr. wrote to the vendors' solr., stating that the vendors, who were trustees, in his opinion "had no power to sell, & that it was not worth while going into the title"; he also wrote on Nov. 28, desiring "to know whether the vendors would rescind the contract or insist upon specific performance." On Nov. 30 the vendors' solr. answered, "That he was satisfied that they had power to sell, & that his clients would expect the vendee to complete the purchase." The vendees thereupon incurred expenses in investigating the title, & it turned out that the trustees had no power to sell, & they, on Dec. 31, 1861, declined to complete the purchase, & claimed to be paid interest on their deposit & the expenses of investigating the title. A further correspondence was continued until Nov. 17, 1862:—Held: on these facts, the vendors could not elect to rescind the contract under condition & there was no negotiation within the meaning of the condition, & therefore the vendee was entitled to recover interest on the deposit & the expenses of investigating the title.—*GARDOM v. 754. —Vendor submitting to jurisdiction of court.]—Where leasehold property which is sold in separate lots is held under one lease, it is incumbent on the vendor to state that fact in plain & distinct terms.

Leasehold property was put up for sale by auction in lots, being described in the particulars as "long leaseholds, held for upwards of ninety years unexpired, at various ground rents," with a statement that as to lots 1 & 2 a separate lease would be granted to the purchaser for ninety-eight years from a day named, at a peppercorn rent, & that as to lot 3, a lease would be granted for the same term & from the same day at a rent of £60; one of the conditions stipulating that no purchaser should call for the production of the vendor's title, or make any objection in respect of his right to grant the lease. There was also the usual condition, enabling the vendor to rescind the contract on returning the deposit without interest. The purchaser of lots 1 & 2, having subsequently discovered that such lots were held with lot 3, under one lease, & were jointly liable therewith to the £60 rent, objected to complete without a release from the superior landlord in respect of the liability of lots 1 & 2, under the original lease. The release was refused, & upon bill filed by the vendor for specific performance, the ct. holding that there was no sufficient notice of the fact that the premises purchased were held with others under one lease, & that the condition above mentioned did not apply to the purchaser's objection, dismissed the bill with costs, & decreed a return of the deposit with interest.

That condition does not apply, & I shall make the order asked. I think the true principle to be this, that the vendor, by filing his bill in this ct. submits himself to the jurisdiction of the ct. as to the whole matter of the contract (MALINS, V. (C.)).—SHEARD v. VENABLES (1867), 36 L. J. Ch. 922; 17 L. T. 10; 15 W. R. 1166.

755. Vendors purporting to sell as trustees—Subsequently offering to sell as personal representatives.]—By a contract containing the usual rescission clause the vendors agreed to sell as trustees. Subsequently they discovered that on the construction of the will they were unable to make a title as trustees, but they offered to convey as legal personal representatives. This course the purchaser declined to adopt, but he offered to accept a new contract. This the vendors in turn refused & purported to rescind the contract:—Held: the vendors had not by their conduct deprived themselves of the right to rescind.—Re MILNER & ORGAN'S CONTRACT (1920), 89 L. SUB-SECT. 8.—IDENTITY.

A. In General.

757. Sufficiency of identification—On sale of copyhold property.]—The generality & vagueness of descriptions of copyhold property on the ct. rolls are so well known, that a vendor is not bound to show how the description on the ct. roll is to be applied to the present state of the property, if he prove that the property has actually been enjoyed & passed under that description for upwards of sixty years.—LONG v. COLLIER (1828), 4 Russ. 267; 38 E. R. 806.

758. Identity is matter of title.]—Identity is as much matter of title as devolution.—BROWN v. WALES (1872), L. R. 15 Eq. 142; 42 L. J. Ch. 45; 27 L. T. 410; 21 W. R. 157.

759. Effect of stipulation limiting identification—Where descriptions in documents differ.]—By the conditions of sale, no further evidence of identity was to be required than what was afforded by the abstract & the documents therein abstracted. The descriptions held in the documents differed amongst themselves, & from the description in the particulars of sale:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to have further proof of the identity.—FLOWER v. HARTOPP (1843), 6 Beav. 476; 12 L. J. Ch. 507; 1 L. T. O. S. 252, 384; 7 Jur. 613; 49 E. R. 910.

760. — Vendor exempt from producing further evidence.]—(1) A clause in an agreement for purchase, that purchaser is not to require any further proof of identity than that given by the title deeds, exempts the vendor from producing further evidence; but he cannot force the title on the purchaser unless the evidence is complete upon the deeds.

B. Mixed Land of Different Tenure.

764. Effect of stipulation limiting identification—Sale of freehold & copyhold.]—A. became the purchaser of a mansion house & park under conditions of sale, which stated that the whole property was freehold except 8 acres which were copyhold, but undistinguished except as to not including any of the buildings. The abstract of title having been delivered & discussions thereon having taken place, which raised difficulties in the way of completing the purchase, a supplemental agreement was entered into, detailing what requisitions as to title, etc., should be complied with. Among these requisitions was one in the following words: "Declaration of identity of lands mentioned in deeds to those now sold." On a bill filed by the vendor for specific performance:—Held: the supplemental agreement was a substitution for the original contract, & A. was not entitled to demand that the vendor should distinguish the freehold from the copyhold parts of the premises so as to show that the latter did not include any of the buildings.—DAWSON v. BRINCKMAN (1850), 3 Mac. & G. 53; 42 E. R. 181, L. C.

766. — On sale of freehold & leasehold.]—In a contract for sale the lands were described as partly freehold & partly leasehold. The title deeds did not clearly define the boundaries & extent of the two properties; but the uncertainty did not arise from an instrument incapable of legal construction in that respect:—Held: such an uncertainty was not an objection to a decree for specific performance.—MONRO v. TAYLOR (1852), 3 Mac. & G. 713; 21 L. J. Ch. 525; 19 L. T. O. S. 97; 42 E. R. 434, L. C.

subject for compensation. On the face of the abstract, which was duly delivered, the right to dig coals, etc., appeared not to be in the vendors. A purchaser made no objection to the vendors' title within the stipulated time. On a claim filed by the vendors for specific performance, & a cross-claim by the purchaser for compensation, the judge dismissed them both without costs. An appeal from that decree by the purchaser was dismissed &, by consent, a decree was made for specific performance.

Whether the ct. could grant compensation, even if it were of opinion that the case required it, is a question of some doubt. 793. After order for reference to master.—A purchaser, who was deft. in a suit for specific performance, did not in his answer mention any warranty given, or representation made by the vendor, & insisted merely that a good title was not shown; a reference on the question of title was ordered; the master reported in favour of the title, & a decree for specific performance was pronounced. After the order of reference had been made, deft. discovered that the timber on the estate, which constituted its principal value, was much less in quantity than it had been represented to be in a statement, the accuracy of which was alleged to have been warranted at the sale; but the fact of such warranty having been given was strongly controverted; under these circumstances leave was given to file a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, in order that deft. might

815. — Miscalculation by surveyor.]—Purchasers who were in occupation of certain premises, contracted to buy for £1,100, relying on a valuation shown to them by the vendor, which described the premises as containing about 1,244 square yards, & valued them at £1,200. The particulars stated that the premises contained about 1,200 square yards, & provided that, in case of error or mistake in the description compensation should be given or allowed. The purchasers discovered that the premises contained only 935 square yards, the surveyor having made a miscalculation. Neither vendors nor purchasers previously knew the actual area. The purchasers claimed compensation under the condition which the vendors refused offering to cancel the contract. On a summons by the purchasers under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78):—Held: the purchasers were entitled to a reference as to what deduction should be made from the contract price.—ASPINALLS TO POWELL & SCHOLEFIELD (1889), 60 L. T. 595; 5 T. L. R. 446.

816. Condition excluding compensation—Purchaser having notice that area may be less—Statement in court rolls & title deeds.]—(1) A contract of sale by auction described the property as “the freehold cottage & copyhold paddock, comprising 1 acre 2 roods 8 poles, situate, etc., described in the particulars attached hereto as lot 1.” In the annexed particulars, lot 1 was thus described:—“The property is freehold, with the exception of the paddock, which is copyhold, & comprises 1 acre 2 roods 8 poles, situated, etc. The premises consist of a double cottage, etc., & paddock, in the occupation of P.” The contract contained the usual clause, that the title & conveyance should be completed according to the conditions of sale. The sixth condition was as follows: “The several properties comprised in the foregoing particulars are presumed to be correctly described; & the quantities of the land shall be taken as stated, whether more or less, although the title deeds & ct. rolls state such quantities to be less, without any equivalent or compensation on either side; & no other evidence of identity shall be required than that furnished by the documents of title; & the statements contained therein shall be deemed conclusive evidence of the identity of the properties respectively.” The abstract of title delivered showed a title only to 3 roods 24 poles in the whole:—Held: the purchaser, having distinct notice by the above condition that the deeds would show a less quantity than that mentioned in the particulars & contract of sale, was bound to take the title as offered; & failing to do so, the vendor was entitled to resell, & to claim the deposit as forfeited.

(2) It is no objection to a title, upon a sale by auction, that a memorandum appears amongst the title deeds showing that a former owner of the property, under whom the vendor derives title, had raised money thereon by way of equitable mtge., & there is no evidence that such charge has been released, other than that afforded by the vendor's possession of the deeds & memorandum.—NICOLL v. CHAMBERS (1852), 11 C. B. 996; 138 E. R. 770; sub nom. NICHOLL v. CHAMBERS, 21 L. J. C. P. 54; 18 L. T. O. S. 243.

817. — Substantial error.]—On a sale one of the conditions provided that if the purchasers should make any objection to, or requisition as to the title, evidence, conveyance, or as to compensation or otherwise which the vendor should be unwilling to remove or comply with, the vendor should be at liberty to vacate for sale.

Another condition was that the admeasurements were presumed to be correct, but that if any error were discovered therein no allowance should be made or required either way. Another provided that if any error of any kind should be made in the description of the premises, such error should not invalidate the sale, but that compensation should be settled by a referee named in the condition. On a bill for specific performance by the purchaser with a deduction to be assessed by the referee for a deficiency in quantity of nearly one-half:—Held: although the ct. would not have enforced against the purchaser the condition as to erroneous admeasurements where the error was so great that condition was sufficient to exclude any right in the purchaser to a specific performance with a deduction, & the ct. in his suit for that relief decreed specific performance without deduction.—CORDINGLEY v. CHEESEBOROUGH (1862), 4 De G. F. & J. 379; 6 L. T. 342; 26 J. P. 614; 8 Jur. N. S. 755; 45 E. R. 1230, L. C.

The property was found to contain 573 square yards only:—Held: the condition only applied to small errors, & did not cover so large a deficiency, & the purchaser was entitled to compensation.—*WHITTEMORE v. 821. — Error in estimation of area.]—(1) After the purchaser of real estate has taken a conveyance, & the purchase-money has been paid, no action can be maintained for damages or compensation on account of errors as to the quantity or quality of the subject-matter of the sale, unless such errors amount to breach of some contract or warranty contained in the conveyance itself, or unless some fraud or deceit has been practised upon the purchaser.

(2) In the conveyance to a purchaser the land sold was described as two parcels, each defined in the most particular manner by metes & bounds, & other details, & each “as containing by estimation 1½ acres or thereabouts.” Subsequently to the conveyance the lands were measured, & the two parcels together amounted to only 2 acres 1 rood 12 poles:—Held: this misdescription as to quantity did not amount to a breach of any warranty so as to entitle a purchaser to maintain an action for damages against the vendor.

(3) It is a question of fact whether the parcels have or have not, in truth & in fact, been estimated to contain the quantity stated or thereabouts, the answer to which will mainly depend on whether the error is so small as to lead to the assumption that it might have been so estimated, or so great as to make the estimate an irrational or impossible one.—JOLIFFE v. BAKER (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 255; 48 L. T. 966; 47 J. P. 678; sub nom. JOLIFFE v. BAKER, 52 L. J. Q. B. 609; 32 W. R. 59.

The agreement provided for the purchaser taking partial conveyances from time to time at prices fixed with reference to quantity, & also that “if any mistake or omission be made in the description of the property the same shall not vitiate or annul the sale, but a compensation or an allowance shall be made” as therein provided. The purchaser had taken conveyances of part of the land; but the vendors, having discovered that the acreage was 41 acres, 1 rood, 10 perches, instead of 40 acres, refused to convey the residue without compensation being made for the excess of 1 acre, 1 rood, 10 perches:—Held: the vendors were not entitled to any compensation, & must convey the residue on payment of the balance of the purchase-money.—ORANGE TO WRIGHT (1885), 54 L. ii. Easements.

825. Condition excluding compensation—Innocent misrepresentation by auctioneer—As to existence of right of way.—In Aug. 1878, deft. B. offered for sale by public auction a lease of a public-house. By the conditions of sale it was provided that “the lease to be granted shall contain the covenants, clauses, & provisions, & be in the form or to the effect set forth in the draft lease which will be produced on the sale & may be seen at the office of the auctioneers for seven days previous to the day of sale,” & that “the property is presumed to be correctly described; but, as the premises may be viewed & the draft lease inspected at the office of the auctioneers, the purchaser shall be deemed to have bought with full knowledge of the contents thereof; & no error, misdescription or omission in the particulars shall annul the sale, & no compensation shall be required for any such error, misdescription, or omission.” There was no reference either in the conditions of sale or in the draft lease to the existence of any right of way from the garden of the public-house to Hampstead Heath; but at the time of the sale, the auctioneer bonâ fide, but without any authority from B., & acting entirely upon an inference drawn by himself from the appearance of the premises, & believing that there was a right of way through same & over the private road & so to Hampstead Heath, stated publicly that there was such a way, & spoke of it as enhancing the value of the premises:—Held: the evidence of what passed at the time of the sale was admissible as against the vendor; but no action could be maintained against him to recover compensation for this innocent misrepresentation by the auctioneer.—*BRETT v. Accordingly they claimed compensation pursuant to the conditions of sale. The vendor asserted that the purchasers had knowledge of the true facts of the case at the time of the sale, & evidence was adduced to prove that in the auction room a question was raised by a person present at the sale on the words “annual rental,” & that in reply to an inquiry it was distinctly stated by the auctioneer that the landlord paid the rates & taxes, & that the tenancy was a monthly tenancy:—Held: the evidence was admissible, & accordingly the purchasers must be taken to have had knowledge of the facts, & to have known all the circumstances affecting the property for which they bid, & were not entitled to compensation.—Re EDWARDS TO DANIEL SYKES & Co., LTD. (1890), 62 L. Condition allowing compensation—Road described as "made up"—Misdescription as to extent—Measure of compensation.—Land was sold under a condition that in case of misdescription compensation should be paid. A road over the land was described in the particulars as "made up." The ct. held there was a misdescription as to the extent to which the road was made up:—Held: the measure of compensation to the purchaser was not the sum it would cost to make up the road to the extent represented; but the difference between the value of the property as it existed at the time of purchase & the value it would have had if the road had been "made up."—*Re CHIFFERIEL, CHIFFERIEL v. A deed of mutual covenants, subject to which also the property was sold, precluded any building on the property.

The purchaser discovered that there was a public sewer passing under the garden at the rear of, & some distance from, the house, & a manhole used for obtaining access to the sewer.

The vendor was entirely ignorant at the time of the sale of the existence of such sewer. The sewer was vested in the local authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), & no buildings could be erected over it without the sanction of the local authority. The purchaser objected to complete, on the ground that the vendor was unable to make a title to the property:—Held: the circumstances did not justify the ct. in releasing the purchaser from his contract to take the property; the existence of the sewer did not so alter the character of the piece of ground that the purchaser could say that he did not get what was intended to be sold; & the case was a matter for compensation.—Re BREWER & HANKINS'S CONTRACT (1899), 80 L. 841. — — ——The particulars of sale at a public auction described two houses as Nos. 3 & 4, & stated, that the taxes of No. 3 were paid by the tenant. The houses ought to have been described as Nos. 2 & 3, but the names of the occupiers were correct; & it should have been stated that the taxes of No. 3 were farmed by the landlord. The houses, Nos. 2 & 4, were of the same rate; but No. 4 was in the best state of repair:—Held: these misdescriptions were not cured by a condition, which provided, that if any error or misstatement should be found in the particular, it should not vitiate the sale.

If it is merely an error or a misstatement from error, then it is cured by the conditions. But there must be this limitation, if the description is of any other property than that intended to be sold, though it is made by the conditions, the conditions do not cure it (BEST, C.J.).—*LEACH v. Thus, where the particulars, on the sale of the lease of a house, under the Piazza in Covent Garden, stated, that the lessee was restricted from carrying on any offensive trade, or the trade of a coffee-house keeper, or working hatter; & the lease contained a clause of forfeiture for carrying on several other trades not offensive (inter alia) that of a fruiterer or herb seller:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to recover back his deposit, by reason of the omission in the particulars of the restriction as to the other inoffensive trades.—*FLIGHT v. The only part of the property to which a good title was shown contained 4 acres 3 roods. Another part of the property offered for sale bordered on the lake, & as to this the only title offered was what purported to be a title by possession for less than forty years. Pltf. claimed rescission of the contract & a return of the deposit paid by him, & defts. counter-claimed for specific performance:—Held: even if defts. had established a possessory title to the border land for twelve years, that would not have been sufficient, as the contract, so far as it related to that land, was an open one, in which case a forty years' title by possession was required; defts. were not entitled to specific performance in respect of the part of the property to which a good title had been shown; & pltf. was entitled to rescission of the contract & the return of his deposit.—*JACOBS v. Customary instead of statute acres — Area calculated by estimation.]—A contract for the purchase of a farm described it as containing "349 acres or thereabouts, be the same more or less"; & stipulated that the premises should be taken at the quantity above stated, whether more or less, in fact, the farm consisted of only 349 customary acres, which were less than the same number of statute acres by about 100 acres or upwards. On a bill being filed for specific performance, the purchaser, admitting that he had been for several months in possession of the property, & had exercised acts of ownership over it, on the faith that a good title to 349 acres would be shown, insisted, that, in the contract, acres meant statute acres, & that he was not bound to perform the contract, unless 349 statute acres were conveyed to him. Semble: the stipulation that the premises should be taken at the quantity before stated, be the same more or less, would not cover so large a deficiency as existed here.—*PORTMAN v. 854. ——— Condition excluding rescission & compensation.]—By an agreement dated Sept. 28, 1922, a freehold residence was contracted to be sold subject to the conditions of sale on which the property had been previously offered for sale by auction. These conditions consisted of certain special conditions & the general conditions known as the London Conditions of Sale. By condition 7 of the special conditions the property was sold subject to the following restrictions & stipulations: "That neither the land or (sic) any existing or future building thereon should be used for carrying on any trade or business nor as a school, hospital, nursing home, public workshop, or otherwise than as a private dwelling-house, but not precluding the practice of a profession thereon." By a mistake some words had been omitted from this statement of the restrictions. Instead of the words "public workshop" the restrictions should have read "or public institution, or charity, nor for holding public meetings, nor for public worship." Condition 6 of the general conditions contained the following provision: ". . . If any error, misstatement or omission shall be discovered in the particulars, the same shall not annul the sale, nor shall any compensation be allowed by the vendor in respect thereof." The purchaser took the objection that the restrictions had not been sufficiently disclosed:—Held: (1) the restrictions to which the property was subject had been sufficiently disclosed in the conditions; (2) even if they had not, the mistake was "an error, misstatement or omission" within the general condition, & the purchaser was not entitled to require the release of the omitted restrictions.—Re COURCIER & HARROLD'S CONTRACT, [1923] 1 Ch. 565; 92 L. iv. Easements.

855. Land described as fit for building—Sale in lots—Foot way over one lot.]—Certain property was offered for sale by public auction, in lots. The particulars, in describing lot 12, stated that the purchaser of that lot would be entitled to a right of carriage & foot way 13 feet wide over lot 13, as shown upon a plan annexed to the particulars, bearing & paying one moiety of the expense of keeping the road in repair. Lot 13 was described as "a first-rate building plot," with a frontage to a place called the Crescent sweep; & it was stated that that lot would include the ground forming part of the Crescent sweep comprised within the boundary of lot 13 by a line marked upon the plan, "subject for ever hereafter to the same rights of way & passage, & other rights & easements over the same, as are now enjoyed under the existing leases of the Crescent houses." The particulars of lot 7 described the two Crescent houses comprised in that lot as let on lease for a certain term, & stated that the lease might be seen at the office of the vendor's attorney, & would be produced at the sale. Pltf. attended & bid at the sale; lots 12 & 13 were severally knocked down to him; & he signed a single contract of purchase for the two at the foot of one of the printed particulars, & paid a deposit. Pltf. afterwards discovered, that, in the leases of the Crescent houses, there was reserved to the occupiers a right of way over lot 13, on foot & for the conveyance of gravel, manure, etc., from their gardens to the road. This right of way did not appear upon the plan:—Held: inasmuch as there was no sufficient disclosure of this right of way to enable a bidder by the exercise of ordinary vigilance to discover that such right existed, but, on the contrary, the plan being calculated to mislead, the misdescription, however unintentional, was such as to justify pltf. in refusing to accept either lot, the two being comprised in one contract, & the purchase of the one appearing to have induced the purchase of the other, but was entitled to recover back with interest the deposit paid to the auctioneer; & this notwithstanding a condition annexed to the particulars of sale, that, if any mistake were made in the description of the premises, or any other error should appear in the particulars, such mistake or error should not annul the sale, but a compensation or equivalent should be given or taken, as the case might require.—*DYKES v. 858. General condition as to easements—Right of entry to premises—Use of kitchen.]—A dwelling-house & offices were put up for sale by public auction under a printed condition in a common form that the lot was sold subject to any existing rights & easements of whatever nature, & the printed particulars made no mention of any easement or of any claim to an easement. As the result of evidence it appeared that the house was subject to an easement belonging to the owner of a neighbouring tenement to use the kitchen for particular purposes & that the vendor's solr. knew of the rumoured existence of some such easement but forbore to make inquiries. No grant of an easement appeared from the abstract & its existence was, in fact, disputed on the pleadings. In the auction room pltf.'s solr. said he had heard of some such claim but had no definite information about it & the auctioneer, in hearing of pltf.'s solr., on being questioned told the audience that they might dismiss the subject of the rumoured claims from their minds, as nobody would probably ever hear of them again:—Held: the conditions were misleading & the statements in the auction room insufficient & specific performance of the contract refused.—*HEYWOOD v. v. Sale of Leaseholds.

860. Underlease described as lease.]—Messuages described in a particular of sale as held for the residue of a term of ninety-nine years from June 24, 1838, but not as being held by an original lease, were sold subject to conditions that the purchaser should not be entitled to call for the lessor's title, & that any error or misstatement of the term of years should not vitiate the sale, but should be the subject of compensation, under a provision for arbn., authorising the arbitrator of either party to proceed in certain events ex parte. The title proved to be an underlease, for a term less by three days than the term of ninety-nine years granted by the original lease. The vendor filed the bill to enforce specific performance, with compensation to an amount which had been assessed, in conformity with the conditions, by one arbitrator, nominated by the vendor, the purchaser having taken no part in the arbn. The ct. dismissed the bill with costs.—MADELEY v. BOOTH (1848), 2 De G. & Sm. 718; 64 E. R. 321.

862. Title to commence with underlease—Underlease invalid.]—Pltf. on Mar. 12, 1880, entered into an agreement by private contract to buy certain leasehold houses in Walworth for £700. The agreement contained a statement that the property was held for a term of fifty years, less ten days, from Christmas, 1856, & also a condition that the title should commence with two underleases, dated Apr. 20 & 27, 1857, under which the vendor held the property, & that the purchaser should make no requisition or objection in respect of the prior title or the right to grant the under-leases. The purchase was completed. Four years afterwards the purchaser brought an action to set aside the conveyance, having discovered the under-leases to be invalid:—Held: the purchaser had a right to rely on the statement that the property was held for a term of fifty years, & the condition could not prevail against it; the purchaser was entitled to have the conveyance set aside, but the parties agreeing that damages should be paid him instead, the proper measure of such damages was the difference between £700 & the true value of the property for a term with only nine & a half years to run from the date of the contract, calculated on the assumption that £700 was its true value if held for the longer term.—NASH v. WOODERSON (1881), 52 L. T. 49; 33 W. R. 301.

vi. Value of Property.

863. Sale of reversionary interest — Misdescription of interest & age of reversioner.]—On a sale of a reversionary interest, with the usual condition, that no error of description, etc., should vitiate the sale, but a compensation be allowed; the reversion was described as absolute, on the death of a person aged sixty-six. In fact, the person was only sixty-four, & the reversion was not absolute, as the property would be divided if he left more children than one:—Held: this sale was void, & the offer of a compensation would not support it; but if it had been a mere difference of the age, semble, it would have been otherwise.—*SHERWOOD v. 866. —.]—In deciding whether a purchaser is getting substantially that which he bargained for, the ct. is bound to consider every incident by which the property offered to be assured can be differentiated from that contracted for. If the sum of these incidents really alters the subject-matter, then the purchaser can repudiate the contract; if, on the other hand, the subject-matter remains unaffected or so little affected as to be substantially that which was agreed to be sold, then the purchaser must be held to his contract.

By an agreement in writing a vendor agreed to sell, & a purchaser agreed to purchase, thirteen freehold houses let on six leases for a term of ninety-nine years at ground rents amounting in the aggregate to £72. One pair of houses was described in the contract as let at one entire rent of £11 10s. each of the next four pairs at one rent of £11 & the last three houses at one rent of £16 10s. The title shown was for twelve houses at a rent of £5 10s. each, & one at a rent of £8, each of such rents issuing out of & secured by one of the thirteen houses instead of the six rents described in the agreement. The agreement contained a provision that "if there be any misstatement or error in the description of the premises" no compensation should be allowed or the sale annulled. In an action by the purchaser for rescission of the contract & a return of the deposit on the ground of misdescription:—Held: the property which the vendor offered to convey was substantially different from that which the purchaser contracted to buy; the clause providing that a misstatement or error should not annul the contract did not apply, & the purchaser was entitled to rescission & a return of his deposit.—LEE v. RAYSON, [1917]

870. — Sale of mine—Part of mine belonging to third party.]—In an agreement for the sale of seventeen undivided shares of a coal mine there was an article stating two conveyances by which six undivided shares of the land beneath which the coal lay had been conveyed to the vendors' predecessor in title, but stating that there was no express mention in the conveyances of the minerals under the land, & requiring that the purchasers should assume that six undivided shares of the minerals passed by the conveyances of the land, & thereby became absolutely vested in the vendors' predecessor in title. In the abstract of the vendors' title sent to the purchasers mention was made of a certain indenture, but nothing further was said about it. The purchasers' solr. inquired of the vendors' solr. what this deed was, & was told that it could not be found, & no abstract of it or information about it could be furnished, but that it was believed not to affect the property sold. The vendors' solr. also said, as he really believed to be the case, that though the title to the six undivided shares could not be strictly proved, yet the vendors had a good holding title to them. After these transactions the purchasers entered into the agreement, & paid the deposit money. Subsequently, the deed which was supposed to have been lost was found, when it was discovered that by virtue of it the six undivided shares of the mine belonged to some person quite different from the vendors, & that neither they, nor their predecessor in title, had ever had any title to those shares. The purchasers refused to proceed with the agreement, whereupon the vendors brought this action for specific performance of it. The purchasers contended that without these six shares the mine would be useless to them, & claimed to be entitled to be released from the agreement:—Held: as there had been no fraud in the matter, but the vendors had acted under a bonâ fide mistake, & the purchasers had had the fact that there was a doubt as to the title brought to their notice before entering into the agreement, & had thought fit to run the risk of taking the property without having the matter cleared up, specific performance of the agreement ought to be decreed, but a deduction must be made from the purchase-money as compensation to the purchasers

871. — Sale of garden enclosed by wall—Vendor knowing purchaser's intention to build.]—The particulars of sale of a freehold property described the garden as "inclosed by a rustic wall with tradesmen's side entrance." The wall did not form part of the property, & the tradesmen's side entrance was used on sufferance. This was known to the vendor, but not disclosed to the purchaser. The conditions of sale provided that mistakes or errors in the description of particulars should not annul the sale, but that compensation should be given:—Held: it was not a case for compensation, & the purchaser was entitled to have the contract rescinded.—BREWER v. BROWN (1884), 28 Ch. D. 309; 54 L. J. Ch. 605.

872. — Part of house belonging to third party.]—On a sale by the ct. of property described in the particulars as freehold stabling with dwelling rooms over, one of the conditions provided that if any error or misstatement should appear to have been made in the particulars of sale or conditions, it should not annul the sale, but compensation, to be settled by the judge in chambers, should be made in respect thereof; the property was conveyed to pltf. the purchaser, in Oct. 1897, & the purchase-money was paid into ct., & the bulk of it distributed among the beneficiaries. A year after completion it was discovered that some of the dwelling rooms over & a cellar underneath a portion of the property belonged to third persons, & pltf. eventually had to pay £300 to acquire a title to these dwelling rooms. In Feb. 1900, the present action was commenced against the vendor trustee & the beneficiaries, claiming compensation for the errors & misstatements in the particulars & conditions of sale, or, in the alternative, to set aside the sale on the ground of common mistake, & obtain repayment of the purchase-money:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to compensation under the above condition of sale, which did not, & was not intended to, apply to the case of a defect of title, but only to error or misstatement in the subject-matter of the sale; even assuming there had been a common mistake, & assuming that there need not be a total failure of consideration to justify rescission after conveyance, the error made in the present case was not sufficient to justify rescission, & pltf.'s action therefore failed & must be dismissed.—*DEBENHAM v. (2) By an agreement between vendor & purchaser, it was agreed, that the purchaser should be entitled to the rents on May 1, 1813, or from such time as the purchase should be completed. An abstract of title was afterwards furnished to the purchaser, & the title appeared to be satisfactory to the purchaser; & in May 1816, he sent the vendor a draft conveyance for his approval, which was returned approved in July, 1816. Afterwards, the purchaser, on the suggestion of counsel, made several objections to the title, & delayed completing the purchase. In Nov. 1817, the vendor filed his bill for specific performance, & in that suit the master found, that the vendor could make a good title before the bill was filed, & did not show a good title to the purchaser till Jan. 20, 1825. 882. ———.]—Equity, which governed the rights of the parties in cases of specific performance of contracts to sell real estate, looked not at the letter but at the substance of the agreement, to ascertain whether the parties, notwithstanding that they named a specific time within which completion was to take place, really & in substance intended no more than that it should take place within a reasonable time. . . .

. . . The special jurisdiction of equity to disregard the letter of the contract in ascertaining what the parties to the contract were to be taken as having really & in substance intended as regards the time of its performance might be excluded by any plainly expressed stipulation. But to have that effect the language of the stipulation must show that the intention was to make the rights of the parties depend on the observance of the prescribed time limits in a fashion which was unmistakable. The language would have that effect if it plainly excluded the notion that those time limits were of merely secondary importance in the bargain, & that to disregard them would be to disregard nothing that lay at its foundation. Primâ facie, equity treated the importance of such time limits as being subordinate to the main purpose of the parties, & would enjoin specific performance notwithstanding that from the point of view of a ct. of law the contract had not been literally performed by plff. as regards the time limit specified. That was merely an illustration of that general principle of disregarding the letter for the substance which cts. of equity applied when, for instance, they decreed specific performance with compensation for a non-essential deficiency in subject-matter. But equity would not assist where there had been undue delay on the part of one party to the contract & the other had given him reasonable notice that he must complete within a definite time. Nor would it exercise its jurisdiction when the character of the property or when other circumstances would render such exercise likely to result in injustice. In such cases, the circumstances themselves, apart from any question of expressed intention, excluded the jurisdiction. Equity would further infer an intention that time should be of the essence from what had passed between the parties before the signing of the contract. . . . But in such a case the intention must appear from what had passed before the contract, & its construction could not be affected in the contemplation of equity by what took place after it had once been entered into (LORD HALDANE).—JAMSHED KHODARAM IRANI v. 893. Postponement contemplated by contract.]—Upon a contract for the sale of a house & land required for immediate residence, the conditions were that the purchase should be completed at noon on Feb. 26, on which day the purchaser, having paid his purchase-money, was to be entitled to possession; but if, from any cause whatever, the purchase should not then be completed, the purchaser was to pay interest on the purchase-money from that day until the completion; & if any objections or requisitions as to title should be made upon the delivery of the abstract which the vendor should be unable or unwilling to remove, then the vendor was to be at liberty to cancel the contract. The vendor failed to complete his title by the day named; but negotiations were continued till Apr. 7 on which day notice was given by the purchaser of immediate abandonment of the contract. Upon bill filed by the vendor for specific performance:—Held: as a possible postponement of completion of the contract was contemplated by the terms of the agreement, time was not of the essence of the contract, & if it had been so the purchaser, by continuing the negotiations as to title after the day fixed for completion, had waived it, & could not rescind without reasonable notice.—WEBB v. HUGHES (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 281; 39 L. J. Ch. 606; 18 W. R. 749.

to such provision, saving the vendor's rights to resell upon breach of the conditions of sale, does not alter the general effect of it.

The very clause which speaks of the completion of the sale by a certain period contains words showing that the parties did not intend that the contract should be necessarily & finally completed by that day. . . . If it has been the rule in equity, as seems to be the case, that time is of the essence of the contract only where it is either expressly stated to be so, or there is a necessary implication to that effect, here there is an almost necessary implication the other way (GROVE, J.).—PATRICK v. MILNER (1877), 2 C. P. D. 342; 46 L. J. Q. B. 537; 36 L. T. 738; 41 J. P. 568; 25 W. R. 790.

895. —.]—Where a contract for purchase provides that possession shall be given by a certain day, the word "possession" must be understood to mean possession with a good title shown. This construction is the same in equity as at law, although a ct. of equity will consider time not to be of the essence of the contract, & will relieve against a breach of performance at the date assigned, unless there is something in the contract, the nature of the property, or the circumstances, which renders it inequitable for the ct. to interfere.

A person agreed to purchase a leasehold house for his own residence, & contracted that he should have possession by a certain day; but the vendor, although he tendered possession, failed to show a good title by the day named:—Held: the stipulation as to time was of the essence of the contract, & bill for specific performance of the agreement dismissed.

A ct. of equity will indeed relieve against, & enforce, specific performance, notwithstanding a failure to keep the dates assigned by the contract, either for completion, or for the steps towards completion, if it can do justice between the parties, & if, as TURNER, L.J., said in Roberts v. Berry, No. 636, ante, there is nothing in the "express stipulations between the parties, the nature of the property, or the surrounding circumstances" which would make it inequitable to interfere with & modify the legal right. This is what is meant, & all that is meant, when it is said that in equity time is not of the essence of the contract (CAIRNS, L.J.).—TILLEY v. THOMAS (1867), 3 Ch. App. 61; 17 L. T. 422; 32 J. At the date of the contract defts. had no legal title to the land, it being part of a larger estate which defts. had agreed to purchase as a speculation & which they resold in lots to twenty-three purchasers. Shortly after the date of the agreement the purchaser sold the benefit thereof to another person, who, after considerable delay, sold his interest therein to a third person, & the original vendor had notice of these transactions. In addition to this an action, of which the original vendor had notice, was subsequently commenced against the original purchaser by a fourth person for specific performance of an alleged agreement for the sale of the public-house to him by such purchaser, & was registered as a lis pendens, which prevented the original purchaser from borrowing on the security of the public-house the money necessary to complete her purchase. Meanwhile negotiations between the original vendor & purchaser continued after the date fixed for completion; & when the title had been accepted & the draft conveyance approved, the original vendor on Feb. 13, 1897, gave notice to the original purchaser to complete in ten days, to which the latter replied that she had already commenced proceedings to get the lis pendens vacated, &, when this was accomplished, would complete as soon as possible, & objected that a ten days' notice was not reasonable under the circumstances. The original vendor, however, at the expiration of the ten days, notified to the original purchaser that the contract was at an end. Upon motion by the latter for an injunction to restrain the original vendor from dealing with the public-house without regard to her rights under their agreement:—Held: the notice was reasonable under the circumstances; & the motion was dismissed.—*SMITH v. 920 i. ———. Continuing negotiations after fixed time.—An agreement of sale contained provision for forfeiture for non-performance by the purchaser of conditions, time being "of the essence of the agreement," or at the option of the vendor a right of resale. After the conditions had been broken, the vendor entered into negotiations with the purchaser to induce him to live up to his agreement, & delayed for some months to give notice of forfeiture required:—Held: the vendor did not possess the right to cancel the agreement as against

924. — — — Purchaser in possession—Confessing judgment in ejectment.]—Agreement for sale of real property, with a stipulation that, if the residue of the purchase-money is not paid by a certain day, the agreement shall be void, & the vendors shall have power to resell. The money is not paid on the day, but the purchaser retains possession, giving a warrant of attorney to confess judgment in ejectment. The stipulation as to time in the agreement is waived.—Re EASTERN COUNTIES RAILWAY ACT, Ex p. GARDNER (1841), 4 Y. & C. Ex. 503; 10 L. J. Ex. Eq. 46; 160 E. R. 1106.

925. — — — Extension of time by notice—Terms of notice not accepted—Conditional waiver.]—By an agreement dated Jan. 1, 1873 the Clothworkers' co. agreed to grant a lease of a piece of land to M. & W. for eighty years from Dec. 15, 1872, M. & W. covenanting to erect a house of a specified value thereon within one year from Dec. 25, 1872; & in case of default in completing the buildings for two months from the expiration of the year the Clothworkers' co. were entitled to put an end to the agreement & take possession of the premises.

By an agreement dated July 15, 1873, M. & W. agreed to sell their interest under the agreement of Jan. 1, 1873, to plffs. for £2,000; of which sum £1,000 was paid on the execution of the agreement, & the remaining £1,000 was to be paid on July 31, 1873, or at such deferred date as the parties might agree upon, & it was provided that plffs. should accept the title of M. & W., & that they should not require a formal assignment of the agreement, & that the purchasers should take upon themselves every liability under which M. & W. were; & the agreement provided that if plffs. should fail to pay the £1,000 on July 31, or at such deferred date as the parties might agree upon, all money paid previously to such default should be absolutely forfeited, & the agreement should become null & void.

The £1,000 was not paid on July 31, nor was any deferred time for payment agreed on. On Aug. 16, 1873, at which time plffs. were in possession of the ground, but had not commenced building, M. & W. gave plffs. notice that unless the works were commenced on the following Monday, the £1,000 must be paid within one week from the following Tuesday which would be Aug. 26. The works were not commenced, nor was the £1,000 paid; & on Oct. 2, M. & W. gave plffs. notice that in consequence of default having been made in the payment of the £1,000, the agreement had become void; & that they would proceed to deal with the property as if the agreement had not been entered into. On the same day plffs. gave M. & W. a counter notice requiring them to perform the agreement, but without offering to pay the £1,000. On Oct. 17 the Clothworkers' co. sent M. & W. a notice, requiring them to proceed with the buildings, & on Oct. 20 M. & W. assigned the benefit of the agreement to B., who, on Dec. 26 took possession of the ground, commenced building.

On Jan. 8, 1874, plffs. filed a bill offering to pay the £1,000, & interest, & praying for specific performance of the agreement of July 15, 1873, & that B. might be restrained from continuing in possession of the ground, & M. & W. from assigning their interest under the agreement with the Clothworkers' co., except to plffs.:—Held: time was of the essence of the contract, & the notice of Aug. 16 was only a qualified & conditional waiver, the terms of which were not complied with, & therefore the waiver did not take effect.

Where time is of the essence of the contract, the mere extension of time is only a waiver to the extent of substituting the extended time for the original time, & not an utter destruction of the essential character of the time.—BARCLAY v. MESSENGER (1874), 43 L. J. Ch. 449; 30 L. T. 351; 22 W. R. 522.

The sale was not completed by the time specified, & some months afterwards the purchaser acquiesced in the proceedings then taken to perfect the title:—Held: he had waived the condition.—MCDONALD v. GARRETT (1859), 7 Gr. 606.—CAN.

922 li. — — —.]—Where under the terms of a written agreement for the sale of land, time was made of the essence, & the purchasers were ready & willing to close on the day fixing for closing, but the vendors were unable to complete:—Held: the purchasers were not by certain later interviews had by their solr. with the vendors' solrs., or by certain acts of their own, precluded from relying upon the condition as a defence to the vendors' action for specific performance, such interviews & acts not amounting to a recognition by the purchasers of the contract as still subsisting or to a communication to the vendors of a willingness on the part of the purchasers to complete, notwithstanding the lapse of time.—DANFORTH HEIGHTS, LTD. v. McDERMID BROTHERS, [1923] 3 D. L. R. 757; 52 O. L. R. 412.—CAN.

d. — — — Purchaser in possession—Acceptance of interest by vendor's attorney after judgment for ejectment.]—

In a contract of sale, the vendor covenanted for quiet enjoyment until default in payment of the purchase money & interest. It was also stipulated that time was to be considered the essence of the agreement, & unless the payments were punctually made, the vendor was to be at liberty to resell. On ejectment for non-payment of a half-year's interest:—Held: the receipt of the interest by the vendor's attorney after action, without costs,

B. Payment of Purchase-Money.

928. Payment on good title being made—Necessity for showing title—Effect of execution of bond by vendor.]—A purchaser, who has paid a deposit under a prior engagement, & taken possession, contracts to pay the residue of the purchase-money on a day certain, upon the vendor making a good title to the premises; or, otherwise, if such title shall not be complete, upon the vendor's executing a bond to complete the title, & to convey the estate as soon as same can be completed:—Held: the vendor is bound to show that he can make a good title, & the purchaser is not to rely merely on his bond.—CLARKE v. FAUX (1827), 3 Russ. 320; 38 E. R. 596; sub nom. CLARKE v. VAUX, 6 L. J. O. S. (Ch. 17).

929. —Purchaser let into possession—Objection to title.]—On a contract for the sale of an estate, the vendor agreed, on or before July 1, 1831, upon receiving the purchase-money, to execute conveyances; & the purchaser agreed, on having a good title made out, to pay the purchase-money; & it was further agreed, that, upon payment of the purchase-money, the purchaser should be let into possession. The purchaser, with the consent of the vendor, entered into possession, & afterwards objected to the title:—Held: he was ordered, on motion, either to give up possession or pay the purchase-money into ct.—*TINDAL v. 930. Payment irrespective of conveyance.]—

A deed executed by pltf. & deft., after reciting that a co. had been formed for the purpose of constructing a railway which would pass through pltf.'s estate, & that an application to Parliament for an Act of incorporation was then pending, contained a covenant by deft., that within six months from the time of the passing the proposed bill, & before the co. should enter upon, take, or use the estate, except for the purpose of setting out & ascertaining the land required, deft. should pay to pltf. the sum of £4,000 for the purchase of the estate as thereafter described. There was also a covenant, that, on payment by deft. of the sum of £4,000 & interest, after the expiration of six months after the passing of the bill to the day of payment of the sum, pltf. should convey to deft. so much of the estate as should be required for the construction of the railway. In an action on the covenant, for the non-payment of the purchase-money, after six months from the passing of the bill:—Held: the covenant to pay the purchase-money, & to convey the property, were independent covenants.—*SIBTHORP v. 935 i. Interest payable from certain day—Whether absolute condition—Delay by vendor.—Where in the contract for the sale & purchase of land, the parties fix the time for payment of the purchase-money & the period from which interest thereon is to be computed, irrespective of the time fixed for completion, interest must, in the absence of default or breach of contract or of actual misconduct in relation thereto on the part of the vendor, be paid from the period named, notwithstanding the existence of difficulties as to title justifying the purchaser in refusing to complete until they are removed.—Re DINGMAN & HALL'S CONTRACT (1890), 17 A. The deed, after reciting that A. A. D. had agreed to purchase certain land of pltf., which same land A. A. D. had agreed to sell to defts., stated that it was thereby covenanted by each party thereto, that A. A. D. should sell, & defts. should purchase, the said land at £7,335, £900 to be paid upon the execution of the deed, & £6,435 on Nov. 27, 1851. The deed then contained the following covenant, “& the said R. W. & H. W., defts., for themselves, their heirs, etc., hereby covenant with the said W. T. K., pltf., his exors., etc., & as a separate covenant, with the said A. A. D. his exors., etc., that they the said R. W. & H. W. their heirs, etc., shall, on performance of the covenant & agreement hereinbefore contained on the part of the said A. A. D. pay to the said W. T. K. his exors., etc., or to the said A. A. K. his exors., etc., shall then have been paid his or their purchase-money, payable, etc., the sum of £6,435, being the remainder of the said purchase-money, on or before Nov. 27, 1851, & further, that the said R. W. & H. W. their heirs, etc., shall, in the meantime, & until the whole of the said sum of £6,435 shall be paid off, pay to the said W. T. K. his exors., etc., interest on so much of the purchase-money as shall from time to time remain unpaid, at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, from the date of these presents,” etc.:—Held: W. T. K., pltf., might properly sue alone for interest on the unpaid portion of the purchase-money, the covenant being several.—KEIGHTLEY v. WATSON (1849), 3 Exch. 716; 18 L. J. Ex. 339; 154 *E. 943. Ascending scale of interest—Payable in certain events—Whether purchaser may be relieved—In absence of fraud.—A contract for sale of land provided that the purchaser should pay interest on the purchase-money at 4 per cent., from the time of taking possession until July 1, 1858, the day appointed by the contract for the payment of the purchase-money, & after that day at 5 per cent.; if the purchase-money should not be then paid, & after Jan. 1, 1859, at 8 per cent., with a proviso that this should not give the purchaser the right to delay the payment of the purchase-money on paying such higher rate of interest. The purchaser took possession of the land in 1857, but owing to circumstances, not caused by the misconduct or negligence of the vendor, the purchase was not completed until 1865:—Held: the stipulation for payment of a higher rate of interest was not in the nature of a penalty to secure the punctual payment of the purchase-money, against which the purchaser was entitled to be relieved, but a separate & distinct contract which he was bound to perform.—HERBERT v. SALISBURY & YEOMIL RY. CO. (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 221; 14 L. T. 507; 14 W. R. 706.

Purchase-money unpaid—Option to pay or give up possession—Interest payable on giving up possession.—Where a purchaser of real estate fails to complete his contract by payment of the balance of his purchase-money by the stipulated day, but, being in possession on that day, retains possession thereafter without paying interest or rent, the ct. will not, on a motion by the vendor in an action for specific performance, order him to pay the balance of purchase-money into ct. without giving him the option either of retiring from possession on a certain day or of paying the balance into ct. on that day, with interest from the day fixed by the contract for completion, even though the purchaser is in possession under the contract and has made no objection to the vendor's title; but that option will not be given if the purchaser has done any thing to prejudice the value of the property as a security for the balance.—*GREENWOOD v. 949. — Unnecessary requisition.]—By a contract for purchase, interest was to be paid on the purchase-money from Dec. 26, 1852, if the purchase was not then completed. Certain objections & requisitions were made with regard to the title. The purchaser declining to complete until these were satisfactorily answered, the vendor filed a claim for specific performance on May 2, 1853, & in the following month sent copies of certain deeds, upon receiving which the purchaser, in Nov. accepted the title. The claim came on to be heard, when the ct., considering that these deeds were not essential to the title, decreed specific performance, with costs, & interest to be paid by the purchaser from Dec. 26, 1852.—LITCHFIELD v. BROWN (1853), 23 L. J. Ch. 176.

950. — Untenable requisition.]—By the conditions of sale it was provided that if the purchase should not be completed at the time appointed, the purchaser should pay interest on the remainder of the purchase-money at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum from that time until the same should be paid, or the vendor might take the rents & discharge the outgoings. Provided always that if the delay in completion should arise from any cause other than the neglect or default of the purchaser, & if the purchaser should at his own risk & expense deposit the remainder of the purchase-money at any bank upon a deposit account bearing interest & should give notice thereof to the vendor, the vendor should from the time of the notice only be entitled to such interest as should be actually produced by the amount so deposited. The day fixed for completion was Sept. 2, 1907. On Sept. 4, 1907, after the decision of NEVILLE, J., the purchaser placed the balance of the purchase-money, £99,000, on deposit with a bank, & gave notice to the vendors. On Feb. 28, 1908, he took the money off the deposit account & paid it into ct. under an order made in lunacy proceedings. The purchase was not yet completed, & the vendors now claimed interest at 5 per cent. per annum on the balance of the purchase-money from the date fixed for completion up to Feb. 28,

1908. The purchaser maintained that they were only entitled to the interest actually produced by the deposit account, & pleaded a settled account:—Held: (1) a decision by the ct. that a requisition is untenable is equivalent to a decision that the purchaser is in default in refusing to complete until the objection is removed; that default involved breach of some duty owed to another; (2) a person guilty of a breach of duty is guilty of default, but in considering whether he is under that duty the ct. will be guided by the nature of the contract & all the circumstances of the case; (3) there is no rule that conduct amounting to default must be conduct which is unreasonable; the words "doing what is reasonable under the circumstances" used by BOWEN, L.J., in Re Young & Harston's Contract, No. 957, ante, mean the same thing as doing what a person ought to do having regard to his relations to others, & do not suggest any standard based on what a prudent man would do for his own protection; the rule there suggested that a vendor of real estate is not guilty of default so long as he acts reasonably having regard to his relations towards other persons interested in the contract applies to purchasers as well as to vendors; in the present case the delay had been caused by the conduct of the purchaser, who though acting reasonably for his own protection had committed a breach of duty towards the vendors in repudiating the contract although the title was good; & the settled account under the circumstances was no defence to the claim for interest at 5 per cent.—Re BAYLEY-WORTHINGTON & COHEN'S CONTRACT, [1909] 1 Ch. 648; 78 L. Another condition purported to describe the statutory title under which the vendors, who were a corp., & had been in possession for a long period, were selling. Upon subsequent investigation it appeared that, through having omitted to examine their alleged statutory title, the vendors had misdescribed it in the condition, an important part of the property being held under an entirely different statutory title, & eventually the title to the whole was not finally accepted by the purchaser until Sept. 29, but the purchaser did not in fact complete until some months afterwards, having been unable previously to find his purchase-money. He paid interest from Sept. 29, until completion, but contended that he was not liable for interest from June 24 to Sept. 29, on the ground that the delay in making a good title had arisen from the "wilful default" of the vendors in having omitted to verify their title by proper investigation before making the positive statement in the conditions:—Held: (1) there had been no "wilful default" on the part of the vendors within the meaning of the condition; but, even assuming there had been such "wilful default," the non-completion on June 24 was really attributable to the purchaser's voluntary delay in making requisitions & examining into the title, & to his inability to find his purchase-money, & he was therefore liable to interest from that date.

(2) In order to exonerate the purchaser from liability to pay interest, he must prove some "wilful default" on the part of the vendors which caused delay in the completion of the purchase. Proof by the purchaser that he could not prudently complete the purchase by the day named owing to some difficulty arising on the investigation of the vendor's title, is not of itself enough to exonerate the purchaser from payment of interest, for it is quite possible that the difficulty may not be owing to any wilful default on the part of the vendors (LINDLEY, L.J.).—Re LONDON CORPN. & TUBBS' CONTRACT, [1894] 2 Ch. 524; 63 L. 957. What amounts to wilful default—Going abroad—Immediately before day fixed for completion.—Conditions of sale provided that the purchase was to be completed by Sept. 8, & that "if from any cause whatever other than wilful default on the part of the vendor" completion of the purchase was delayed beyond that day the purchase-money was to bear interest from that day to the day of actual payment. The property was in mtge., & the draft conveyance was not returned approved by the mtgees. to the purchasers until Sept. 6. On Sept. 8, the engrossment was sent to the vendor's solrs., but the vendor had gone abroad for his autumn holiday on Sept. 6, & the engrossment executed by him was not returned until Sept. 18. The mtgees. were also out of town, & the vendor's solrs. declined to incur the expenses of a special messenger to procure execution by them. The purchase was not completed until Oct. 14. On summons by the purchasers under the Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), s. 9, for recovery of interest on the purchase-money paid by them under protest:—Held: by his going abroad two days before the time known by him to have been fixed for completion of the purchase, there had been so far "wilful default on the part of the vendor" within the exception contained in the conditions of sale, that the purchasers were entitled to recover out of the interest paid by them a sum proportionate to the delay. Qu.: whether the ct. has jurisdiction upon summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), s. 9, to order interest which has been erroneously paid by a purchaser to be repaid to him.—Re YOUNG & HARSTON'S CONTRACT (1885), 31 Ch. 958. — Conveyance not secured from mortgagee—Mortgagee going abroad—Vendor relying on power of attorney.—On Sept. 14, 1892, vendors contracted to sell a piece of freehold land subject to the condition, that "if from any cause whatever other than the wilful default of the vendors" the purchase should not be completed by the day fixed for completion, the purchaser should pay interest on the purchase-money until completion. The property was subject to a mtge. to two trustees, one of whom, P., a solr., had gone abroad before the date of the contract, having given to his partner a general power of attorney, authorising him to execute deeds & transfer any property held by P. as trustee or mtgee. The vendors knew that it would be difficult to communicate with P., but, relying on the sufficiency of the power of attorney, they fixed Nov. 10, 1892, for the completion of the purchase. The purchaser, however, declined to complete without a conveyance from P. himself, alleging that, notwithstanding Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 2, there was no person to whom the mtge. money could safely be paid. A conveyance from P. was ultimately obtained; but, owing to the delay thus caused the purchase was not completed until Mar. 1, 1893, & the vendors claimed interest on the purchase-money from Nov. 10, 1892:—Held: (1) the case was not within Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 2, & the purchaser was justified in refusing to complete without a release from P.; (2) the delay in completion was attributable to the wilful default of the vendors, & they were not entitled to any interest on the purchase-money.

The vendors here knew all the facts, but they hoped that the power of attorney would enable them to remove the difficulty occasioned by the facts with which they were fully acquainted. This hope & the mistake they made are not enough to enable the ct. to hold that there was no wilful default on their part (LINDLEY, L.J.).—Re HETLING & MERTON'S CONTRACT, [1893] 3 Ch. 269; 62 L. 962. — Repudiation of contract—By resisting action for specific performance.]—An agreement for the sale of 36 acres of land, part of a larger amount belonging to the vendor, for the sum of £3,600, left the boundary of the land on one side, where there was no visible division between the land sold & the land retained, to be subsequently marked out by a fence; & concluded with the words, "subject to approval of conditions & form of agreement by purchaser's solr." The vendor was mistaken as to the acreage of his land, & the portion he had intended to sell measured out at 42 acres, which amount he required the purchaser to take at £100 an acre. In an action by the purchaser to enforce the original agreement which the vendor repudiated:—Held: by repudiating the contract the vendor had not been guilty of "wilful default" so as to disentitle him to interest payable under the contract until completion.

964. — Refusal to deliver abstract—Due to misinterpretation of conditions.]—On a sale of land by auction the particulars stated that "those purchasers who wished to avoid unnecessary expense & to accept conveyances prepared by the vendors' solrs. may have such conveyances free of expenses, except stamp duty," but the conditions of sale did not provide that purchasers who agreed to accept free conveyances should not be entitled to the delivery of abstracts of title or to investigate the title to the lots purchased by them. They, however, contained the usual provision requiring the purchaser to pay interest on his unpaid purchase-money in case of non-completion on the appointed day, if not caused by wilful neglect or default of the vendors. A purchaser of several lots agreed in his contract to take a free conveyance, but requested delivery of an abstract to enable him to investigate the title, before completion. The vendors, however, refused to deliver the abstract until completion, on the ground that the purchaser by agreeing to accept a free conveyance had waived his right to delivery of an abstract & to investigate the title. Upon a summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), taken out by the purchaser:—Held: the vendors were bound to deliver an abstract to the purchaser to enable him to investigate the title before completion, & their refusal to do this, though owing to misinterpretation of the conditions of sale, constituted wilful neglect or default on their part, so as to free the purchaser from liability to pay interest on his unpaid purchase-money from the day fixed for completion.—Re PELLY & JACOB'S CONTRACT (1899), 80 L. T. 45.

965. — Honest mistake.]—An agreement dated Sept. 26, 1898, for the sale of land provided that, if from any cause whatever, other than wilful default on the part of the vendors, the completion of the purchase should be delayed beyond Jan. 2, 1899, the purchase-money should bear interest at 5 per cent. per annum. The title having been accepted, a dispute arose about the form of the conveyance, & the purchase was not completed on the day fixed. On June 12, 1899, the vendors threatened in effect that, if the purchaser did not within ten days assent to the form of conveyance which they proposed, they would cancel the contract & forfeit the deposit. On June 22, 1899, the purchaser commenced an action for specific performance of the contract. At the trial on Feb. 2, 1900, the judge held that the purchaser was in the right as to the form of the conveyance, & gave judgment for specific performance, with costs up to the date of the judgment. The judgment directed that interest (if any) should be computed on the balance of the purchase-money from Jan. 2, 1899, & an account should be taken of the rents & profits of the land received by defts. since Jan. 2, 1899, & it was ordered that what should be coming on the account of rents & profits should be deducted from the amount of the purchase-money & interest when computed. On a motion by pltf. to vary the master's certificate, the judge held that there had been no "wilful default" by the vendors, & that, even if there had been, the delay in completion was due, not to the default, but to the inability of the purchaser to find the money to complete the purchase, & consequently that the purchaser must pay interest on the balance of the purchase-money from Jan. 2, 1899, down to completion:—Held: either there had been no wilful default by the vendors, or, if there had been, the delay in completion was not due to the default, & the decision as to payment of interest was right.

In Re London Corporation & Tubbs' Contract, No. 954, ante, the Ct. of Appeal did not intend to depart from the general rule laid down in Re Young & Harston's Contract, No. 957, ante. Nor was it intended to lay down that every case of honest mistake by a vendor is without that rule. So to hold would be inconsistent with Re Helling & Merton's Contract, No. 958, ante.—BENNETT v. STONE, [1903] 1 Ch. 509; 72 L. J. Ch. 240; 88 L. T. 35; 51 W. R. 338; 47 Sol. Jo. 278, C. A.

967. Delay not attributable to default of vendor—Ignorance of defect in title—No breach of duty on part of vendor.—A clause in a contract for the sale of lands provided that, if from any cause whatever other than the "default of the vendor," the purchase should not be completed by the day fixed, the purchaser should pay interest until completion. Upon investigation of the title a defect in it was discovered by the vigilance of the purchaser's advisers, which was not known to or suspected by the vendor when he entered into the contract, & the time occupied in remedying the defect delayed the completion of the purchase for nearly three months after the day fixed. The purchaser did not have, & keep, his money ready at the proper time, making no interest of it:—Held: there being no want of reasonable care on the part of the vendor & no abstention from doing anything that he ought to have done, the delay was not attributable to his "default," & the purchaser must pay interest until completion.—Re WOOD & LEWIS' CONTRACT, [1898] 2 Ch. 211; 67 L. 972. Commencement of liability—On good title being shown.—A contract of purchase contained a stipulation, that if by reason of any unforeseen or unavoidable obstacles, the conveyance could not be perfected for execution before the day fixed for the completion of the purchase, the purchaser should from that day pay interest at 5 per cent. on his purchase-money, & be entitled to the rents & profits of the premises; the vendor did not show a good title till long after the specified day:—Held: he was not entitled to interest except from the time when a good title was first shown.—MONK v. HUSKISSON (1827), 4 Russ. 121, n.

973. ——By the conditions of sale under a decree, it was provided, that the purchaser of each lot should pay the remainder of his purchase-money into the bank, to the credit of the cause, on or before Dec. 26, 1845, & should then be entitled to the receipt of the rents from Dec. 25; but if the purchaser should fail in making such payment, then & in such case, & from whatever cause the delay might have arisen, he should pay interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, on the balance of his purchase-money, from that day until the payment thereof. It was also provided, that the vendor should, within three days from the confirmation of the purchase, deliver an abstract & deduce a good title to the lots sold. The order nisi was confirmed absolutely on Dec. 4, 1845, & no abstract was delivered to the purchaser until Jan. 3, 1846, & the title was not completed until Aug. 1847. On Dec. 23, 1845, the purchaser deposited the balance of his purchase-money with his private bankers, at 2½ per cent. per annum interest, & gave notice thereof to the vendors, & that the difference of interest between 5 per cent. & 2½ per cent. from Dec. 7, 1845, must be at the loss of the vendors, so long as they delayed the delivery of the abstract. In Aug. 1847, the purchaser paid the balance of his purchase-money, with 5 per cent. interest, into ct., without prejudice to his right to compensation or allowance, by reason of the delay on the part of the vendors in completing the title to the purchased estate:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to compensation, & for that purpose a reference was ordered to the master to inquire & ascertain from what time a good title was shown, the payment of interest by the purchaser to commence from that time, & not earlier.

In cases like the present, the principle strictly carried out, is, to postpone the payment of the purchase-money till the time when a good title was shown, the vendor being entitled to the rents up to that time, & the purchaser paying interest from that time; such time to be ascertained by the master under the order of reference.—*DE VISME v. The vendors delivered their abstract of title in Sept. 1851, but did not make out a good title till March, 1852. On a motion then made, that the purchaser might pay his purchase-money into ct. with interest, according to the condition:—Held: the condition did not apply; but as the purchaser had had the benefit of the wearing out of the lives, he must pay interest at the rate of 4 per cent.—*WALLIS v. 979. ——— Delivery of imperfect abstract.]—Where conditions of sale fix periods for the delivery of the abstract & the completion of the purchase, & provide that interest shall run, "if, from any cause whatever," the purchase should not be completed, the purchaser must pay interest from the time fixed, though the completion is delayed beyond the time specified, in consequence of the state of the title, if there be no fraud or wilful delay on the part of the vendor.

By conditions of sale, the abstract was to be delivered before Feb. 18, the purchaser was to take the rents from Mar. 25, & the purchase was to be completed on June 24. If, from any cause whatever, the completion should be delayed after that time, the purchaser was to pay interest at 5 per cent. Imperfect abstracts were delivered, & a complete abstract was not delivered until June 17. Further delay having occurred in completing, the purchaser deposited the purchase-money at a bankers', & gave notice, in Aug. that he would pay no interest:—Held: as there was no fraud or wilful delay on the part of the vendors, & as the delivery of an imperfect abstract arose simply from the state of the title, the purchaser must pay interest.—*VICKERS v. Just before June 24, the other part owner set up a claim to the entirety, & refused to produce the deeds. G. applied at distant intervals to know when the vendor would complete, & never expressed a wish to rescind. In 1857, S. filed a bill for partition, & died in Mar. 1858, leaving a will

In July, 1861, S.'s exors. revived the partition suit, & in Jan. 1862, G. was made a party by amendment, pursuant to an arrangement made at his request in May, 1861. In July, 1862, a decree for partition was obtained & the certificate made in July, 1863. The abstract was delivered on Dec. 6, & the requisitions finally answered on Jan. 17:—Held: there was no such delay on the part of the vendor as to release the purchaser from payment of interest.—ROWLEY v. ADAMS (1850), 12 Beav. 476; 50 E. R. 1143.

985. ———.]—A purchase was to be completed on a given day when the purchaser was to have possession, & it was provided, "that if, from any cause whatever," the purchase-money should not be then paid, the purchaser should pay interest. A delay of six months occurred from the default of the vendor in not furnishing proper abstracts:—Held: the purchaser must pay interest, unless he gave up the rent, during that period.—COWPE v. BAKEWELL (1851), 13 Beav. 421; 51 E. R. 162.

986. ———.]—SHERWIN v. SHAKSPEAR, No. 674, ante.

987. ——— Non-completion by day fixed.]—By the particulars & conditions of sale an estate was described as 1,015 acres of meadow, pasture, & arable land, & the purchaser was to pay part of the purchase-money on signing the agreement, & the remainder on completion of the purchase, "on Oct. 11, from which time the purchaser was to be entitled to the rents & profits"; but if, from any cause, the purchase should not be completed by Oct. 11, the purchaser should pay interest till the completion of the purchase; the vendor was to deliver an abstract of title within fourteen days of the day of sale, & deduce a good title. The estate was sold by deft. to pltf. on July 9, & an abstract of title delivered on July 14. It then appeared that the estate was subject to two mtges. & that the mtgees. had not received the usual six months' notice of redemption; that some of the mtgees. were dead; that letters of administration de bonis non had to be taken out to one of them; & that a deed of declaration of trust by parties beneficially interested in the mtge. had to be produced & executed. These & other matters rendered it impossible for the vendor to convey by Oct. 11; & the purchase was ultimately completed in the following Apr.:—Held: debt. did deduce an abstract of title, & show a good title, according to the conditions.—SAVORY v. UNDERWOOD (1854), 23 L. T. O. S. 141.

988. — Delay in proving payment of testator's debts.—E. by will, appointed R. & T. trustees & exors. of her will, & she gave to them & the survivor £2,000, upon trust to invest it & pay the produce to her daughter for life, with remainder to her children; & in default of children or descendants of a child who should attain a vested interest, in trust for R. She also gave her residuary real & personal estate, "subject to the payment of her debts & legacies," to R. absolutely. R. died; T. by a deed which recited that all debts & legacies had been paid, conveyed testatrix's real estate to the devisees of R. Pltf. purchased the rectory of J.; & on a resale the conditions provided "that if from any cause whatever the purchase-money was not paid at the time appointed interest should be payable." It was objected, that there was no proof that the debts & legacies were paid, & it was found that the £2,000 had not been duly invested; but after some delay & expense, the objection was removed. Upon the vendor claiming interest upon the purchase-money:—Held: the fact of proving the payment of the debts & legacies did not dispense with the conditions of sale; but the vendor was entitled to interest upon the balance of the purchase-money.—STORRY v. WALSH (1854), 18 Beav. 559; 27 L. J. Ch. 338; 23 L. T. O. S. 35; 18 Jur. 503; 2 W. R. 300; 52 E. R. 219.

991. — Neither party in default—Delay in obtaining money out of court.—One of the conditions at an attempted sale by auction under a decree provided that the purchase should be completed on a day named, & that if from any cause whatever the purchase-money should not then be paid, interest should be paid from that date. The purchase was by private contract, subject to the conditions of sale, & also subject to the purchase being approved by the ct. The purchase-money was a fund in ct., & after a long delay the conveyancing counsel approved of the title for the purchasers:—Held: neither party being to blame for the delay, the purchasers could not be relieved from their obligation to pay interest.—Re NEWCASTLE & DARLINGTON JUNCTION RY. CO.'S ACT, Re YORK, NEWCASTLE & BERWICK RY. CO.'S ACT, 1847, Ex p. DURHAM (DEAN & CHAPTER), TEWART v. LAWSON, TEWART v. TEWART (1856), 3 Sm. & G. 307; 2 Jur. N. S. 345; 65 E. R. 671; *sub nom. 992. — Legal proceedings necessitated—Death of vendor.—Conditions of sale provided that the purchase should be completed on a given day, & that "if from any cause whatever the purchase should not be then completed," the purchaser should pay interest from that time till the day of completion. The title was accepted, & the deeds prepared & tendered some days before the time fixed. Two days before that time the vendor died, having devised her estates to an infant, which rendered a suit necessary to obtain completion, & delay was occasioned. After the filing of the bill, the purchaser paid his money into ct., to the general credit of the cause:—Held: the death of the vendor was an event within the contemplation of the parties, & the purchaser was liable to pay interest; the payment into ct. was not a payment to the purchaser; & there being no fault in either party, the decree must be without costs.—BANNERMAN v. CLARKE (1850), 3 Drew. 632; 26 L. J. Ch. 77; 28 L. T. O. S. 96; 5 W. R. 37; 61 E. R. 1045.

993. — To make good title—Ratification of vendor's power of sale.—By a contract for the sale of an estate, it was stipulated, "that if, from any cause whatsoever, the purchase should not be completed," on a day named, the purchaser should pay interest on his purchase-money from that day until the completion. It became necessary to institute a suit to rectify the power under which the vendors sold, in order to make a good title, & a delay occurred in completing. There being no wilful default on the part of the vendor:—Held: the purchaser was bound to pay interest, & was entitled to the corresponding rents.—PALMERSTON (LORD) v. TURNER (1864), 33 Beav. 524; 4 New Rep. 46; 33 L. J. Ch. 457; 10 L. T. 364; 10 Jur. N. S. 577; 12 W. R. 816; 55 E. R. 472.

(e) Payment of Purchase-Money into Bank.

994. Whether purchaser liable to interest—After giving notice of payment into bank.—A purchaser agreed that, "if from any cause whatever" the purchase should not be completed by a day named, interest should be payable. He spent a considerable part of the intervening time without taking any steps towards investigating the title, having been prevented from paying the purchase-money before the appointed day only by reason of his having been disappointed in procuring the discounting of some bills for that purpose; on receiving a notice after the day from the vendor that he should be charged with interest, he paid the money into a banker's & informed the vendor that it should lie there until the completion of the purchase, having meanwhile raised some objections of little weight to the title, which were removed after a reasonable time:—Held: under these circumstances the vendor was entitled to the stipulated interest.

It appears that the purchaser would have paid the balance of the purchase-money on Jan. 7, but for the failure of his attempt to get some bills discounted. After that date the solr. for the purchaser searched for judgments & discovered that the vendor was a debtor to the Crown in respect of a judgment; & that was released after forty-five days, which was not an unreasonable length of time. Afterwards, difficulties having arisen in completing the purchase, he paid £38,000 into a bank to a separate account, & gave notice to the vendors that this sum was appropriated for the purposes of the purchase, & that he would refuse to pay interest under the contract. The vendors replied that they disputed the sufficiency of the notice, but did not point out that the sum paid in was deficient by £500. On discovering the deficiency, the purchaser paid in £500 with interest at 5 per cent.:—Held: the purchaser was not liable for interest subsequently to the time when he paid £38,000 into the bank.—*KERSHAW v. D. Possession.

1001. Meaning of "possession."]—Pltf. agreed to sell deft. an orchard, described as being in the "occupation of L. P." & that the purchaser should have "possession" on the day appointed for completion:—Held: "possession" did not mean "personal occupation" & a decree for specific performance was made against deft., although pltf. was unable, by reason of L. P.'s tenancy, to put him in actual occupation of the premises.—LAKE v. DEAN (1860), 28 Beav. 607; 54 E. R. 499.

1002. Payment of purchase-money condition precedent.]—The purchaser of an estate, sold as tithe free, cannot be compelled to take it subject to tithe on terms of compensation; but an estate of 140 acres being sold under a decree, the particulars stating about 32 acres to be tithe free, & no evidence of exception having been produced on the reference of the title, the master was directed to certify the proper amount of compensation. A purchaser under a decree for sale having accepted, & on a report of an objection to the title, for which compensation was ordered, returned possession, must pay interest on the purchase-money, from the time at which he took, or at which a title was shown under which he might have safely taken, possession, & is entitled to an allowance for prior, not for subsequent, deterioration of the estate.

With regard to possession, the purchaser was not to take possession till he had paid the purchase-money, & that condition of payment could not be performed unless prior to the time appointed for giving possession, the vendor could show a title under which the purchaser would be safe in taking possession & paying his purchase-money (LORD ELDON, C.).—*BINKS v. 1003. Possession essence of contract—Vacant possession.]—(1) In a suit by a vendor for specific performance against a purchaser, if the contract stipulated that the possession should be given at a specified day, it is competent for the purchaser to insist that both time & a vacant possession are of the essence of his contract; & the ct. will receive, as evidence that such was the purchaser's object, statements made by the agent of the purchaser at the time of signing the contract.

(2) Where a purchaser has consented to enlarge the time for completion, & where a vacant possession was of the essence of the contract, it is competent for him to object to complete at the expiration of such enlarged time if the possession is not then vacant, & if he has done no act towards completion of the contract after he had notice that vacant possession could not be given at the day. But where a purchaser had by his acts waived the time of completion in the first instance, & had gone on for some time inducing the vendor to incur expenses to perfect his title, & suddenly, upon the discovery that vacant possession could not be given according to stipulation, declined to complete, the ct., although it dismissed a bill filed against such a purchaser for a specific performance, dismissed it without costs.—*NOKES v. obtaining the keys of a building in order to view the premises, so as to estimate alterations intended to be made & to perform other acts to preserve the premises from deterioration is not such a taking possession under a contract for sale as will bind the conditions of sale by one of which it was provided that the purchaser should be entitled "to the possession or the receipt of the rents & profits" of the land from a specified date :—Held : on the construction of the written agreement, the vendor was bound to give possession to the purchaser on the date specified, & no effect could be given to the words referring in the alternative to the receipt of the rents & profits ; & evidence was not admissible to prove an alleged contemporary parol agreement by which the vendor was to retain possession of the land to a later date, paying the purchaser in the meantime, by way of rent, interest on his purchase-money.—*ANKER v. receive the rents up to the day of actual completion of the purchase:—Held: in the event of completion being delayed beyond the appointed day the vendor had the option of either claiming interest & accounting to the purchaser for rents since the appointed day, or of keeping all sums in fact received by the vendor since that day from tenants; but there being no words expressly relieving the purchaser from the obligation to discharge outgoings after the appointed day, & no ground for inserting anything by implication, the expense of complying with a sanitary notice under Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (c. 76), after the appointed day & after the title having been accepted, must be borne by the purchaser.—*BARSHT v. The purchase was completed, & afterwards payment was demanded from pltfs. of the expenses incurred under a local Act in improving the street in which the houses stood. The work had been done some time before the houses belonged to deft., & at the time of sale to pltfs. neither party was aware of the charge. Pltfs., having paid the sum demanded, sued to recover the same from deft.:—Held: the charge for improving the street was an "outgoing" which deft. had bound himself to discharge, & pltfs. were entitled to recover it from him.

Some taxes, such as the property tax, & some rates, such as the poor rate, are apportionable, & accordingly would be apportioned under the clause [in the contract for sale]: but the words, "if necessary," show that it extends to "outgoings" which need not & cannot be apportioned (LORD COLERIDGE, C.J.).—*MIDGLEY v. The vendor conveyed, as "beneficial owner," the land to the purchaser. At the date of the contract, works had been executed in the street by the urban authority under above Act. The demand for payment of the sum finally apportioned in respect of the premises was served after the completion of the contract:—Held: the charge under above Act took effect from the date of the completion of the works; it was therefore an "outgoing" which the vendor was bound by his contract to discharge; & further, the charge was an "incumbrance, claim, or demand" suffered by the vendor within his implied covenant against incumbrances, notwithstanding the fact that the expenses were incurred without any default on his part, & the time for payment had not arrived before the conveyance was executed.

The charge for such works is an "outgoing" which the vendor is liable to discharge under the usual clause in a contract for sale for the payment of "outgoings" by the vendor, & is also an incumbrance which the vendor is liable for under the covenant against incumbrances implied by a conveyance "as beneficial owner."—*STOCK v. 1020. Expenses incurred under dangerous structure notice—Whether an outgoing.]—By conditions of sale of land within the metropolis the date fixed for completion was May 8, all outgoings up to that day being cleared by the vendor. Before May 8 a magistrate made an order to take down dangerous structures on the land. This order was not complied with, & after May 8 the county council took down the structures, & demanded & received from the purchaser the expenses of so doing:—Held: the liability having been incurred before May 8, the expenses were "outgoings," within the meaning of the conditions, which the purchaser was entitled to recover from the vendor.—*TUBBS v. one of the conditions being that the purchaser should not be entitled to require the production of any deed or document mentioned or referred to in the abstract not in the possession of the vendor. By the abstract A. appeared to have sold in 1824, & an assignment of an old term was then made in trust for the then purchaser, & to attend the inheritance. In 1829 the term was again assigned in trust for C., testator in the cause, & to attend the inheritance. The purchaser under the decree was held not to be entitled to evidence as to the dower or possible dower of the wife of A., but only to be satisfied as to the deeds relating to the term being in the vendor's possession or not.—BASS v. WELSTED (1848), 10 L. T. O. S. 480; 12 Jur. 347.

1024. — Attested copies at purchaser's expense.]—Where, by the conditions of sale, it is agreed that the vendor shall retain the title-deeds, " & that a covenant will be entered into for the production of such of them as are not enrolled, & for giving attested or other copies thereof to the respective purchasers at their expense," a purchaser has not, on completion, a right to attested copies at the expense of the vendor.—COTTON v. SCUDAMORE (1855), 1 K. & J. 321; 69 E. R. 481.

1025. — —.]—One of the conditions of a sale by public auction stated that the purchaser should not require the production of any title deeds, etc., which were not in the possession of the vendors, & all recitals of births, etc., or other facts contained in any deed dated thirty years since, should be deemed conclusive evidence thereof; & all attested copies of or extracts from deeds, etc., & all other evidence as to deaths, etc., which might be required by the purchaser for the purpose of examination with the abstract, should be respectively sought for & procured at the expense of the purchaser. A. became the purchaser of two lots. After the title had been approved, & a deed of conveyance prepared, a question arose as to whether or not the purchaser was entitled to attested copies of the title deeds at the expense of the vendors; & thereupon the vendors, under the power contained in the fourth condition, annulled the sale. On bill filed for the specific performance of the contract, the ct. held that the purchaser was not entitled to attested copies of the title deeds at the expense of the vendors, & dismissed the bill, with costs.—ABBOTT v. DARNELL (1856), 2 Jur. N. S. 631; 4 W. R. 314.

1026. — — Purchasers of different lots.]—A condition of sale of real estate, sold under an order of the ct., provided that all attested copies of deeds "whether required for the verification of the abstract or delivery to the purchaser, or for any other purpose, shall be procured at the expense of the purchaser":—Held: the condition was not sufficiently explicit to throw upon the purchaser of a smaller lot, the purchaser of a larger lot being entitled to the possession of the title deeds, the expenses of attested copies of the deeds handed over to the purchaser of the larger lot, but such expenses must be borne by the estate.—PETERSON v. ELWES (1858), 31 L. T. O. S. 341; 6 W. R. 611.

1027. Sale by trustees—Statutory covenant against incumbrances—Covenant for title by tenant for life—Right of purchaser to require.]—Trustees, in whom lands were vested upon trust for one for life, & with power to sell on his request, sold the same under a condition that the vendors, being trustees, were to be required to give only the statutory covenant against incumbrances implied by reason of their being expressed to convey as trustees:—Held: the purchasers were entitled to require that the equitable tenant for life should enter into the usual covenants for title.—Re SAWYER & BARING'S CONTRACT (1884), 53 L. J. Ch. 1104; 51 L. T. 356; 33 W. R. 26.

SUB-SECT. 14.—LEASES AND EASEMENTS.

1028. Sale subject to easements—Right of way as between adjoining tenants—Vendor subject to no liability as to right of way.]—There being two tenants of adjoining houses held under the same landlord, the tenant of one of the houses acquired a right of way to his vaults through the adjoining vaults. The landlord sold both properties at one sale, with a condition that they were to be subject to & with the benefit, as the case might be, of all subsisting rights or easements of way or passage so far as any lot might be affected thereby:—Held: vendor being subject to no liability as to right of way, the purchaser of one tenement could not enforce a right of way as against the other.—DANIEL v. ANDERSON (1862), 31 L. J. Ch. 610; 7 L. T. 183; 8 Jur. N. S. 328; 10 W. R. 366.

1029. — Use of water pipe by licence of common owner.]—A. & B. were tenants of adjoining premises, under the same landlord. A. had a well upon his premises, from which B.'s premises were supplied with water by means of a pipe. Both premises, with others, were put up for sale by auction, in lots, one of the conditions being that each lot was subject to all rights of way & water & other easements, if any, subsisting thereon. A. & B. both purchased the lots of which they had been tenants. The vendor insisted that A. had purchased subject to B.'s right of water. A. filed a bill for specific performance of the contract, without any liability to such easement:—Held: B. had no easement or right of water, but merely a licence from his landlord during his tenancy; & A. was entitled to the relief asked.—RUSSELL v. HARFORD (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 507; 15 L. T. 171; 14 W. R. 982.

1030. — Undisclosed right of way known to vendor.]—Trustees put up for sale by auction two adjoining freehold properties. Lot 2 was a hotel standing in its own grounds & approached from the main road by a carriage drive. Lot 3 was a house the only access to which from the road was by a carriage sweep opening into the carriage drive of lot 2. Both properties were leased, & the lease of lot 2 reserved to the lessors a right of way over the carriage drive to get access to lot 3. By an error the particulars of sale of both lots 2 & 3 made no mention of the right of way. but on the sale plan, which formed no part of the contract, it was apparent that the only access to lot 3 was over the carriage drive. By the conditions of sale the properties were sold subject to all rights of way & other easements "whether or not the same shall be mentioned . . . in or upon the particulars . . . or the sale plan, if any, . . . but if there shall be found to be any such . . . easement . . . not disclosed or partially or inaccurately disclosed in the particulars . . . or the sale plan, if any, such non-disclosure or partial or inaccurate disclosure shall be deemed to be an omission or error within the meaning of clause 15." By condition 15, "If any error, misstatement or omission shall be discovered in the particulars or sale plan, if any . . . the same shall not annul the sale, nor shall any abatement or compensation be allowed or paid by the vendor or purchaser." The lease of lot 2 was produced to G., the purchaser, before the auction & was perused by his solr. G. was almost blind; but the particulars were read to him, & he bought lot 2 with the intention of building over the carriage drive. The abstract included the lease of lot 2, with a plan showing the carriage sweep to lot 3, but G.'s solr. made no requisition about it, & sent a draft conveyance of the property unincumbered in which the vendor's solr. inserted a reservation of the right of way to lot 3. G. refused to accept this addition. The vendors brought an action for specific performance with the reservation, or, alternatively, rescission & retention of the deposit. G. counterclaimed for rescission & return of the deposit:—Held: the vendors were not entitled to specific performance with a reservation of the right of way; there was not, in the circumstances, any patent defect on the title; the condition as to errors only applied to errors which were not known to the vendors; the purchaser was not bound to make a requisition as to the right of way, when the abstract showed a title to an unincumbered freehold; & the purchaser was entitled to rescission & return of the deposit.—SIMPSON v. GILLEY (1922), 92 L. J. Ch. 194; 128 L. T. 622.

1032. Reservation of easement for sewer—Right to exclusive use.]—A conveyance of land from deft. to pltf. contained the following clause, "Save & except & always reserved unto pltf., his heirs & assigns, the power to enter upon the said land, & to dig & make a covered sewer or watercourse through the said land, in order to convey the waste water from the premises of pltf. into the river W., on making reasonable compensation to deft. for any damage or injury which might be occasioned thereby, either to the surface of the ground, or the buildings under which the same might be made." Pltf. having constructed a covered drain or sewer, in pursuance of the power, deft. made an opening in it, & drained his premises through it:—Held: the reservation gave pltf. a right to the exclusive use of the sewer.—LEE v. STEVENSON (1858), E. B. & E. 512; 27 L. J. Q. B. 263; 4 Jur. N. S. 950; 120 E. R. 600.

1033. Sale subject to tenancies—Agricultural land—Terms arranged with tenants by vendor.]—Part of an estate consisted of three farms in Hampshire, & in that county, valuations between outgoing & incoming tenants for hay, straw, & manure, are made at "fodder value," which is lower than what is called "market value." The three tenants of the farms held under verbal agreements, from year to year, according to the custom of Hampshire. Defts. were devisees of the estate in trust for sale, & in contemplation of a sale, they gave notice to the tenants to quit at Michaelmas, 1869. The tenants alleged that they had been promised leases by the devisor, & although there was nothing to show that such promises were binding in law or equity, defts. thinking the claim binding in honour & conscience, entered into agreements with the tenants, by which, in consideration of their giving up possession of their farms according to the notices, defts. promised to remit the half-year's rent due at Michaelmas, 1868, to pay £100 to the tenant, & to pay for hay, etc., at the termination of the tenancy, at "market value." In June, 1868, the estate was put up for sale by auction. In the particulars & conditions of sale the three farms were described as in the occupation of the tenants respectively till Michaelmas, 1869, at certain rents, & certain incumbrances, subject to which the sale was made, were specified, viz. land tax & tithe rentcharge; but no express mention was made of the above-mentioned agreements with the tenants. The conditions stipulated that the property should be taken to be correctly described as to quantity & otherwise, & that if any error, misstatement, or omission should be discovered, the same should not annul the sale, nor should any compensation be allowed, & that the rent or possession should be received or retained & the outgoing discharged by the vendors up to Sept. 29 & from that day by the purchaser. The property was bought in at the sale by auction, & afterwards sold by private contract on July 18, 1868, to pltf. The contract described the property as in the foregoing particulars, & as being purchased subject to the foregoing conditions. At the time of the purchase pltf. had no knowledge of the above-mentioned agreements with the tenants. Upon his becoming aware of & objecting in respect of them, it was agreed that he should complete without prejudice to his claim to be indemnified in respect of the agreements to pay market value for the hay, etc. Pltf. afterwards paid the tenants the amount of the valuations of hay, etc., at market value, & now sought to recover the difference between that & fodder value from defts.:—Held: the agreements with the tenants to pay market value were collateral agreements binding only on defts. personally, & did not amount to fresh demises; & by the arrangement between the parties, pltf., having paid the tenants' claims, could recover the difference between market & fodder value from defts. as money paid for their use.—PHILLIPS v. MILLER (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 420; 44 L. J. C. P. 265; 32 L. T. 638; 23 W. R. 834, Ex. Ch.

1034. — Liability to compensate tenants.]—Agricultural lands were put up for sale by public auction. The particulars described certain parts of the lands as "bush fruit." One of the conditions provided that the purchasers were to be deemed to have notice of, & to take subject to the terms of all the existing tenancies. The purchaser of the lot under "bush fruit" did not inspect, or ask to inspect, the lease or agreement affecting the property, either previously to or at the sale. Before completion, the vendor, at the then state for the purpose of securing to deft. the benefit of such booming or storage; & notwithstanding the loss of the water privilege by reason of one of the dams having fallen into decay, deft. was bound to perform

request of the purchaser, gave the tenant notice determining his tenancy. Subsequently it was discovered that the tenant had received the written consent of his landlord, the vendor's predecessor in title, to plant the land with "bush fruit," & he put in a claim for compensation under Agricultural Holdings Act, 1908 (c. 28), s. 2, in respect of the improvement:—Held: the claim for compensation must be borne by the purchaser.—Re DERBY (EARL) & FERGUSON'S CONTRACT, [1912] 1 Ch. 479; 81 L. 1035. — Public-house.—A public-house & premises put up for sale by auction were described in the particulars as in the occupation of certain persons at certain rents. The conditions stated that the property was sold "subject to existing tenancies." Defts., who were brewers, by their agent became the purchasers of the property at the auction. Shortly afterwards they discovered that the property was in lease to another brewer for a term of years, of which about nine remained unexpired. Thereupon they refused to complete their contract. In a suit against them by the vendor for specific performance:—Held: there was a misdescription of the property, which precluded the vendor from enforcing the agreement, & the purchasers had not constructive notice of the lease.—CARALLERO v. HENTY (1874), 9 Ch. App. 447; 43 L. J. Ch. 635; 30 L. T. 314; 22 W. R. 446, L. J.

SUB-SECT. 15.—PERFORMANCE OF COVENANTS IN LEASE.

1036. Possession to be evidence of performance.—Date to which breaches covered.—Under special conditions, on the sale of leaseholds, it was provided, "that possession should be deemed conclusive evidence of the due performance or sufficient waiver of any breach in the covenants in the lease, up to the completion of the sale":—Held: this would cover all breaches down to the contract, but not breaches of covenant subsequently committed by the vendor, by which a forfeiture was incurred.—HOWELL v. KIGHTLEY (1856), 21 Beav. 331; 25 L. J. Ch. 868; 52 E. R. 887; affd. on other grounds, 8 De G. M. & G. 325, L. J.

1037. Production of last receipt to be evidence of performance.—Objection to risk of forfeiture precluded.—Dilapidated state of premises.—(1) By the conditions of sale relating to leaseholds, it was stipulated that the production of the last receipt should be conclusive evidence that all the covenants had been performed:—Held: the production of such a receipt prevented the purchaser from taking the objection that the lease had been forfeited by reason of the dilapidated state of the premises.

(2) A registered lis pendens does not create a charge or lien on the property, nor does it excuse a purchaser from completing his contract. It merely puts him upon an inquiry into the validity of pltf.'s claim.—BULL v. HUTCHENS (1863), 32

1038. — Breach of restrictive covenant.—A leasehold public-house was sold subject to a condition that the production of the last receipt for rent paid should be taken as conclusive evidence of the due performance of the lessee's covenants or the waiver of any breaches up to the time of completion, whether the lessor should be cognisant of such breaches or not. The lease contained a covenant to use the premises for the business of a public-house only, & not to permit any other trade to be carried on on any part of the premises without lessor's written consent. The particulars on which the contract of purchase was indorsed showed that parts of the premises were underlet to persons who carried on other trades there. From the answers to objections to title it appeared that the lessors had received rent with knowledge of the underlettings, & the last receipt for rent was produced. Specific performance of the contract having been decreed & a reference as to title directed by an order which was not appealed from:—Held: whether the breach of covenant was or was not a continuing breach such as to render the purchaser liable to be ejected after the completion of the purchase, & whether this would or would not have furnished a valid reason for not decreeing specific performance, the vendor had made a good title in accordance with the contract, which the purchaser was bound to accept, the decree for specific performance having been made & not appealed from.—LAWRIE v. LEES (1881), 7 App. Cas. 19; 51 L. J. Ch. 209; 46 L. T. 210; 30 W. R. 185, H. L.

1039. Covenant indemnifying vendor against rent as covenants—Referable to future breaches only.—Mtgees. by assignment of leasehold property agreed to sell it for the residue of the term. The contract provided that the property was sold subject to the covenants & conditions contained in the lease & to the rent thereby reserved, & that the assignment to the purchaser should contain a covenant indemnifying the vendors against the rent & covenants. At the time when the contract was entered into there were continuing breaches of the lessee's covenants to repair & paint, which were not usual covenants, in respect of which the lessors were threatening proceedings, but neither the vendors nor the purchaser knew or had notice of the breaches, & the purchaser did not know the nature of the covenants:—Held: the contractual provision above mentioned only meant that when the purchaser obtained his assignment, he should take subject to the rent & covenants & should indemnify the vendors against payment of rent & performance of covenants in the future, not that he was to pay arrears of rent or make good breaches of covenant in the past.—Re TAUNTON & WEST OF ENGLAND PERPETUAL BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY & ROBERTS' CONTRACT, [1912] 2 Ch. 381; 81 L. account of surplus.—Strictly speaking, it is not in the nature of a mtge.; for if the second sale produced more than the original purchase-money, the purchaser, who had violated his agreement, could not call for an account of the surplus (LORD ELDON, C.).—*Er p. 1041. — Resale at reduced price—Recovery of deficiency & expenses by vendor.—By the conditions of sale it was provided as follows: "Should the purchaser neglect or fail to comply with any of the above conditions, his deposit money shall be absolutely forfeited to the vendor, who shall be at liberty to resell the property by public auction or private sale; & if the amount or price which shall be obtained by such second sale shall not be sufficient to cover the amount bid for the same at the present sale & all the expenses of or incidental to the present sale, the deficiency shall be paid by the defaulter to the vendor." The purchaser paid a deposit, but failed to complete the purchase. There was no resale.—Held: the vendor was entitled to retain the deposit, & also to recover the auctioneer's charges for the abortive sale, & the costs incurred by him in preparing to complete the sale.

The deposit, therefore, is absolutely forfeited, & the vendor is at liberty, not bound, to resell, & may recover against the purchaser any deficiency on the second sale, together with the expenses of the first sale (LORD COLERIDGE, C.J.).—ESSEX v. DANIELL, DANIELL v. ESSEX (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 538; 32 L. T. 476.

1042. — Condition for forfeiture as liquidated damages.—Where, in a contract of sale entered into at an auction, one of several conditions is, that if the purchaser shall fail to comply with any of the conditions, the deposit shall be forfeited as liquidated damages; such condition forms no qualification of the general promise to complete the purchase.

Therefore, upon a wrongful abandonment of the contract, on the part of the purchaser, the vendor may recover damages ultra the forfeited deposit; & is not bound to state this condition in declaring upon the contract.—ICELY v. GREW (1830), 6 Nev. & M. K. B. 467.

1043. — Difference not covered by deposit.—One of the conditions of a sale by auction "If the purchaser shall fail to comply with the conditions, the deposit shall be actually forfeited to the vendor, who shall be at liberty to resell, & any deficiency upon resale, together with the expenses, shall be made good by the defaulter, & on non-payment shall be recoverable as liquidated damages, but any increase of price at the second sale shall belong to the vendor." Default having been made by a purchaser at the auction, & the property resold at a reduced price.—Held: the vendor could recover from the defaulter, in addition to the deposit, only so much of the difference between the two prices & of the expenses of resale, as the deposit did not cover.—OCKENDEN v. HENLY (1858), E. B. & E. 485; 27 L. J. Q. B. 361; 31 L. T. O. S. 179; 4 Jur. N. S. 999; 120 E. R. 590.

1045. — Declaration in action for specific performance.—An agreement for the sale of real estate contained the usual condition empowering the vendor, in case the purchaser should fail to comply with any of the conditions, to forfeit the deposit. In an action by the vendor for specific performance of the agreement, the purchaser having accepted the title but failed to complete at the time fixed by the agreement:—Held: although deft. had not appeared to the writ, & did not appear at the trial, a declaration that the vendor was entitled to forfeit the deposit might be made, in lieu of the ordinary judgment for specific performance, if the writ, as well as the statement of claim, claimed such a declaration in the alternative.—*KINGDON v. 1046. — —.—Where judgment for specific performance of a contract for purchase of land has been given against the purchaser, & he fails to comply with the judgment, the vendor is entitled if the contract contained a clause forfeiting the deposit, & giving the vendor power to proceed to a fresh sale, to an order declaring the deposit forfeited & for payment of any deficiency on a fresh sale & costs instead of the usual order rescinding the contract.—GRIFFITHS v. VEZEY, [1906] 1 Ch. 98; 75 L. J. Ch. 462; 94 L. T. 574; 54 W. R. 490; 50 Sol. Jo. 360.

1047. — —.—A contract for the sale of land contained a provision for the forfeiture of deposit on failure by the purchaser to comply with any of the conditions of sale, giving the vendor power to resell, & provided that any deficiency in price which might happen on the resale should be paid by the purchaser to the vendor & in case of non-payment be recoverable by the vendor as liquidated damages. The purchaser paid a deposit but failed to complete the contract. In an action for specific performance the vendor moved for an order forfeiting the deposit & for liberty to resell, & in case the property should be resold for less than the contract price that the purchaser should pay to the vendor the difference between the contract price & the price realised on the resale:—Held: the vendor must give credit for the amount of the deposit.—SHUTTLEWORTH v. CLEWS, [1910] 1 Ch. 176; 79 L. J. Ch. 21; 101 L. T. 708.

for a price to be paid in instalments at specified dates contained a clause of forfeiture both of the agreement & of all payments of past instalments of purchase-money in case of default of punctual payment of any one instalment; & time was

1050. ————, [1909].—By an agreement in writing dated Dec. 9, 1909, land in the province of S. was sold for $16,000 of which $1,000 were paid on signing the agreement & the balance was payable by six annual instalments on Dec. 1 of each year. The agreement provided that if the purchaser should make default in any of the payments the vendor should be at liberty to cancel the agreement & to retain as liquidated damages the payments already made & that time was to be considered as of the essence of the agreement. Default having been made on the payment of the first instalment the vendor cancelled the agreement assignees of the purchaser sued for specific performance:—Held: the parties having made time of the essence of the agreement specific performance could not be decreed but that the forfeiture of the money paid was a penalty from which relief should be granted on proper terms.—STEEDMAN v. 1051. Recovery of deposit by purchaser—Day for completion postponed by consent.—A. agreed to sell to B. his interest in a public-house, & his furniture, etc., at an appraisement to be made by two appraisers, the same to be paid for on B.'s taking possession, which was to be on or before Mar. 25 then next; & £30 was paid by B. as a deposit; & he agreed that if he should not complete his part of the agreement, the sum so paid should be forfeited. The buyer & seller appointed appraisers respectively. On Mar. 25, the two appraisers met, & the seller's, appraiser was then informed that the appraiser of the buyer could not conveniently on that day complete the valuation, but would finish the business the next day; no objection was then made to the proposed delay. The appraiser of the buyer went to the seller's premises the following day to make the valuation, but the seller refused to allow him so to do, & said he would not complete the contract:—Held: under the circumstances, it was incumbent on the seller, if he intended to insist that the contract should be completed on the day mentioned in the agreement, to have notified such intention to the buyer; & not having so done, the latter was entitled to recover back the deposit.—CARPENTER v. BLANDFORD (1828), 8 B. & C. 575; Dan. & 11. 175; 3 Man. & Ry. K. B. 93; 7 L. J. O. S. K. B. 58; 108 E. R. 1156.

1052. — Condition for return in case of misdescription—Parties to action.]—By an agreement under seal, three persons agreed to purchase a mine, & bills for £2,000 were to be paid as a deposit & it was stipulated that the sum of £2,000 was a conditional payment, to be returned “to the said purchasers,” should the property, upon the inspection “by an agent to be sent out by the purchasers,” prove to have been misrepresented in the description :—Held : (1) if the sum of £2,000 was recoverable back, it must be by all the three purchasers bringing an action of covenant, & one of them alone who had, under a subsequent agreement between the purchasers not under seal, given the bills & advanced the money to pay them when due, could not maintain an action for money had & received ; (2) the agent to be sent out must be a person distinct from the purchasers, & not one of themselves, & no evidence was receivable to show that the vendor assented to one of the purchasers going out as agent, except the objection had been waived by some instrument under seal.—ENGLISH v. BLUNDELL (1837), 8 C. & P. 332, N. P.

1053. — Vendor's title subsequently proved defective.]—The conditions in a contract of sale of land provided that the purchaser should pay a deposit, & that if he failed to comply with the conditions the deposit should be forfeited & the vendors should be at liberty to resell. The purchaser paid the deposit, & accepted the title, but when the time for completion arrived he could not provide the residue of the purchase-money. The vendors thereupon gave the purchaser notice that the contract was rescinded & the deposit forfeited. Three years afterwards, the vendors having contracted to sell to another purchaser, it was decided that their title was bad, owing to a defect which had appeared upon the face of the abstract delivered to the first purchaser. The first purchaser thereupon brought an action to recover his deposit on the ground of mutual mistake & failure of consideration :—Held : the title having been accepted, & the deposit having been forfeited solely in consequence of the purchaser's default, he was not entitled to recover the deposit.

The deposit serves two purposes—if the purchase is carried out it goes against the purchase-money—but its primary purpose is this, it is a guarantee that the purchaser means business; & if there is a case in which a deposit is rightly & properly forfeited it is, I think, when a man enters into a contract to buy real property without taking the trouble to consider whether he can pay for it or not, (LORD MACNAGHTEN).—*SOPER v. land, at a price payable by instalments, contained in a clause to the effect that "time was to be of the essence, &, unless the payments were punctually made, the agreement should be void & of no effect, all moneys paid should be absolutely forfeited to the -----, & he should be at liberty to enter & resell, without notice to the purchaser." Default having been made by the purchaser, the vendor served notice of cancellation, & brought this action for the rescission of the agreement. After action dft. tendered the full amount due, which plff. refused to accept, having previously resold the land:—Held: the forfeiture part of the above clause, being purely penal & in terrorem, was void, the remainder mere surplusage, & the clause void in its entirety.—STEWART v. MARSH (Alta.) (1911), 17 W. L. R. 522.—CAN.

1054. — Condition precluding forfeiture—Vendor's right to retain—Pending action for damages.]—By a contract for the sale of real property it was provided that the purchaser should, within fourteen days after signing the contract, pay to the vendors a certain sum as part payment of the purchase price, but that such sum should not be forfeited if the purchaser failed to complete. It was also provided that if the purchaser made default, the vendors might resell & recover from the purchaser, as liquidated damages, any loss resulting from resale. The purchaser paid the said sum to the vendors, but made default in completion, whereupon the vendors endeavoured to resell the property, but without success. The purchaser then sued to recover back the sum so paid as part of the purchase price as having been paid on a consideration which had failed, & was met by a claim on the part of the vendors to retain the amount for a reasonable time as security for any loss they might sustain on the resale of the property:—Held: the ct. could not read into the contract by implication a term that the money might be retained for the purpose suggested, & upon the cancellation of the contract the purchaser was entitled to recover it back.—*HARRISON v. Part V.—Vendor's Title.

SECT. 1.—DUTY TO DISCLOSE.

1055. Duty to give full information.]—A vendor, in his particulars of sale, described certain cottages as part of lot 6, & as in the occupation of the owners of the Sedghill Collieries, or their under-tenants or workmen. By a further particular he stated that "the mines & minerals within & under such of the collieries as were situate within certain townships, were reserved to the owners thereof, with such powers & privileges as belonged to them." It turned out that the mine under lot 6 was not the Sedghill Colliery, but the Hazelrigg Colliery, & the owners of the Hazelrigg Colliery had in some way obtained or long used a right to build & use cottages on lot 6 without paying rent, except a trifling compensation for surface damage, & they had transferred their right to the owners of the Sedghill Colliery:—Held: the particulars did not, on the face of them, convey such information as the vendor ought to have given; but inquiries were directed as to the circumstances under which the cottages were occupied, & whether the owners of the Sedghill Colliery had any right against the vendor.

It is the obvious duty of a vendor to make himself fully acquainted with all the peculiarities & incidents of the property which he is going to sell; & when he describes the property for the information of the purchaser, it is his duty to describe everything which it is material to know, in order to judge of the nature & value of the property (KINDERSLEY, V.-C.).—BRANDLING v. PLUMMER (1854), 2 Drew. 427; 2 Eq. Rep. 1260; 23 L. J. Ch. 960; 23 L. T. O. S. 329; 2 W. R. 662; 61 E. R. 785.

1056. — & remove ambiguities.]—A contract entered into in 1882 for the sale of freehold estate provided that the title should commence "with an indenture dated Oct. 18, 1845," & made between persons whose names were mentioned, & that the earlier title should not be investigated or objected to. From the abstract of title delivered by the vendors to the purchaser it appeared that the deed of 1845 was a conveyance by a person, who purported to be the absolute owner, of freehold & leasehold property to trustees, on trust for himself for life, & after his death on trust to sell the property, & to hold the proceeds of sale on the trusts declared by a deed of even date. An express power was reserved to the grantor to revoke the trusts. The deed was a voluntary one, except for the consideration which resulted from the liability assumed by the trustees in respect of the leaseholds. By a deed executed in 1858, after the death of settlor, the trustees conveyed the property to a purchaser for value. This deed contained a recital of the deed of 1845, & a recital that the trustees "in pursuance of the trust for sale conferred on them" by that deed, had caused the property to be put up for sale:—Held: by virtue of Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), s. 2, this recital, not being shown to be inaccurate, was conclusive evidence that the deed of 1845 had not been revoked either by an exercise by the settlor of the power of revocation, or by a sale of the property by him for value during his lifetime.

A vendor should give full information to the purchaser; he ought to state that which, if it is not stated, makes that which he does state ambiguous or misleading. . . . A vendor who desires to limit the rights of a purchaser must do so by explicit & plain conditions, & he must tell the truth, & all the truth, which is relevant to the matter in hand (FRY, J.).—Re MARSH & GRANVILLE (EARL) (1882), 24 Ch. SUB-SECT. 2.—WHAT MUST BE DISCLOSED.

A. In General.

1059. Person liable under covenants in lease Sale of reversion.]—The ct. may not decree specific performance of a contract for the sale of a reversion if the vendor has misled the purchaser by stating that it was subject to a lease containing all the usual covenants for repairs, etc., the vendor knowing at the same time that there was no person against whom the covenants could be enforced; but where property is sold subject to a lease so described, & tenants are in possession of the property, & pay their rent according to the terms of the lease, & the vendor is not aware, at the time of the contract, of any difficulty in enforcing the covenants, the ct. will not refuse to decree specific performance, on the ground that the vendor cannot show upon whom the liability of the covenants in the lease has devolved; & the vendor is not bound to find out, & acquaint the purchaser with, the name of the party who may be liable to such covenants.—FLINT v. WOODIN (1852), 9 Hare, 618; 22 L. J. Ch. 92; 19 L. T. O. S. 240; 16 Jur. 719; 68 E. R. 660.

1063. All facts within vendor's knowledge—Relating to title.]—A vendor is bound to disclose every fact within his knowledge relating to his title.

Where a vendor has knowingly suppressed a defect in title, the ct. will not allow him to force the title upon a purchaser, although in the conditions of sale he has employed general words large enough to include the defect.—EDWARDS v. WICKWAR (1865), L. R. 1 Eq. 68; 13 L. T. 428; 29 J. P. 820; 14 W. R. 79; sub nom. EDWARDS v. WICKWAR, Re BRAYNE'S PURCHASE, 35 L. J. Ch. 48; subsequent proceedings (1866), L. R. 1 Eq. 403.

1064. All facts necessary to protect vendor.]—(1) When an agreement has been entered into for the purchase of an existing lease, the purchaser is not affected with constructive notice of the covenants contained in the lease, & is not bound to complete the contract if the lease is subject to onerous covenants of an unusual character, unless before the agreement was made he had a fair opportunity of ascertaining for himself the terms of such covenants.

(2) There is great practical convenience in requiring the vendor, who knows his own title, to disclose all that is necessary to protect himself, rather than in requiring the purchaser to demand an inspection of the vendor's title deeds before entering into a contract, a demand which the owners of property would in some cases be unwilling to concede, & which is not, in our opinion, in accordance with the usual course of business in sales by private contract (FRY, L.J.).—REEVE v. BERRIDGE

1065. Duty on sale by private contract—Or sale by auction.]—The rule laid down in Reeve v. Berridge, No. 1064, ante, that it is prima facie the duty of a vendor to disclose all that is necessary to protect himself, & not the duty of the purchaser to demand inspection of the vendor's title deed before entering into a contract, is not confined to sales by private contract, but is equally applicable to sales by auction.

Where, on a sale of leaseholds by auction the particulars & conditions of sale contained no statement as to the nature of the covenants in the lease, which were in fact onerous, nor any notice that the lease might be inspected at the office of the vendor's solrs. or elsewhere:—Held: the purchaser was not affected with constructive notice of the covenants; he had not had a fair opportunity of inspecting the lease, & was not bound to complete the contract.—Re WHITE & SMITH'S CONTRACT, [1896] 1 Ch. 637; 65 L. 1067. Material defects in title—Not reasonably discoverable by purchaser.]—The vendor of real estate is under an obligation to disclose any material defect in the title or in the subject of the sale which is exclusively within his own knowledge, & one which the purchaser could not be expected to discover for himself with the care ordinarily used in such transactions. The existence of a party wall notice under London Building Act, 1894 (c. cxxiii), ss. 90, 91, & an award made thereunder relating to a house which is the subject of a sale, constitute material facts which should be disclosed by the vendor to an intending purchaser.—CARLISH v. SALT, [1906] 1 Ch. 335; 75 L. J. Ch. 175; 94 L. T. 58; 54 W. R. 244; 50 Sol. Jo. 157.

1068. Restrictive covenant.]—(1) Where a vendor of freehold property mentioned to the purchaser that the property was subject to the same conditions as the adjoining property:—Held: the purchaser was not fixed with constructive notice of restrictive covenants, & specific performance was refused.

(2) Property described in a contract for sale as "Freehold" means unincumbered freehold, & such a description does not properly describe freeholds subject to restrictive covenants.

(3) There is an obligation on a vendor of freeholds to disclose restrictive covenants, & if he does not disclose them, the purchaser is entitled to a return of his deposit.—HONE v. GAKSTATTER (1909), 53 Sol. Jo. 286.

An agreement for the sale of certain leasehold houses contained the following stipulation, "The vendor's title is accepted by the purchasers." The leases under which the property was held contained onerous & unusual covenants, the existence of which had not been disclosed by the vendor before the contract was entered into, & of which the purchasers had no notice:—Held: the condition as to the acceptance of the title did not affect the vendor's general duty of disclosure, & the purchasers were entitled to rescind the contract & to have the deposit returned with interest.—Re HAEDICKE & LIPSKI'S CONTRACT, [1901] 2 Ch. 666; 70 L. 1075. —.]—Deft., a married woman, signed a written agreement to purchase from pltf. a lease for ninety-nine years of a newly erected dwelling-house at Shepherd's Bush, London, in consideration of a premium of £527 10s. & a ground rent of £6 6s. Before signing the contract deft. asked to see a copy of the lease, & was told by the vendor's agent that it was quite in the "ordinary form." Relying on this representation deft. signed the contract for the purchase after paying £327 10s. as part of the premium or deposit, & was let into possession of the house. The draft lease when produced contained (inter alia) a covenant by the lessee "to pay all costs, charges & expenses, including solrs.' costs & surveyors' fees, incurred by the lessor for the purpose of or incidental to the preparation & service of a notice under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14, requiring the lessee to remedy a breach of any of the covenants on the part of the lessee. . . ."

Pltf. alleged that this covenant was contained in the form of lease in use on this estate, & on deft. declining to sign the lease unless it was omitted therefrom, he brought an action for specific performance of the written agreement:—Held: in a case such as this, of a long lease of a new house at a moderate ground rent, the covenant in question was not an "ordinary" or even a reasonable one, but was an onerous covenant to which the purchaser's attention ought to be called by the vendor, & the lease containing this covenant was not a lease "in the ordinary form":—Held: therefore, that the action failed, & the deft. was entitled, on her counterclaim, to rescission of the contract, & repayment of £327 10s., with interest at 4 per cent.—ALLEN v. SMITH, [1924] 2 Ch. 308; 93 L. J. Ch. 538; 131 L. T. 667; 68 Sol. Jo. 718.

SECT. 2.—DUTY TO MAKE TITLE.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1076. General rule.]—If a contract be made for the sale of leasehold property unconditionally, & without a stipulation in terms on the part of the vendor, that he means to sell his interest only in the residue of the term, & that he will not warrant title makes it bad.—HOYLE v. EDWARDS (1869), 6 W. W. & A'B. 48.—AUS.

1076ii. —.]—A vendor of real estate must at law, as well as in equity, show an unassailable title.—ENWRIGHT v. M'Caw (1875), 1 V. L. R. 196.—AUS.

1076iii. —.]—Where a party binds himself to make a good & effectual conveyance of land, he must prove that he has the legal title, & that the land did actually pass by his deed.—

his lessor's title, he is bound to show to the satisfaction of the purchaser that his lessor, or the original grantor of the term, was entitled to grant the lease. He cannot otherwise oblige the purchaser to complete the contract made for the purchase of the premises. Nor is there anything in the circumstances of the lease having been originally granted by a lay corp., or of its being of very old date, to make it an exception to the general rule of law. Exception to report of title, that the abstract not having set out the title of the original lessor, & those under whom the lessee claimed, did not contain a good title, overruled. Accordingly a memorandum of an agreement, dated May 15, for sale & purchase of leasehold property described therein as "a messuage held for the remainder of a term of years under the corp. of Bath, & the late R. A. at the sum, etc., an abstract to be made out & delivered by the vendor, & the assignment to be made & prepared at the expense of the purchaser, the purchase-money to be paid at or before Midsummer," with other ordinary provisions:—Held: on exceptions to the master's general report of title, not to be binding on the purchaser against objections made on his part upon receiving the abstract of title, that the contents of two existing deeds were not introduced in the abstract delivered on May 24, though they were contained in an abstract delivered afterwards on Sept. 3, in consequence of which the purchaser abandoned the contract. Semble: such an agreement does not give such a description of the interest meant to be sold, as to preclude the purchaser's right to seek further into the title.

It is a general rule in equity, founded on principles of honesty & the dictates of good sense, that if a person, generally speaking, offers anything for sale, the vendee, or he who becomes the purchaser, is entitled to see that the vendor has it with the qualifications, & in the way in which he, the vendee, understood that he bought it; that is, so as to afford him an assurance of having bought what he wanted, & meant to buy, or at least, what was offered or professed to be sold, or he may reject the contract (RICHARDS, C.B.).—PURVIS v. RAYER (1821), 9 Price, 488; 147 E. R. 159, Ex. Ch.

1078. —.]—A party who occupied a house as tenant from year to year, entered into the following agreement with his landlord, "Sept. 2, 1831, S. G. is willing to let the sum lie, by paying 4 per cent." :—Held: as there was an implied condition in the contract that the landlord should make out a good title, the agreement for the purchase did not operate as a surrender of the tenancy by operation of law.—*DOE d. At the trial, an agreement was produced as follows: "Mr. II., plff., having agreed to purchase of Mr. B., deft., two leasehold houses, etc. Mr. B. hereby agreed to paper, etc.; Mr. II. to pay, etc. at the time of the conveyance, etc." Nothing was said in the agreement as to making a title :—Held: the agreement to purchase, though recited as an existing agreement, was to be considered as forming part of the agreement produced; also, there was no variance between the agreement stated in the declaration & the one produced in evidence, on the ground that the latter was silent as to the title, inasmuch as the contract to make a title was implied.—*HALL v. Where a lessee in possession contracted to sell the residue of his term, being three years & a quarter, at the rent of £42 per annum, the vendee paying £30 for the fixtures, as per list:—Held: it was not to be inferred from the short residue of the term, the small value of the property, & the absence of any premium for the lease, that the vendee intended to waive his right to call for the production of the lessor's title.—SOUTER v. the manor, etc.; that it was further agreed between pltf. & deft., that, if the completion of the purchase should, from any cause on the part of pltf., be delayed beyond the said Nov. 1, deft. should pay interest on the unpaid portion of the purchase-money, at the rate of 10s. per cent. & if the delay should be caused by deft. at the rate of £5 per cent. from the said Nov. 1, until the day of payment, deft. being entitled to the rents & profits, & to the possession of the said premises, on & from the said Nov. 1. The declaration contained a general averment that pltf. had performed all things on his part, etc. Deft. pleaded first that pltf. was not ready & willing to convey the premises; secondly, that pltf. did not deduce a good marketable title; & thirdly, that pltf. did not tender any deed for conveying the premises to deft.; & these pleas each concluded with a verification:—Held: according to the true construction of the agreement, deft. was not bound to pay the residue of the purchase-money until a good title to the premises was made out by pltf., & he was ready to convey to deft.—MANBY v. On investigation of the title it appeared that the houses were part of a property which had been sold by a building society in lots, subject to stringent restrictive covenants which were admitted to make the title not a marketable one. T. having declined to procure a release of the covenants, C. brought an action to recover back his deposit. T. adduced evidence that C. knew of the restriction at the time of the contract, & the jury found that he did:—Held: this evidence could not be admitted to modify the terms of the express contract, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—CATO v. They agreed to settle all these disputes & signed a written agreement that pltf. should pay deft. £9,500, & that deft. should execute such deeds as pltf. should require for the conveyance of the estates. 1092. Agreement for lease with option of purchase—Exercise of option.]—By an agreement entered into between pltf. & deft., the latter agreed with the former to grant him a lease for a term of ninety-nine years, subject to a yearly rent & certain covenants to be inserted in the proposed lease. Previous to the lease a small part of the ground of No. 2 was subtracted from the possession of the lessee; but the lease, nevertheless, contained a description & plan, in the margin, of the whole ground plot, including that part:—Held: although in equity B. should not be entitled to enforce the covenants in the lease as to that part of the ground, yet that the particulars of sale being with reference to the lease, without an exception of the plot subtracted from the possession, A. the purchaser was entitled to call upon the vendor to complete his purchase, by making a good title to the whole estate contained in the lease, & an assignment of the lease was not a compliance with the conditions of sale, the vendor not being able to convey the above-mentioned small plot of ground.—*TOMKINS v. 1099. Marketable title.]—(1) On a vendor's bill for specific performance, the opinion of the ct. was much in favour of the title, the question on which turned on the construction of a particular will; but the ct., being unable to found that opinion upon any general rule of law, or upon reasoning so conclusive as to satisfy the ct. that other competent persons might not entertain a different opinion, or that the purchaser taking the title might not be exposed to substantial & not merely idle litigation, refused to decree a specific performance.

(2) A doubtful title, which a purchaser will not be compelled to accept, is not only a title upon which the ct. entertains doubts, but includes also a title which, although the ct. has a favourable opinion of it, yet may reasonably & fairly be questioned in the opinion of other competent persons, for the ct. has no means of binding the question as against adverse claimants, or of indemnifying the purchaser, if its own opinion in favour of the title should turn out not to be well founded.

(3) If the doubts as to a title arise upon a question connected with the general law, the ct. is to judge whether the general law on the point is or is not settled; & if it be not, or if the doubts as to the title may be affected by extrinsic circumstances, which neither the purchaser nor the ct. can satisfactorily investigate, specific performance will be refused.

(4) It is the duty of the ct., on questions of title depending on the possibility of future rights arising, to consider the course which would be taken if the rights had actually arisen, & were in course of litigation.

(5) A marketable title is a title which, at all times, & under all circumstances, may be forced upon an unwilling purchaser.

(6) Every purchaser is entitled to require a marketable title; by which I understand to be meant, a title which, so far as its antecedents are concerned, may at all times, & under all circumstances, be forced upon an unwilling purchaser (TURNER, V.-C.).—*PYRKE v. 1104. Option to purchase by lessees—"All estate," etc., at date of lease—Premises mortgaged at date of lease.]—By a lease dated Apr. 15, 1920, landlords demised premises to tenants for the term of three years. The lease contained a provision that the tenants should at any time during the term "have the option of purchasing all the estate, interest & title which is, at the date of these presents, vested in the landlords in & to the freehold premises hereby demised & the fixtures & fittings . . . at a price not exceeding £3,000." On Apr. 15, 1921, the tenants wrote exercising the option to purchase for £3,000. They subsequently found that the premises had not at the date of the lease been vested in the landlords for an unencumbered estate in fee simple, but had been mortgaged in 1910 to secure a loan of which £500 was at the date of the lease & was still owing:—Held: under the option the tenants were only entitled to acquire for £3,000 the actual interest in the premises that the landlords had at the time of the lease, & therefore, the landlords were under no obligation to pay off the mtge. & convey the unencumbered fee simple in consideration of the purchase price of £3,000.—FOWLER v. WILLIS, [1922] 2 Ch. 514; 91 L. J. Ch. 772; 128 L. T. 500; 66 Sol. Jo. 576.

1106. Equitable title in vendor—Legal estate outstanding.]—An abstract showed the equitable fee to be in the vendor, & the legal estate to be in A. as a mtgee. for a term, & subject thereto, in B. in fee. By a supplemental abstract it appeared that, before the abstract was delivered, A. assigned the mtge. money to B. & was declared a trustee of the term for him, & that he had since died intestate; that his father, who first took out administration to him, was also dead, & that he remained unrepresented for some years; after which S. took out administration to him:—Held: the first abstract showed a complete title; the tracing of the title to the legal estate being matter of conveyance merely.—*AVARNE v. Condition 9: "If any error or misstatement shall appear to have been made in the particulars of sale, it is not to annul the sale; but shall entitle the purchaser to compensation." The abstract of the deed of Apr. 17, 1860, recited an indenture of Mar. 2, 1850, whereby E. assigned to R. in fee, & another deed whereby R. assigned to certain trustees in fee, & by the deed the trustees conveyed to defts.' testator in fee, subject, so far as the premises were subject thereto, to the covenants

Where a contract is entered into to sell a freehold, & nothing is said about the minerals, if the purchaser finds the minerals are reserved, the title is bad, & he cannot be compelled to take it. But if, on a sale of copyholds, nothing is said as to the minerals, can a purchaser object that the title is bad because he cannot touch the minerals except with the consent of the lord ? Clearly not. . . . A contract to assign a lease is not satisfied by granting or assigning an underlease (ROMILLY, M.R.).—HAYFORD v. CRIDDLE (1855), 22 Beav. 477 ; 52 E. R. 1192.

An enfranchisement was effected under the second Act, reserving the minerals to the lord :—Held : the contract had reference to the provisions in those Acts relative to minerals, etc., & the purchaser must complete, notwithstanding this reservation.—*KERR v. An objection to the title on the ground of such right to rework is valid, & a purchaser is entitled to compensation, to be estimated by taking all the circumstances into consideration.—RAMSDEN v. HURST (1858), 27 L. J. Ch. 482 ; 31 L. T. O. S. 325 ; 4 Jur. N. S. 200 ; 6 W. R. 349.

1114. ——— ]—If a vendor does not deliver the abstract of title within the time specified in the conditions of sale, he cannot hold the purchaser bound to send in his objections within the time limited for that purpose, even though it was stipulated in the condition for sending in the objections that time in that respect should be of the essence of the contract. In such a case, the time within which objections will be considered as waived will depend upon the general principles of the ct. & the conduct of the parties. Where a decree is made for specific performance of a contract for sale, & an inquiry is directed in general terms whether the vendor can make a good title, it must be understood to mean a good title having regard to the terms of the contract ; but if the vendor wishes to prevent objections which have been waived before the suit from being renewed under the inquiry, that point should be considered at the hearing, & noticed in the decree. Land was described in a contract for sale as freehold, but it was shown by the abstract that it was formerly copyhold, & had been enfranchised under Enfranchisement Acts. A decree was afterwards made at the suit of the vendor for specific performance, & a general inquiry directed as to title, in the course of which the purchaser for the first time objected that the minerals were reserved to the lord of the manor under Enfranchisement Acts :—Held : the objection was fatal to the title ; but as the purchaser had taken the objection so late he was not allowed his costs.

A man who sells land as freehold does not make a good marketable title, such as the purchaser is entitled to have, by producing a title under an Enfranchisement Act, which reserves to the lord of the manor his mineral rights to the manor (JAMES, L.J.).—*UPPERTON v. On May 17, deft.'s solr. sent back the draft with a letter stating that he could not advise his client to go on with the negotiations. Pltf.'s solrs. sent back the draft with some variations & with the abstract of title, from which it appeared that the land was enfranchised copyhold, & that the vendor had not the mines. On May 20, deft.'s solr. wrote to pltf.'s solrs. that, as pltf. had not the mines, he could not advise his client to go on with the matter. Deft. accordingly refused to proceed. Pltf. negotiated with the lord of the manor for the purchase of the mines, but did not obtain a conveyance of them till Sept. In the meantime, on June 22, 1889, pltf. commenced this action for specific performance or damages:—Held: (1) as in May, 1889, the vendor had not power to convey the mines, nor power to compel a conveyance of them from any other person, the purchaser was entitled, upon discovering this, to rescind the contract, though the time to be allowed for completion had not expired, & specific performance could not be decreed; (2) pltf. could not sustain a claim for damages for breach of contract, since he was not, on June 24, which must be treated as the end of the time allowed for completion, in a position to give deft. such a conveyance as the deft. was entitled to.

D. Sale of Leaseholds.

1116. Sale by sheriff—Purchase-money not paid by execution debtor.—A. having sold certain leasehold premises to B., assigned them by indenture, containing a proviso that B. should not assign over until the whole of the purchase-money should have been paid, & B. & C. covenanted for themselves, their exors., administrators, & assigns for the payment of the money. The premises having been taken in execution for a debt of B. who had not paid the purchase-money, were sold by the sheriff to D., who paid down a deposit & agreed to complete the purchase on having a good title:—Held: the non-payment of the purchase-money by B. was a sufficient objection to the title, & D. might recover back his deposit in an action for money had & received.—ELLIOT v. EDWARDS (1802), 3 Bos. & P. 181; 127 E. R. 100.

1117. Liability to forfeiture—Sale in different lots—Purchaser of one lot exclusively subject to rent—Clause for re-entry on non-payment.—On a sale, in lots, of premises, the particulars of which state them to be held under one lease reserving rent, & that the purchaser of one lot is to be exclusively subject to the rent, the other purchasers cannot object to the title, on the ground of a clause of re-entry on non-payment, contained in the lease.—WALTER v. MAUNDE (1820), 1 Jac. & W. 181; 37 E. R. 344.

1118. ——— Liability for breach of covenant by purchaser of other lot.—Certain leasehold premises held under the same lease, & together subject to a ground rent of £8 per annum, were sold by public auction in two lots. It was stated in the particulars of sale, that the premises consisted of "a leasehold estate held of W. for a term of years," & that lots 1 & 2 respectively were to be sold, subject to a ground rent of £4 per annum; but no notice was given, by the particulars, of the special covenants contained in the original lease. In a suit by the vendor for a specific performance of the contract for sale as to lot 1:—Held: he had made out a good title by showing that a good lease of lot 1 was subsisting, & vested in him; & the purchaser could not object to perform the contract because he might be liable to eviction by reason of a breach of covenant to be committed by the purchaser of lot 2, under the covenants of the original lease, concerning which no provision had been made in the conditions of sale.—PATERSON v. LONG (1843), 6 Beav. 590; 13 L. J. Ch. 1; 2 L. T. O. S. 116; 7 Jur. 1049; 49 E. R. 954.

1119. ——— Non-payment of rent reserved in original demise.—(1) Property was put up for sale by auction, described as "a leasehold ground rent of £23, reserved by a mesne lease of certain premises for ninety-eight years wanting seven days, & assigned apart from the reversion for the remainder of the term by an indenture of 1817." By the conditions of sale no title prior to the assignment or the title of any ground or mesne landlord was to be produced. From a recital in the deed of 1817, it appeared that the property out of which the rent issued had been originally demised, with other property, at a rent of £10, subject to the covenants, conditions, & agreements in the original demise contained:—Held: under such circumstances, a good title was not made to the rent of £23, inasmuch as it appeared upon the face of the deed of 1817, that, upon failure of payment of the £10 rent, the rent of £23 might be liable to diminution or forfeiture.

(2) Where conditions of sale are so obscurely worded, that, when taken in connection with the particulars of sale, they are likely to mislead an ordinary purchaser as to the nature of the property offered for sale, semble, the ct. will discharge the purchaser from his bargain, on the argument of exceptions to the title, without putting him to the necessity of moving to be discharged from the purchase.—TAYLOR v. MARTINDALE (1842), 1 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 658; 62 E. R. 1060.

1120. Non-performance of covenants in original lease.—On granting a building lease for ninety-two & three-quarters years the lessee covenanted that he would, within the first five years of the term, build thirty-four additional houses, of the dimensions therein mentioned, & keep same in repair, & same so repaired, at the end or other sooner determination of the term, deliver up to the lessor or his assigns. Some only of the thirty-four houses were built; but the lessor, notwithstanding, received the rent, payable under the lease, for forty-six years afterwards. On a sale of the property by public auction, by the assignees in bkpcy. of the lessee:—Held: although there had been a waiver by the lessor of the covenant to build, still the covenant to deliver up the houses, at the end or sooner determination of the term, continued in force, & was a valid objection to the title; & the purchaser could not be required to accept compensation or indemnity.—NOUAILLE v. FLIGHT (1844), 7 Beav. 521; 13 L. J. Ch. 414; 8 Jur. 838; 49 E. R. 1168.

1121. ————In an action by a purchaser against a vendor of leasehold premises, for breach of contract in failing to make out a good title, it appeared that the premises were demised by A. B. & C. to J., who assigned to deft. The lease contained a covenant by the lessee to insure the premises in the joint names of the lessors, with a proviso for re-entry on breach of covenant by the lessee. The premises were insured in the joint names of A., B., C., & deft.:—Held: this was not a good performance of the covenant to insure; & deft. being bound to show a good lease, the liability to have the lease avoided by the landlord was a valid objection to the title.—PENNIAL v. HARBORNE (1848), 11 Q. B. 368; 17 L. J. Q. B. 94; 10 L. T. O. S. 305; 12 Jur. 159; 116 E. R. 514.

Lot 6 was described as a leasehold house, "No. 21, adjoining lot 5, & of similar design & accommodation. Is now & has been for years in the occupation of T." The two houses were built on adjoining strips of land, each held under a separate lease. The small yard & extra stable lay behind No. 21, & were comprised in the lease of lot 6. The occupations were as stated in the particulars. Pltf. purchased lot 5, deft. II. lot 6. Pltf. took an assignment from the vendor of the property in the lease of lot 5, & no more. H. on the following day, took an assignment of all the property comprised in the lease of lot 6, thus obtaining the legal estate in the small yard & extra stable:—Held: pltf. was entitled to an assignment, from II. of a small yard & extra stable, for, according to the true construction of the particulars, H. had not contracted to purchase them, but pltf. had.

Part of lot 5 is comprised in the same lease with other property & to that part pltf. will not get a good title, since he will be liable to be deprived of it by a forfeiture occasioned by the acts of other parties (LORD CRANWORTH, C.).—*LEUTY v. 1125. —[.]—A purchaser entered into an open contract to purchase a "leasehold" house & paid a deposit. It appeared on the face of the abstract of title that the property agreed to be sold was held upon an underlease & formed part of larger premises comprised in two head leases. The purchaser objected to the title on the ground that the property being so held she would be liable to eviction by the original lessor for breaches of covenant in respect of property not comprised in the underlease:—Held: a good title had not been shown by the vendors to the 1130. Underlease granted with covenants omitted.—(1) Qu.: if a lessee for a term of years, underlet for a less term, & the underlessee sell by auction, the lesser term describing it as a lease, & one of the conditions of sale is that the lessor's title shall not be inquired into; the vendor's title being good, whether the purchaser can refuse to complete because there is a term interposed between the vendor's interest & the freehold.

(2) In such a case, where the property was included in the original lease, together with other hereditaments, subject to general covenants, & a power of re-entry for breach of any of them, & the purchaser had discovered these facts aliunde:—Held: he was entitled to refuse to perform his contract, notwithstanding that the original lease contained provisions for the apportionment of the rent & of the power of re-entry.

(3) It is a formidable objection to the title of a vendor of leasehold property, that he has underlet it by a lease which does not contain similar covenants to those by which he is bound to his own lessor, for example, covenants to build, or to paint at certain periods; for the vendor may thus have put it out of his power, during the underlease, to perform covenants for the breach of which the original lessor can re-enter.

(4) Qu.: whether the doctrine that a purchaser of leaseholds, or of freeholds subject to a lease, has notice of the covenants in the lease can be extended to fix him with notice of collateral facts in such covenants. If such facts disclose a defect in the vendor's title the ct. will not compel

Condition 4 provided that the title should commence "with the lease under which the vendor holds, dated July 11, 1845." Condition 5 stated that "the description of the property in the particulars is believed to be correct, but if any error shall be found therein the same shall not annul the sale, nor shall any compensation be allowed in respect thereof." The vendor was in fact entitled to an underlease for the residue of the term of ninety years less two days at a peppercorn rent, & the owner of the two days could not be found:—Held: the representation that the property was held by lease when it was in fact held by underlease was a fatal misdescription, unless it was cured by condition 5 & condition 5 did not apply, for that "error in the description of the property" meant a misdescription of the corporeal property, not a mistake in the description of the vendor's title; a good title was not shown.—Re BEYFUS & MASTERS'S CONTRACT (1888), 39 Ch. Therefore, where leasehold property about to be sold, was described in the particulars of sale as being held at a ground rent of £86 per annum, & it appeared from the lease that the ground rent was £80, & one-third of the improved yearly rent or value, & there were other stringent covenants in the lease, not noticed in the particulars, such as that no fine should be taken for an underlease or assignment, except with the consent of the reversioner, etc.:—Held: nevertheless, the purchaser must be held to his contract.

(2) The abstract ought to contain no misstatement or misrepresentation, such as that made in the present case, when heavy incumbrances are expressed to be paid off, & the deeds not yet executed, & the title should be complete at the time of the abstract being delivered, or the vendors were not in a position to enforce their contract. It also provided that "The tenant for life of lot 1 will join in the conveyance to the purchaser for the purpose of releasing her life interest therein." necessary purposes, & with liberty to pass for ingress & egress in the upper land surrounding or adjoining the conveyed land. By other deeds of 1824 other portions of the lower land were released, with all watercourses, particularly as the same ran to an inn on the conveyed land from the upper land. By other deeds of 1825 further portions of the lower land were released, with liberty to fetch water for family & domestic uses at a well on the higher land. By other deeds of 1834 other part of the lower land was released, with liberty to the lessee to make a covered goit, or watercourse, across the bottom part of a field, part of the upper land, & to open & repair the same when necessary. Several years afterwards the upper land was sold, according to a particular describing it as fit for building, & subject to conditions of sale, providing that, if any mistake were made in the description of the premises, or if any other error should appear in the particulars, such error or omission should not annul the sale, but compensation should be given or taken. The existence of the easements was not stated in the particulars or conditions:—Held: (1) the circumstances of the purchaser living in the neighbourhood, being acquainted with the property, & passing constantly some of the wells on the lower land, supplied from the upper land, did not affect him with notice of the existence of the easements; (2) the existence of the easements, granted by any one of the deeds of 1816, 1820 & 1834, alone constituted a material defect in the title to the upper land; (3) the existence of the easements, granted by the deeds of 1824 & 1825, would have been alone sufficient to render the title subject to such serious doubt that a purchaser could not be compelled to accept it; (4) under the circumstances, & inasmuch as the whole purchased land did not exceed 30 acres, the purchaser could not be compelled to take the title, with compensation as to the lands prejudicially affected, which admeasured about $4\frac{1}{2}$ acres.—*SHACKLETON v. 1158. Title on which court will compel specific performance.—In an action to recover the expenses incurred by pltf. in investigating deft.'s title to mortgage certain lands, upon the ground that deft.'s title had turned out to be defective, the declaration stated, that, in consideration pltf. would advance £2,000 upon the security of a mtge. of the land, upon deft.'s making out a good title to mortgage the lands to pltf., deft. promised pltf. to pay him the expenses to which he might be subjected in case the loan should go off by reason of deft. changing his views, or of the defectiveness of deft.'s title. The evidence of deft.'s title was as follows:—Deft., shortly before the agreement with pltf. had contracted to purchase the premises of W., who claimed as heir-at-law ex parte materna to B. the person last named seized. J., the father of B., married E., & died in 1787, aged fifty-nine, & devised the property to his son B. & his two daughters, & after their death, to B. in fee. The daughters both died, unmarried, before B., who died a bachelor, in 1839. In order to negative the existence of any heirs ex parte paterna, depositions in a Chancery suit of E. v. E., in 1843, had been forwarded to pltf., in which the deponents stated that they were well acquainted with B., who had told them that “he had no relation left,” & deponents stated, that they believed B. had no relation left, on his father's side, living at the time of his death. It further appeared that two issues had been directed in the same suit, in which both parties claimed the property as heir to B. ex parte materna; & that the jury had found, upon two occasions, the cause having been tried twice, that B. did not leave any heir ex parte paterna; & that pltf. in that suit (W. from whom deft. claimed) was the heir-at-law of B. ex parte materna. A statutory declaration had also been furnished to pltf., in which declarant stated, that B. & his sisters had told him, on several occasions, that they had no relations whatever, but that he was the last of his family:—Held: deft. had not made out a good title to the land; for by “a good title” was to be understood such a title as a Ct. of Ch. would adopt as a sufficient ground for compelling specific performance, & such a title as would be a good answer to an action of ejectment by any claimant.—*JEAKES v. 1162. Title derived through conveyance from mortgagee—Owner of equity of redemption deceased—Personal representative not joining.—The vendor's title was derived through a conveyance from the mtgees. alone, without the concurrence of a personal representative of deceased owner of the equity of redemption. In a suit for specific performance of contract of sale:—Held: the title of the mtgees. was not absolute against the creditors of intestate any of whom might obtain administration to intestate's estate, & redeem the mtge., & therefore a good title was not shown to the premises.—*BEALE v. 1163. Title commenced by general devise—Recital of seisin in old deed.—(1) A title more than sixty years old commenced by a general demise; a deed more than sixty years old recited the seisin of the devisor:—Held: that coupled with the continued possession was sufficient evidence of seisin.

(2) A title is first shown, when the abstract states all the matters which, if proved, make a good title. A title is made, when the matters are proved.

(3) Where a title commenced by a general demise, & seisin proved as stated [above], & there was ground to assume that the vendor had deeds earlier than those on the abstract:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to inspection of those deeds, if in the vendor's possession; but not to have them on the abstract.

Testator gave & devised all his freehold & copyhold estate to trustees "upon trusts thereafter declared," together with all his personal estate, & directed them to set apart, out of the proceeds arising from the sale of his estate a certain sum to provide for annuities, & gave the residue, "after payment of debts, legacies, etc." to the children of several nephews & nieces in equal shares & proportions:—Held: a good title could be made under the implied power of sale for payment of debts, legacies, etc., & under a power of sale for purposes of division amongst residuary legatees; & the vendors were not bound to state whether there existed any debts which made a sale necessary.—*FLUX v. 1168. — Before accrual of title of trustee in bankruptcy.—Purchasers from the trustees of a voluntary settlement of freehold lands objected to the title on the ground that under Bkpcy. Act, 1883 (c. 52), s. 47, the settlement would be void as against the trustee in bkpcy. of the settlor, if he should become bkpt. within two years of the date of the settlement, & would be void if he should become bkpt. within ten years of such date, unless the "parties claiming under the settlement" could show that the settlor was at the time of making the settlement able to pay all his debts without the aid of the settled property. Upon a vendor's summons under the Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78):—Held: (1) the purchasers would be "parties claiming under the settlement," & the title could not be forced upon the purchasers; (2) although a good title might possibly be made through the concurrence of the settlor, by his conveying to the purchasers & their paying the purchase-money by his direction to the trustees, yet such a title could not be forced upon unwilling purchasers; (a) because the ct. would not assist a settlor to get rid of his own settlement; & (b) because there was no means of ascertaining conclusively that the settlement was not in reality in the first instance, or had not subsequently become, a settlement for value.—Re BRIGGS & SPICER, [1891] 2 Ch. 127; 60 L. 1171. Sale by beneficiaries under will.—By the conditions of sale of certain property it was stipulated that all objections & requisitions in respect of the title should be delivered within fourteen days from the delivery of the abstract. An abstract of title was duly delivered containing a full abstract of a will under which the property was sold. After the fourteen days had elapsed the purchaser made an objection as to the construction of the will. Testator had devised & bequeathed his real & personal estates to his wife during widowhood, & at her decease or marriage to his sons & daughters therein named in equal shares; & the will then proceeded as follows: "but if any of my children should die during my lifetime, or otherwise, leaving issue, such child or children, as the case may be to have their father's or mother's share, to be equally divided between them absolutely."

Testator's widow died in 1884, leaving all the sons & daughters named in the will her surviving, & all of them had attained twenty-one years. Such sons & daughters were the vendors of the property sold. One of the daughters had married in 1878.

The questions were whether the purchaser could make any requisition after the expiration of the time agreed upon by the conditions of sale; whether upon the construction of the will the shares of testator's sons & daughters became vested in them for an indefeasible estate in fee simple upon the death of his widow, or whether such shares were still subject to an executory devise over in any case any of such sons & daughters should die leaving issue:—Held: (1) the objection did not go to the root of the title, & the requisition, being out of time, failed; (2) the children were entitled to their respective shares for an indefeasible estate in fee simple, & they could therefore make a good title.—Re THOMPSON & CURZON (1885), 29 Ch. 1172. Property subject to restrictive covenant—Not disclosed.—A trustee in bkpey. contracted to sell bkpt.'s life interest in certain property. No mention was made in the contract of the property being subject to any restrictive covenant, but on the examination of the abstract it appeared that part of the property was subject to a restrictive covenant with regard to building:—Held: the restrictive covenant depreciated the value of the property & the non-disclosure of it in the contract was a fatal objection to the title.—Re EBSWORTH & TIDY'S CONTRACT (1889), 42 Ch. Shortly after the date of the conveyance beer & spirits were sold in one of the houses erected on the land, & continued to be openly sold for upwards of twenty-four years:—Held: in an action by a purchaser to rescind a contract for sale of that house on the ground of the existence of this restrictive covenant, it must be presumed from the uninterrupted user of the premises as a beer-house for twenty-four years, there had been a waiver or release of the covenant.—HEPWORTH v.

1176. Agreement for sale of freehold—Deposited lease not surrendered—Recovery in ejectment by lessor—Indemnity offered.—Land was leased by the freeholder to B. for twenty-one years from Mar. 1876, the lease containing the usual proviso for re-entry for nonpayment of rent. The lease was subsequently deposited by B. with T. as security for an advance. In Dec. 1877, the freeholder conveyed the land to J. in fee simple subject to the lease. In 1890 an action in ejectment was commenced by J. against B. for non-payment of rent, & B. not appearing judgment was given in favour of J. in Mar. 1890, & he took possession thereunder. The exors. of T., who had died, were not parties to the action & had no notice of it. B. got into pecuniary difficulties, & disappeared without having repaid the advance. In June, 1890, J. conveyed the land to W. in fee simple, when the production of the judgment in ejectment was considered satisfactory as regarded the deposited lease. In Dec. 1892, W. agreed to sell the land to C. in fee simple free from incumbrances. C. required that the lease to B. should be surrendered at W.'s expense, or at all events given up before completion. This W. was unable to accede to, but he offered to agree to indemnify C. against any claim which might be made under the lease:

Held: this was not a reasonable blot on the title to which the ct. ought to give effect, it being a purely theoretical & not a practical blot, & the vendor having offered to give an indemnity, the purchaser's objection must be declared sufficiently answered.—Re HEYSMAN'S & TWEEDY'S CONTRACT (1893), 69 L. T. 89, C. A.

1177. Property subject to agreement restricting user.—(1) Pltfs. by an open contract agreed to buy from defts. two houses "subject to right of light with owner of adjoining property being guaranteed." The houses had been recently built by the vendor, & contained no ancient lights. The adjoining house had also been built by the vendor & sold by him in 1897 to D., on which occasion he & D. mutually covenanted not to do anything to prejudice the right of light to the windows of each other's premises:—Held: this restrictive stipulation was a defect in the title.

(2) Under part of the premises contracted to be sold ran a drain, into which opened the drains of two adjoining houses:—Held: this drain was a sewer, & was vested in the local authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 65), s. 13; Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (c. 50), s. 19, did not prevent it from vesting; the vendor was therefore unable to convey all that he had contracted to sell; & he had not made a good title.—*PEMSEL & WILSON v. PART V. SECT. 3.

11791. General rule.—It is only where deft. admits pltf.'s title, or has by his contract expressly agreed to pay irrespective of title, that a ct. will decree payment by a purchaser without

of the portions being satisfied, but a settlement of the estate took place in 1744, & a recovery was suffered; & there was a covenant that the estate was free from incumbrances. No assignment appeared to have been at any time made of the term. On an objection to the title by a purchaser:—Held: a surrender of the term must be presumed; & in matters of presumption the ct. will bind a purchaser where it would give a clear direction to a jury.

The only rule [the ct.] can adopt in cases of presumption seems to be that if the case be such, that sitting before a jury, it would be the duty of a judge to give a clear direction in favour of the fact; thus it is to be considered as without reasonable doubt; but if it would be the duty of a judge to leave it to the jury to pronounce upon the effect of the evidence, then it is to be considered as too doubtful to conclude a purchaser (LEACH, V.-C.).—*EMERY v. 1190. — [—]—The ct. is bound to act upon its own opinion, & to decree specific performance when it considers the title clear.

1191. — [—]—I adopt entirely the view expressed by TURNER, V.-C., with respect to the species of doubt which ought to prevent the ct. from enforcing specific performance in the way he expresses it. Such a case must, I think, come within one of three divisions. First, where there has been a decision adverse to the title or to the principle on which the title depends, which the ct. is of opinion is wrong, of course if the ct. is of opinion that the decision is right, it is simply a bad title, in which case the ct. will not rely upon its own opinion against a decision already pronounced, & will not enforce the title. Another case is where there is a decision in favour of the title, but the ct. is of opinion the decision was not right.

The third division, which I think is the difficult

one, is where there is a known difficulty in the title. For instance, when I was at the Bar, there was a great question whether a mere contingent remainder could be too remote or not. Suppose there were a title depending on that question alone, or on several questions which were known to be questions discussed among conveyancers, the ct. would say, "I will not decide that question incidentally in enforcing the title upon a purchaser." Those are cases in which, undoubtedly, you could not compel the purchaser to take the title.

Another case is pointed out by TURNER, V.-C., in which it is undoubtedly true that the ct. will not decree specific performance, although I think it comes rather within another rule, where the validity of the title depends upon facts or a fact the exact accuracy of which you have no means of judging. Then, of course, you will not force the title upon anybody. In truth, the vendor has not made out a good title; because, if it depends upon a particular fact, that fact must be proved, & if he does not prove it, he has not made out a good title (ROMILLY, M.R.).—MULLINGS v. TRINDER (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 449; 39 L. J. Ch.

contingent remainders.]—A purchaser not compelled to take a doubtful title; nor will a case be directed without his consent. The ct. also hesitated upon giving sanction to a title founded on the destruction of contingent remainders by the tenant for life; there being no trustees to support them.—ROAKE v. 1194. — Dependent on facts not well proved.]—The ct. will not compel a purchaser to take a title depending upon matter of fact, if the fact do not admit of satisfactory proof or be not well proved.—SMITH v. DEATH (1820), 5 Madd. 371; 56 E. R. 937.

1197. — Title derived from person committing act of bankruptcy.]—A purchaser is not bound to accept a doubtful title. Where vendors derived title from a trader who was liable to the bkpt. laws, & who had committed an act of bkpcy. by assigning his estate to his creditors:—Held: the purchaser was not bound to accept the title, it not appearing that all the creditors had released, or that some one of them had not the power of suing out a commission.—PORT v. TURNER (1830), 6 Bing. 702; L. & Welsb. 293; 4 Moo. & P. 551; 8 L. J. O. S. C. P. 282; 130 E. R. 1451.

—A trader unable to pay his debts executed a deed whereby he conveyed & assigned to a trustee for his creditors all his estate & effects, including his freehold dwelling-house & shop where he carried on his business, upon trust to permit him to carry on his business for the purpose of paying off his debts by certain instalments which he thereby covenanted to pay; & upon default in the payment of such instalments the trustee was empowered to enter into possession of the whole of the property & sell the same, & pay the creditors rateably out of the proceeds; & the trader thereby appointed the trustee his attorney for executing every document necessary or expedient for carrying into effect the trusts & provisions of the deed, which was registered under Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1887 (c. 57). Five months after the date of the deed the trader made default in payment of the instalments, & the trustee entered into possession of the property comprised therein, & a month after such entry into possession by the trustee the trader was adjudged bkpt. Two months after the trader's bkpcy., the trustee under the deed sold the trader's house & shop by auction, & the purchaser required the concurrence of the trustee in bkpcy. in the conveyance of the property to him by the trustee under the deed. It was admitted that all the creditors of the trader did not assent to the deed:—Held: although the deed was not void under 13 Eliz. c. 5, as there was nothing to show that the trader thereby intended to defeat, hinder, or delay his creditors, yet the purchaser was right in his contention that the concurrence of the trustee in bkpcy. in the conveyance to him was necessary to confer a good title to the property, as otherwise he would be liable to legal proceedings at the instance of such trustee.—Re POPPLETON JONES' CONTRACT (1896), 74 L. 1200. — Sale of leaseholds—Title to reversion uncertain.]—The vendors under an agreement for sale of leaseholds produced the last receipt for the ground rent, signed by agents; but it did not clearly appear on whose behalf it was so signed. On inquiry the title to the reversion was found to be uncertain:—Held: the ct. would not compel the purchaser to accept the title, although the vendors offered to indemnify him against six years' ground rent.—PEGLER v. WHITE (1864), 33 Beav. 403; 3 New Rep. 557; 33 L. J. Ch. 569; 10 L. T. 84; 10 Jur. N. S. 330; 12 W. R. 455; 55 E. R. 423.

1201. — Trustees selling jointly with others—Possibility of injury by joint sale.]—Where trustees, with power to sell by private contract, joined with others in selling as one estate, & for one sum of money, different properties which could not be clearly distinguished, & the titles to which were, by the conditions of sale, limited to different periods:—Held: the title was too doubtful to be forced upon a purchaser, as the trust property might have been injured by the joint sale, & the ct. could not, under such circumstances, apportion the purchase-money.—REDE v. OAKES (1864), 4 De G. J. & Sm. 505; 5 New Rep. 209; 34 L. J. Ch. 145; 11 L. T. 549; 10 Jur. N. S. 1246; 13 W. R. 303; 46 E. R. 1015, L. J.J.; subsequent proceedings (1865), 2 De G. J. & Sm. 518, L. 1202. — Property purchased from undischarged bankrupt.—Testatrix, who died in Apr. 1890, devised her real estate to her nephews, W. & J., as tenants in common in fee. In Oct. 1890, W. & J. purported to convey this real estate to a land co., who, in May, 1891, entered into a contract for sale thereof to a purchaser. The purchaser before completion discovered, that in 1888 W. had been adjudicated bkpt., & that he was still undischarged. The trustee in W.'s bkpcy. now intervened & claimed to be entitled to a moiety of this real estate:—Held: the title was too doubtful to be forced on a purchaser, & on that ground alone the purchaser was entitled to be relieved from his contract.—Re NEW LAND DEVELOPMENT ASSOCN. & GRAY, [1892] 2 Ch. 138; 61 L. 1204. ——*A railway co. on July 12, 1867, conveyed certain superfluous lands, the period for the sale of which under their special Act expired on July 13, 1867, & the conveyance contained a covenant by the purchasers that they would pay the purchase-money on or before July 12, 1869, with interest in the meantime; & by an indenture of even date & made between the same parties, it was declared that until the whole of the purchase-money & interest were paid, the co. should have a lien on the deed of conveyance & the lands therein comprised. Upon a summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), raising the question whether Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), s. 127, had been satisfied:—Held: having regard to expressions in the judgments of the Ct. of Appeal in London & South Western Ry. Co. v. Gomm (1882), 120 Ch. D. 562, to the effect that when land is sold as superfluous no interest in it can be returned by the co., the question was one of such doubt that it must be left open & not answered in a way which would force the title on a purchaser or prejudice the vendor's title.—Re THACKWRAY & YOUNG'S CONTRACT (1888), 40 Ch. 1205. — Doubtful question of fact—Whether vendor purchased without notice of defect in title.—A tenant for life, purporting to act under the powers of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), granted a building lease of some vacant land at less than the best rent that could reasonably be obtained, the rent having been reduced in consideration of the waiver by the lessee of a claim for damages against the lessor, & the lessee covenanted to lay out a certain sum in building. The lessee neglected to build, & the lease was sold by auction to the vendor at a large price. The vendor agreed to sell at an enhanced price to the purchaser, & the purchaser objected that, having regard to the amount of the price, it must be shown that the rent reserved by the lease was the best that could reasonably be obtained within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 7 (2). The vendor had no knowledge of the arrangement between the lessor &

the lessee as to the reduction of the rent, & he insisted that, as purchaser for value without notice, he could make a good title to the purchaser:—Held: assuming that the lease was voidable only & not void, the title was not such as ought to be forced upon the purchaser, since it depended on a doubtful question of fact, namely, whether his predecessor in title, the vendor, purchased without notice of the defect in the title.—Re HANDMAN & WILCOX'S CONTRACT, [1902] 1 Ch. 599; 71 L. 1208. — Purchaser in danger of litigation.—An estate was settled to the husband & wife successively for life, with remainder to their children as they should appoint, & in default of appointment between such children. The husband & wife encumbered their life interests, & in Aug. the husband & wife, having seven children, appointed the whole estate to the eldest daughter; in Oct. of the same year the husband, wife & daughter mortgaged the property for £8,000. The mtge., under the power of sale in the mtge. deed, sold the property to plff.; & after the title had been approved of, one of the younger children gave notice to plff. not to complete, & that the appointment was a fraud on the marriage settlement, & also cautioning the purchaser not to pay the purchase-money; he did not, however, follow up the notice by any proceeding:—Held: notwithstanding this a good title was shown, & the purchaser must complete.—GREEN v. PULSFORD (1839), 2 Beav. 70; 48 E. R. 1105.

1209. — Heir-at-law making adverse claim.—In 1898 a contract was entered into on behalf of the present trustees of Hollis' Hospital for the sale of certain freehold property belonging to the hospital. The property contracted to be sold formed part of certain property which had been conveyed by H. to trustees upon trusts for the hospital by deeds of lease & release dated May 17 & 18, 1726. The release contained a proviso that if at any time thereafter the premises thereby conveyed or any part thereof, or the rents, issues, & profits of the same or of any part thereof, should be employed or converted to or for any other uses, intents, or purposes than those thereinbefore mentioned, then & from thenceforth all & every the premises thereinbefore conveyed should revert to the right heirs of H. party thereto. The title had been accepted & the draft conveyance approved when a letter was received by the purchaser's solrs. from A., one of the trustees of the hospital, intimating that as the heir-at-law of H. he had not concurred in the sale, & calling their attention to the clause in the release under which if the sale was carried out the property would revert to him. A summons was thereupon taken out by the purchaser for a declaration that a good title to the hereditaments contracted to be sold had not been made:—Held: in view of the notice received from A. claiming as heir-at-law of H., & who declined to be bound by the decision, the title was not one which could be forced upon an unwilling purchaser.—Re HOJLIS' HOSPITAL TRUSTEES & HAGUE'S CONTRACT, [1899] 2 Ch. 540; 68 L. 1210. —.—.]—At a sale by auction on July 21, 1903, deft. contracted to buy a secured profit rental of £550 per annum for £5,500. This profit rental was secured upon two houses in Cheapside, the receipts from tenants amounting to £950, the ground rent being £250, & the rates & taxes on one of the houses being £150. No deduction was made in respect of the other house, of which W. was the tenant, as there was no covenant by the landlord to pay rates & taxes. As a matter of fact the landlord had from 1876 until 1903 paid the rates & taxes on the house let to W. On Sept. 29, 1903, W. commenced an action for rectification of his lease, but the action was dismissed because he had granted an underlease of the term vested in him which amounted to an assignment. W. wrote that he intended to take proceedings to make the underlessee join, & bring a fresh action.

Plff. said that, the action by W. having been heard & dismissed, plff. was entitled to specific performance. For deft. it was said that plff. knew W. said that he was not liable to pay rates & taxes before the sale, & that plff. was not entitled to specific performance:—Held: W.'s claim was an honest one, & specific performance could not now be granted, because sufficient time had not elapsed to enable the ct. to say that no fresh action would be brought. The action was ordered to stand over till June 24, & if W. had then taken no steps to obtain rectification, the ct. might then be in a position to treat his claim as shadowy.—GEORGE v. THOMAS (1904), 90 L. T. 505; 52 W. R. 416.

1211. Sale by person not absolute owner—Owner offering to make title.—If A. contracts for the purchase of an estate, & is not absolute owner of it, nor has it in his power by the ordinary course of law or equity to make himself so, though the owner offers to make the seller a title, yet equity will not force the buyer to take it, for every seller that will have such a bargain executed must be bonâ fide a contractor.—TENDRING v. LONDON (1731), 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 680; 22 E. R. 571.

1212. Property formerly subject to incumbrance—Discharge shown by presumption only.—(1) A purchaser is not compellable to accept a title to premises, formerly subject to an incumbrance, the discharge of which is shown only by presumption. A leasehold was sold, subject to a ground rent, which was said to be apportioned out of a larger rent, but the apportionment was not evidenced by any existing deed, but only by the acceptance of a mesne landlord, & presumption: Held: the purchaser was not bound to accept the title.

Title reported good in creditors suit.—A purchaser is not compellable to accept a title reported good by the deputy remembrancer in a creditor's suit, against an objection, that the close in dispute, having a given name, by which it has been long known, is not described by it in the title deeds notwithstanding the vendor has been long in possession of the land as part of the estate conveyed to him by the deeds. Such a title is merely primâ facie.—EYTON v. DICKEN (1817), 4 Price, 303; 146 E. R. 472.

1214. Title dependent on invalidity of voluntary settlement.—A purchaser is compellable to take a title dependent on the invalidity of a voluntary settlement.—CURRIE v. NIND (1836), 1 My. & Cr. 17; 5 L. J. Ch. 169; 40 E. R. 283.

The lease under which the property was held contained a covenant against assigning without the consent of the lessor with the usual qualification as to refusal in the case of a respectable & responsible tenant. The vendor agreed to sell the property to the purchasers, who were brewers, under an open contract. The lessor refused to give his consent to the assignment stating that the main ground of his objection was that he desired the house to remain a free house. 1227. — —.]—A purchaser, who is aware at the time of entering into a contract for the purchase of a lease that the vendor's interest in the property is only under an underlease, is bound by the contract notwithstanding the misdescription.—FLOOD v. PRITCHARD (1879), 40 L. T. 873.

1228. — Possession taken subsequently—Whether amounting to waiver.]—If a contract for the sale of land is silent as to the title which is to be shown by the vendor, the legal implication that the purchaser is entitled to a good title may be rebutted by evidence that, before the execution of the contract, the purchaser had notice of defects in the vendor's title, but, if the contract expressly provides that a good title shall be shown the purchaser is entitled to insist on a good title, notwithstanding that before the execution of the contract he had notice of defects in the vendor's title. If the contract contains no stipulation as to possession being taken by the purchaser before completion, & he takes possession with knowledge that there are defects in the title which the vendor cannot remove, the taking possession amounts to a waiver of the purchaser's right to require the removal of those defects, or to repudiate his contract. If, on the other hand, the defects are removable by the vendor, the taking of possession does not amount to such a waiver.

A purchaser by making structural alterations after notice of restrictive covenants was held to have waived his right to object to the title on the ground of the restrictions.—Re GLOAG & MILLER'S CONTRACT (1883), 23 Ch. D. 320; 52 L. J. Ch. 654; 48 L. T. 629; 31 W. R. 601.

1229. Notice of claim by mortgagee—Purchaser postponed to mortgagee.]—A mtgee. of a leasehold house gave up the indenture of lease to his mtgor., in order that it might be shown to an intending purchaser, who wished to see what the covenants in it were; the mtgor. concealed from the purchaser the fact of the existence of an incumbrance on the property, & produced the lease to him, & left it in his possession; within a week afterwards, the purchaser accepted a conveyance, paid his purchase-money, & took possession of the house without any notice of the existence of the mtgee., but the solr. of the mtgee. deposed that, in an interview which he had had before the completion of the purchase with the solr. of the purchaser, he had informed the latter that a client of his was to receive a considerable sum out of the purchase-money, & had requested to have notice of the time when the money was to be paid; &, though the solr. of the purchaser denied that any such interview had taken place, before the completion of the purchase, a jury gave a verdict in favour of the statement made on that point by the solr. of the mtgee.—Held: the mtgee. was not to be postponed to the purchaser.—*MARTINEZ v. 1231. Notice of restrictive covenant—Purchase from purchaser for value without notice.]—The purchaser of land from one who has purchased it for value, without notice, either actual or constructive, of a restrictive covenant, is not bound by the covenant, although he himself had notice of it.

The lessee of premises No. 137, High Street, East Ham, carried on therein the business of a pork butcher. The lease contained a covenant by which he covenanted not to carry on therein any noisy or offensive trade other than that of a pork butcher. He was also lessee under a different landlord of premises No. 170, in the same street, upon which he carried on the business of a general butcher. He sold & assigned to pltf. his interest in the last mentioned premises, & the goodwill of his business as a general butcher, covenanting with pltf. (inter alia) that he, his exors., administrators & assigns, would not "cut, sell or deal in fresh hind-quarter beef, mutton, veal, lamb, or poultry at or upon the premises No. 137, High Street, East Ham, or in connection with the business of a pork butcher now carried on there by his heir for the private debt of the heir & the purchaser has notice before his purchase that there are debts of the ancestor outstanding of which the creditors claim payment out of the land seised, such purchaser takes only the beneficial interest of the heir, subject to the payment of the ancestor's debts.—PECK v. BUCKE (circa 1868), 2 Ch. Ch. 294.—CAN.

r. Notice given by agent.]—Although the rule in equity is that a notice to be binding must be given by a person interested in the property & in the course of the treaty for the purchase, still where notice of an incumbrance was given to an intending purchaser by the son, & while acting on behalf of the incumbrancer in endeavouring to effect a loan upon the security of such incumbrance, the purchaser was held bound by such notice.—MCMANES v. PHILLIPS (1862), 9 Gr. 814.—CAN.

t. Defence of bona fide purchaser—When allowed.]—A purchaser from the heir with notice of the will, but under an erroneous supposition that, according to its true construction, the land was not affected by it, cannot set up, as against claimants under the will, the defence of a purchaser for value without notice.—SMITH v. BONNISTEEL (1867), 13 Gr. 29.—CAN.

a. — —.]—A sale of land was effected subject to a mtgee. created by a former owner.—Held: this circumstance did not preclude the purchaser from setting up the defence of a purchaser for value without notice.—CAMPION v. FAIRBAIRN (1869), 15 Gr. 674.—CAN.

b. — —.]—Although there is considerable difference of opinion on this point, whether a purchaser for value without notice can protect himself when there is a legal right—that is, whether the ct. can give relief to such a purchaser, when it is open to the other party to pursue his legal right—yet, when the purchaser is brought into this ct., he may avail himself of his character of a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice, as a defence, whether his title be a legal or an equitable one; & he is entitled to have the bill against him dismissed with costs, although the next hour the party may be able to turn him out of possession.—BOWEN v. EVANS (1844), 6 I. Eq. R. 569; 1 Jo. & Lat. 178; affd. (1848), 2 H. L. Cas. 257.—IR.

c. — —.]—A purchase for a valuable consideration, without notice, is a defence as well against a legal as an equitable title.—JOYCE v. DE MOLEYNES (1845), 2 Jo. & Lat. 374.—IR.

d. Proof of actual notice—What him." He afterwards gave up business, & surrendered his lease of No. 137 to the landlord; & a new lease thereof was granted to his son by the landlord, which lease contained a covenant that the lessee would not carry on upon the premises any noisy or offensive trade other than, not "that of a pork butcher," as in the old lease, but, "that of a butcher."

At the time when the landlord accepted the surrender, he had not in fact notice of the restrictive covenant entered into by the father with pltf. as regards No. 137, but the son, when the new lease was granted to him, knew of the existence of that covenant. The son afterwards set up the business of a general butcher on the premises No. 137, High Street:—Held: under the circumstances of the case the landlord was not affected with constructive notice of the father's covenant, & consequently could grant to the son a lease free from the restriction of that covenant, & the son therefore could not be restrained at the suit of pltf. from carrying on the business of a general butcher at No. 137.—WILKES v. SPOONER, [1911] 2 K. B. 473; 80 L. J. K. B. 1107; 104 L. T. 911; 27 T. L. R. 426; 55 Sol. Jo. 479, C. A.

1234. — Deed referred to by another.]—

In 1792 J. C. purchased an estate at a sale by auction, but died without having completed the contract. By his will he gave all his real & personal estate to A., his widow, who shortly afterwards married W. S. By deed of 1793 recited the contract by J. C. his death, his will, & A.'s marriage with W. S., who "thereupon became entitled to the beneficial interest in the said purchase," the estate was conveyed to W. S. & L. N. jointly, in fee, in trust as to the estate of L. N. for W. S. By deed of 1817 reciting that by certain good assurances in the law & the premises stood limited to the use of W. S. & L. N. as to the estate of L. N. in trust for W. S. The property was conveyed by W. S. & L. N. to C., a purchaser for value. On bill filed by A.'s heiress-at-law to recover the estate:—Held: as C. was not able to show that W. S. had acquired any other title than that which he took under the deed of 1793, the ct. would not presume that W. S. had in the interval acquired any independent title; & C. was bound by such title as W. S. had & he was therefore affected by notice of A.'s right to the estate, & a reconveyance was decreed on the usual terms.

Wherever you find one deed referred to by another, the person who claims under the deed thus referred to, is bound at his peril to ascertain what all the contents of the deed so referred to are. The case I believe might in point of law be put more strongly in pltf.'s favour; for I take the rule of this ct. to be that every purchaser is presumed to have cognisance of his vendor's title (WIGRAM, V.-C.).—*NEESOM v. 1237. — Original deed lost—Document purporting to be true copy produced—Subsequently proving defective.]—Certain lands were subject to a building scheme, the provisions of which were contained in a deed of 1854. The purchaser of a plot was informed by the vendor in good faith that the original deed was lost or destroyed, & what purported to be a true copy was produced. This copy subsequently proved to be defective.

An action was brought by an adjoining owner to restrain deft. from erecting or allowing to remain upon his land certain buildings which contravened the provision as to a building line. The property in respect of which he was entitled to sue had certain erections upon it contravening another building stipulation, which provided that no erection should be built within 4 ft. of a boundary fence:—Held: deft. was affected with notice of the building stipulations, for there was nothing in this case to take it out of the general rule that notice of a deed is notice of its contents.—HOOPER v. specially referred to, without mentioning its contents, & which deed can be examined before the sale by the purchaser, he is bound by everything contained in that deed. But if the vendor, instead of referring the purchaser to the deed to ascertain its contents, himself states what the contents are, the purchaser is not bound to examine the deed, but may reasonably trust to the representation of it, contained in the particulars of sale, as being a correct statement of its contents.

Redeemed land tax, amounting to £41 per annum, was sold by auction in one lot. The particulars represented £3 14s., part of it, as charged on three houses, but stated that the title consisted of a contract for redemption of the land tax of Mar. 25, 1818. This contract, when produced after the sale, showed that the £3 14s. was not charged on three houses, but consisted of three small sums, each charged separately on one of the houses:—Held: the misdescription was fatal; the reference to the contract did not give the purchaser notice of the actual state of the title.—*COX v. Nothing more took place till Jan. 29, when the vendor's solr. wrote to say that a good title could be made by the concurrence of the beneficiaries which the vendors would procure.—Held: the purchaser was entitled to be relieved from his contract, the concurrence of the beneficiaries not being offered till after the time for completion had expired, & long after the repudiation by the purchaser.—

1280. — Secondary evidence of lost documents.—The mere fact that the title deeds to property sold have been lost or mislaid does not release the purchaser from performance of his contract; but he can be compelled to complete if he is furnished in proper time with satisfactory secondary evidence as to the contents of the lost documents, & as to their having been duly executed & properly stamped.

The vendors of certain lands situate in Yorkshire, after an abstract had been prepared & compared by them with the original title deeds, lost or mislaid the deeds, including the deed which by the conditions of sale was to be treated as the root of the title. The date fixed for completion was Nov. 15, 1897.

On Dec. 1, the purchaser's solrs. insisted that if the deeds were not produced & the title found to be satisfactory & the matter completed before the end of the year, the contract must be considered to be at an end. The deposit, however, was not claimed at the end of the year. The vendors' solrs. proposed to supply the purchaser with satisfactory secondary evidence of the deeds. The effect of the correspondence which then took place was, in the opinion of the ct., to give the vendors still further time from the end of 1897 for producing the deeds. On Dec. 20, the vendor's solrs. sent certain statutory declarations which referred to & verified the abstract of the missing deeds of which the abstract was a full & correct copy. The declarations & abstract did not, however, prove the execution of the deeds. On Feb. 5, 1898, the vendors offered an indemnity which was refused. On Feb. 12, the vendors offered some further statutory declarations by the conveying parties to the various deeds to the effect that they executed the same & exhibiting true copies. But the purchaser strenuously resisted completion in the absence of the deeds. On Mar. 10, the vendors took out a summons asking for a declaration that a good title to the property had been shown; & on Apr. 26, the purchaser took out a summons asking for a declaration to the contrary effect & for the return of his deposit:—Held: the purchaser had a right to say that, the vendors not having shown a good title within a reasonable time, he was not bound to wait longer & was entitled to be discharged from the contract & to have back his deposit; there was nothing in the correspondence or in the conduct of the purchaser to deprive him of that right; & the evidence adduced by the vendors before the purchaser issued his summons was not such as he could be compelled to treat as satisfactory.—Re HALIFAX COMMERCIAL BANKING CO., LTD. & WOOD (1898), 79 L. 1282. Before definite repudiation by purchaser.—A husband gave & bequeathed his real & personal estate to his wife & the vendor upon trust to pay the income to his wife for life & after her decease he directed the whole to be divided amongst his children as his wife should by will direct. The wife survived, & by her will directed her husband's estate to be divided amongst the children so that one child should receive £30 more than the others, but otherwise in equal proportions, & she appointed the vendor her exor. After the wife's death the vendor, who had in fact obtained the verbal consent of the beneficiaries, contracted to sell the real estate as trustee of the husband's will. In her first requisition the purchaser objected that the vendor had no power of sale, declined to accept the title, & asked for the return of her deposit. Her other requisitions dealt with formal points. In reply the vendor

What amounts to waiver.]—On an open contract for the sale of freehold property the vendor supplied an abstract showing a title for twelve years, & alleged that the purchasers had notice at the date of the contract of his inability to give an absolute title; he also set up a waiver by the purchasers of their right to a full forty years' title by a letter written by the purchasers. Part of the property was subject to a restrictive covenant not to carry on any trade or business on the premises. When the purchasers made inquiries as to restrictive covenants, they were informed that such covenants did not affect the user of the property for business purposes:—Held: if it is shown on the signing of a contract that a forty years' title was not able to be given, the purchasers cannot have it, but in this case the purchasers refused to take a shorter title, & the contract being silent on that point, the purchasers were entitled to their full forty years' title. The whole correspondence showed that the purchasers all along insisted on a forty years' title, & the letter referred to could not be held to be a waiver of itself. The restrictive covenants were perfectly good objections to the title, & notice of them had not been received by the purchasers, who were told there were no such restrictive covenants. —Re JUDGE & SHERIDAN'S CONTRACT (1907), 96 L. An estate described as land tax redeemed was sold, subject to certain conditions, amongst which was one, that every deed dated more than ten years ago should be conclusive evidence of everything recited or stated therein. This conveyance recited that by the first mtge. the house & other property were "granted unto & to the use of the mtgee., his heirs & assigns," by way of mtge. "as therein mentioned." The vendor having sold by open contract in 1906, relied on this recital & declined to furnish any title prior to the conveyance of June, 1882. The purchaser, while insisting on her right to a forty years' title, offered to begin with the conveyance of Aug. 1877:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to a title beginning with the conveyance of Aug. 1877.

I can see nothing in Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), s. 2, to relieve the vendor from the duty of abstracting the title prior to the twenty years old deed, or to relieve her from the obligation of furnishing a forty years' title under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), s. 1 (SWINFEN EADY, J.).—Re WALLIS & GROUT'S CONTRACT, [1906] 2 Ch. 206; 75 L. 1319. When recital sufficient—Sale of trust property.]—In 1840 property was mortgaged to W. in fee, there being nothing in the mtge. deed to show that he was not the beneficial owner of the mtge. money. He died in 1842, having by his will devised & bequeathed his real & personal estate to three trustees, of whom his wife was one, on trusts for the benefit of his wife & children, & having appointed the same three persons exors. He also devised & bequeathed his trust & mtge. estates to the same three persons, subject to the trusts & equities affecting the same respectively. The widow alone proved the will, & alone acted as trustee. The other two trustees disclaimed the trusts. In 1854 the widow obtained a decree absolute foreclosing the mtge. In 1865, she, by a deed indorsed on the mtge. deed, conveyed the property, without receiving any pecuniary consideration for it, to K., C., & B., in fee, as joint tenants at law & in equity. The conveyance contained a recital that testator held the mtge. money on an account under which K., C., & B., were then solely entitled thereto as was thereby acknowledged, whereby the widow, as trustee under testator's will, was trustee only of the property for K., C., & B., & they had requested her to convey it to them. On a subsequent sale of the property by persons who had purchased it from K., C., & B., the purchasers required evidence of the truth of the recital in the deed of 1865 that K., C., & B., were entitled to the mtge. money, & assuming that testator was a trustee of the mtge. money, the purchasers required the vendors to show that the property sold was comprised in the trust; that K., C., & B., were duly appointed to succeed testator in the trust; & that they had an effectual power of sale & of giving a receipt for the purchase-money:—Held: it would be contrary to the practice of the ct. to go behind a recital evidently framed for the purpose of keeping bill to enforce specific performance, & produced an affidavit showing that both the trustees had seen the draft of the deed before its execution, & were acquainted with & had consented to its contents:—Held: the due execution of the power had been sufficiently shown, & the purchaser must accept the title.

H., the purchaser, also objected that the vendor did not hand over three of the title deeds, nor offer to covenant to produce them, but the ct. held that, as in this case the deeds in question were only collateral to the title, & as the purchaser had inspected the three deeds, & had been furnished with attested copies of two of them, & had had an undertaking that an attested copy of the third should be produced, he must complete the purchase.—*OFFEN v. 1329. — Deeds relating to other lands of vendor—Lands charged with rentcharge.—(1) If there be a settlement of a rentcharge upon an adult female before marriage, in lieu of dower, a purchaser from the husband of other lands than those charged is not entitled to look into the husband's title deeds to see whether he had a good title to the lands out of which the rentcharge was granted.

(2) It is no objection to a title that two fee farm rents, created by letters patent by James I., are not shown to have been extinguished, it being proved that no claim had been made by the Crown of the rents from the year 1706, & no proof of any previous claim.

(3) No objection to a title that an assignment of a term was executed by one exor. only, though the deed was prepared as an assignment by two exors.; one exor. being competent to assign.—SIMPSON v. GUTTERIDGE (1816), 1 Madd. 609; 56 E. R. 224.

Right of purchaser to insist on stamping—Sale of property subject to tenancy agreement—Agreement not stamped.—Contract to sell a freehold ground rent of £20, arising from a wharf "subject to an agreement for a lease for a term" of years. The agreement mentioned was unstamped. On a bill for specific performance by the purchaser:—Held: the agreement was part of the subject of the contract, & the vendor was bound to perfect it by having it properly stamped.—SMITH v. WYLEY (1852), 16 Jur. 1136.

1345. —[—]—An agreement for the sale of freehold property provided that the property was sold subject to all tenancies, & also for apportionment of outgoing. Upon investigation of the title the purchaser discovered that an agreement with a yearly tenant of part of the property was unstamped, & required the vendor to stamp it before completion of the purchase. The vendor refused, & commenced proceedings for specific performance against the purchaser:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to have the agreement stamped at the vendor's expense.—COLEMAN v. COLEMAN (1898), 79 L. T. 66.

1346. Mortgage deed.—A ten shilling deed stamp on a mtge. deed is insufficient; therefore a purchaser is entitled, on a contract for sale with a mtgor., to require the mtge. deed, where so stamped, to be stamped before completion to the full ad valorem duty at the vendor's expense, notwithstanding that the mtgee. may have consented to join in the conveyance.—WHITING TO LOOMES (1881), 17 Ch. SUB-SECT. 6.—REQUISITIONS ON TITLE.

1348. Delivery of new abstract—Further requisitions may be made.—If exceptions taken to the report of a good title are overruled, other objections to the title cannot be made; but if exceptions are allowed, & a new abstract of title is delivered, further objections may be brought in.—BROOKE v. — (1819), 4 Madd. 212; 56 E. R. 684.

1349. Subjects of requisitions.—Objections to title mean such objections as can only be properly the subject of adjudication upon the investigation of the title; & such are cases where the dispute is as to the application of the conditions of sale, the propriety or validity of the conditions themselves not being questioned.—WOOD v. MACHU (1846), 5 Hare, 158; 16 L. J. Ch. 21; 8 L. T. O. S. 210; 10 Jur. 1001; 67 E. R. 868.

1350. Whether vendor bound to answer—Requisition as to dower.—Upon a proper requisition as to dower, the purchaser has a right to know, if the vendor is in a condition to inform him thereof, the actual state of the title; & is not bound to rest satisfied by being told that, if the liability to dower does exist, he may protect himself by means of a term of years.—*MAJOR v. 1354. Time for compliance with requisitions—Reasonable time allowed.]—When a requisition is made by a purchaser, the vendor must be allowed a reasonable time to comply with it. Thus, a requisition was made at the end of June, which involved the necessity of instituting a suit & obtaining a decree. On Aug. 1, the vendors consented to comply with the requisition, & they obtained a decree in Michaelmas term following; but on Aug. 9 the purchaser gave notice to rescind the contract:—Held: it was ineffectual.—MICHOLLS v. CORBETT (1865), 34 Beav. 376; 55 E. R. 680; on appeal, 3 De G. J. & Sm. 18, L. J. J.

1355. Sufficiency of answer to requisition.]—Upon an open contract for the sale of a lease of a house the vendor, in answer to a requisition by the purchaser as to the performance of repairing covenants in the lease, produced a receipt of rent down to a year previously, but could not produce the last receipt, the lessor having refused to receive his rent on the ground of alleged breaches of covenant. The lessor had commenced an action of ejectment on the same ground against the vendor, but the action had been stayed on account of pltf. having failed to comply with an order for delivery of particulars of claim. The vendor deposed that to the best of his knowledge & belief the whole of the covenants in the lease had been duly performed, & proved the execution of various specific repairs, & the purchaser, though he had had an opportunity given him of inspecting the premises, offered no evidence to show that anything was wanting to the complete performance of the covenants:—Held: notwithstanding the failure to produce the receipt for rent, there was such prima facie evidence of the performance of the covenants as to constitute a sufficient answer to the requisition in that behalf.—RINGER TO THOMPSON (1881), 51 L. J. Ch. 42; 45 L. T. 580.

over the land, or to procure a transfer from the registered proprietor to the purchaser.

Land held under a lease of ninety-nine years was sub-demised, by way of mtge., for the residue of the term less the last day. The mtge. contained no express power of sale, but a provision that on a sale by the mtgee. under the statutory power the mtgor. should stand possessed of the last day in trust for the purchaser. Subsequently a purchaser from the mtgor. was registered under Land Transfer Act, 1897 (c. 65), as the first proprietor, with possessory title. The mtge., having been transferred, the transferee's exor. contracted under the statutory power of sale to sell. To a requisition by the purchaser that the vendor must get himself put on the register as the registered proprietor, the vendor replied that he would not, as he was not selling a registered title:—Held: the requisition had been sufficiently answered.—Re VOSS & SAUNDERS' CONTRACT, [1911] 1 Ch. 42; 80 L. 1357. Whether purchaser bound to search—Land register.]—(1) A purchaser of lands, in a register county, is not bound to search the register.

(2) Search of the register up to a particular date, will not operate as notice of incumbrances registered at an earlier date.

(3) Search of a register, admitted or proved generally, fixes a party with notice of all the contents of the register.—HODGSON v. DEAN (1825), 2 Sim. & St. 221; 3 L. J. O. S. Ch. 95; 57 E. R. 330.

1366. Sale of copyholds—Search of court rolls.—An equitable mtgce. may be created of copyholds, by the mere deposit of the copy of ct. roll. It is therefore not sufficient for the protection of a purchaser or mtgee. of copyholds, that he should search the ct. rolls for incumbrances; he ought to require the vendor or mtgor. to produce an abstract of his title & the copy of his admission to the copyhold premises; & if the latter document is not forthcoming, its non-production must be reasonably accounted for.

Where the creditor of a publican in London took from the latter a legal mtgce. of copyhold premises as a security for an antecedent debt, & at the time of taking this security, knew that the publican was indebted to his brewers, & likewise was aware of the ordinary practice in London of publicans depositing their leases with their brewers by way of mtgce.:—Held: the creditor had such notice of the transactions between his debtor & the brewers, as would have put a prudent man on further inquiry; & having omitted to make such further inquiry, the equitable security of the brewers had priority over his legal security.—*WHITBREAD v. C. Lis pendens.

1373. Foundation of doctrine.—The doctrine as to the effect of lis pendens on the title of an alienee is not founded on any principles of eqts. of equity with regard to notice, but on the ground that it is necessary to the administration of justice that the decision of the ct. in a suit should be binding, not only on the litigant parties, but on those who derive title from them pendente lite, whether with notice of the suit or not.

A person who, without notice of a suit, purchases from one of defts. property which is the subject of it, is not in consequence of the pendency of the suit affected by an equitable title of another deft., which appears on the face of the proceedings, but of which he has no notice & to which it is not necessary for any of the purposes of the suit to give effect.

F. the heir at law of E. filed a bill against J. & S. to impeach two agreements, one of which was for the sale of a life-estate by J. to E., & by the other of which E. had agreed to sell to S. the entire fee-simple, which accordingly was conveyed to S. by J. & E. After the institution of the suit S. mortgaged to B. & G. The bill was dismissed as to the first agreement, but the second was set aside & a decree made for a reconveyance by S. to F. on the terms of F. making certain payments to S. It was afterwards decided in another suit on the state of facts which appeared in the first suit, that J. was entitled to a lien on the estate as against F. & S. for moneys payable under the first agreement:—Held: B. & G. not having when they took their mtge. any notice of the first suit, or of the circumstances on which J. B.'s claim was founded, were not affected on the ground of the pendency of the first suit by the claim of J.; though, owing to the pendency of that suit, they were entitled as against F. to no more than S. was entitled to.

The doctrine of lis pendens is not, as I conceive, founded upon any of the peculiar tenets of a ct. of equity as to implied or constructive notice. It is, as I think, a doctrine common to the cts. both of law & of equity, & rests, as I apprehend, upon this foundation, that it would plainly be impossible that any action or suit could be brought to a successful termination, if alienations pendente lite were permitted to prevail (TURNER, L.J.).—BELLAMY v. SABINE (1857), 1 De G. & J. 566; 26 L. J. Ch. 797; 30 L. T. O. S. 68; 3 Jur. N. S. 943; 44 E. R. 842, L. C. & L. J.

1374. What is lis pendens—Decree not carried into effect.—After a decree has been pronounced for an account, & a reference made to see what proportion of an incumbrance two estates shall respectively bear, & the master has made his report, which has been confirmed, & nothing remains but to carry the decree into effect, such a state of things is not to be considered as lis pendens; & a purchaser not bound to notice it as such.—KINSMAN v. KINSMAN (1831), 1 Russ. & M. 617; 9 L. J. O. S. Ch. 276; 39 E. R. 236, L. C.

1375. — Creditor's action for administration.—Where debts are charged upon testator's real estate by his will or as judgment debts under the old law an action by a creditor for the administration of the real & personal estate is a lis pendens which, when registered, gives plff. priority over a purchaser or mtgee. from any deft. entitled to real estate under the will except where deft. is in such a position that the purchaser or mtgee. has a right to suppose he is selling or mortgaging for the purpose of paying testator's debts.—PRICE v. PRICE (1887), 35 Ch. D. 297; 56 L. J. Ch. 530; 56 L. T. 842; 35 W. R. 386; 3 T. L. R. 453.

1396. Vendor claiming as heir—Effect of judgment against purchaser as tenant.]—(1) If B. claiming as co-heir with C. establish his right by a verdict against T., the actual tenant under C., & afterwards contracts to sell his moiety to T. the verdict is not conclusive as to the title upon T. as purchaser, but T. may still insist on an objection, which says, that neither B. nor C. is proved to be entitled to the premises as heir.

1397. Vendor claiming through descent recited in deeds—Must produce extrinsic evidence of recitals or possession.]—A conveyance to a purchaser in 1793, from persons residing in Bermuda, of lands then in their possession, & to which, subject to an outstanding but satisfied mtge. term, they claimed title under an entail created in 1732, through a descent recited in the deeds, a subsequent assignment of the mtge. term from the mtgee. to the purchaser, & uninterrupted enjoyment under his conveyance, will not enable him to make a good title; if unsupported by extrinsic evidence of the pedigree recited in the deeds, or of possession, prior to 1793, conformable to that pedigree.—*FORT v. 1398. Title depending on surrender of lease—Necessity for proof of vendor's title to lease surrendered.]—On the sale of leaseholds for lives, held under a lease granted in 1815, by an eleemosynary corp., it appeared that the lease stated that it was granted in consideration of the surrender of a former lease granted to two persons in 1769, & which was also stated to be then legally vested in the grantee of the lease of 1815:—Held: the vendors were not only bound to produce the lease of 1769, but also to show that that lease, at the time of the surrender, absolutely belonged to the grantee of the lease of 1815.—HODGKINSON v. COOPER (1846), 9 Beav. 304; 15 L. J. Ch. 160; 6 L. T. O. S. 451; 10 Jur. 39; 50 E. R. 361.

1404. Agreement for lease—Draft signed by lessee not sufficient—Though coupled with possession.—A vendor stipulated that he would show title under an agreement for a lease. It appeared that there was no agreement signed by the lessor & lessee, but a draft or paper, signed only by the lessee, & which document came out of the lessee's possession, was produced. He, the lessee & vendor, alleged that he had taken possession under this alleged agreement:—Held: this was not sufficient. The purchaser could not be compelled to take an equitable title under the alleged agreement, coupled with possession, but was entitled to strict evidence that such an agreement had been entered into.—HOUGHTON v. BANKART (1861), 5 L. T. 307.

1405. Default by mortgagor—Declaration of 1412. Not proof of equitable title—Recital in voluntary conveyance by administratrix—As against heir-at-law.]—The principle compelling a purchaser to accept as correct a recital in a conveyance forming part of the vendor's title that the grantee has become entitled in equity to the property being conveyed rests upon the grantor being the person who on the face of the abstract was the legal & beneficial owner of the property so that the recital operated as an admission binding on him.

When therefore an abstract of title traced the absolute legal & beneficial interest in the property being sold into C. & after his death his administratrix purported voluntarily to convey the property to G. by a deed containing a recital that A., a predecessor in title of the vendor, had become entitled in equity to the property:—Held: (1) the purchaser was entitled to go behind the recital & require it to be shown how A. had become entitled in equity, for the administratrix could not by her admission bind C.'s heir-at-law, on whom, upon the face of the abstract, the beneficial interest in the property had devolved; (2) the absence from the abstract of any record of how A. had become entitled in equity did not constitute a defect in title but merely a gap in the abstract, & the purchaser was not entitled to rescind the contract without giving the vendor a reasonable time to supply a complete abstract of title. —*Re BALEN & SHEPHERD'S CONTRACT, [1924] 2 Ch. 365; 94 L. SUB-SECT. 9.—ACCEPTANCE OF TITLE BY PURCHASER.

A. In General.

1413. Acceptance induced by misrepresentations—Not binding on purchaser.]—Consent to accept a title given under the influence of representations made on the part of the vendor, which turn out to be inaccurate, will not bind a purchaser.

If a purchaser, entitled by his agreement to possession, exercises acts of ownership, under the persuasion that the title is perfect, & that nothing will intervene to prevent the completion of the agreement, he is not thereby precluded from having a reference on the question of title, as to objections not appearing on any abstract delivered to him prior to the exercise of the acts of ownership. —JOHNS v. CLAUGHTON (1824), 2 L. J. O. S. Ch 113.

1414. Acceptance subject to single objection—Whether waiver of right to object generally.]—Upon a bill filed by the vendor for the specific performance of a contract, it appeared that deft., in the course of correspondence between the solrs. & upon a case stated on his part for the opinion of counsel expressed himself willing to accept the title if a particular objection then referred to were removed. That objection not being removed, the bill was filed, & the ct. ruled that the reference to the master as to the title must be in general terms, & not confined to the particular objection. —LESTURGEON v. MARTIN (1834), 3 My. & K. 255; 40 E. R. 97.

1415. Acceptance by joint purchaser—Not binding on co-purchaser.]—A bill was filed for the specific performance of a contract, by one of two joint purchasers, against the other purchaser & the vendor. An objection taken by deft., the vendor, on the ground of multifariousness, & that pltf. could not support his bill, unless the joint purchaser joined him as a co-pltf. therein, was overruled. Scmble: the acceptance of a title by a joint purchaser, is no answer to the right of the other purchaser to have a good title proved. —MACKRETH v. DUNN (1841), 10 L. J. Ch. 367, L. C.

1416. Right to object after acceptance—Sale of leaseholds—Restriction not included in lease—Subsequent attempted enforcement.]—Leaseholds were sold under the ct., described as "a bonded sugar refinery," & the lease was referred to, which contained no such restriction.

The abstract showed a prior agreement for the lease of the premises to be used "for refining sugar in bond." The purchaser accepted the title, paid his purchase-money into ct., & was let into possession. The lessors afterwards instituted a suit to rectify the lease, by introducing the restriction. The ct. refused to compel the final completion of the purchase, or part with the purchase-money, until the result of the suit was known. —BENTLEY v. CRAVEN (1853), 17 Beav. 204; 21 L. T. O. 1421. Preparation of conveyance.—A purchaser was held entitled to an investigation of the vendor's title, notwithstanding possession taken, acts of ownership incident to possession, & preparation of a conveyance.

The preparation of the conveyance in this case is an important fact, as amounting to evidence that the parties had arrived at a stage of proceeding subsequent to the question of title, & must be supposed, therefore, to have removed or abandoned all objections. But I cannot satisfy myself that that fact alone, in the circumstances of this case, is sufficient to exclude the common equity (PLUMER, M.R.).—BURROUGHS v. OAKLEY (1819), 3 Swan. 159; 36 E. By a subsequent agreement, B. agreed to pay for an abstract when required by him. B. took possession of the property, & kept it for two years, during which time he did not require an abstract of title. B. having suffered the interest on the mtge. money to get into arrear, A. had to pay some interest to the mtgees., & the mtgees. had entered into possession of the property. S. all deeds, etc., which he might require to carry on, & that might be necessary for him to take to, the whole of his business as a common brewer, & to sign & hand over all the necessary leases, etc., that might enable J. S. to have & possess the whole & sole control over the freehold, leasehold & copyhold property of which pltf. was possessed or interested in, or about to become interested in, save the right of sale of his freehold property. Pltf. was to use his best endeavours to secure to J. S. the whole of his trade, on the understanding that J. If the brewhouse, etc., & utensils should not fetch £900, & if the brewhouse, etc., should not be sold within six months, J. S. agreed to pay interest at 4 per cent., on the sum of £550, being the value of that property without the utensils. The document contained (inter alia) a stipulation empowering J. S., who subsequently took possession of some part of the property comprised in the agreement, including the brewery, & received the rents of other parts of the property, & was introduced to pltf.'s customers, etc. J. S. also took possession of some of the utensils & casks, & others were sold, both by him & pltf. on J. S.'s behalf. J. S. died in Feb. 1858, having bequeathed all his estate to deff., who refused to complete the purchase of the brewhouse & utensils. But, on bill for specific performance:—Held: (1) according to the true construction of the agreement, deff. was the purchaser of the brewhouse & utensils at the price of £900; she, upon £550, part thereof, must pay interest at 4 per cent., from the end of six months from July 26, 1857; & she must account for & pay £350, for the utensils, without interest to the date of the decree; & ordered a general account to be taken; (2) the right to an investigation of the title of the brewery had been waived by the purchaser.

Then as to the question of title, I think that is a case to which, by the acts & conduct of the purchaser, the right to an investigation of the title is entirely waived. The deed, however, did not contain any provision exonerating a purchaser from inquiring whether default had been made in payment of principal or interest nor as to whether anything was owing on the security. 1483. ——— Extent of trusteeship.]—An estate which testator had contracted to sell, held to pass by a devise of all his real & personal estate to trustees, in trust to sell.

The contract to sell is a disposition of the estate, & by it the vendor parts with his right & dominion over it. It is in equity no longer his. He is considered constructively to be a trustee of the estate for the purchaser, & the latter as a trustee of the purchase-money for him. . . . The vendor, therefore, is not a mere trustee: he is in progress towards it, & finally becomes such when the money is paid, & when he is bound to convey. In the meantime . . . he retains for certain purposes his old dominion over the estate (PLUMER, M.R.).—WALL v. BRIGHT (1820), 1 Jac. & W. 494; 37 E. R. 456.

1491. ——— Conditional on performance of contract.]—In June, 1901, the purchaser, under a contract for the sale of land, which was to be completed on Sept. 29, paid a deposit & was let into possession. The purchaser did not complete at the time appointed, & litigation ensued between him & the vendor. In Aug. 1902, a judgment creditor of the purchaser obtained an order appointing himself, upon giving security, receiver of the rents, etc., receivable in respect of the purchaser's interest in the land under the contract for sale. Notice of this order was at once served on the vendor, & the order was registered under Land Charges Registration & Searches Act, 1888 (c. 51), & Land Charges Act, 1900 (c. 26), but the creditor did not perfect his security as receiver until May, 1903. Meanwhile, in Jan. 1903, the litigation between the purchaser & the vendor was compromised, a consent order being made for the rescission of the contract of sale & the delivery up of possession of the property by the purchaser on payment of £110 to him by the vendor. In May, 1903, the judgment creditor commenced an action against the vendor claiming a declaration that by virtue of the receivership order he was entitled to a lien or charge on the property for securing payment of the judgment debt & costs, with interest, & claiming also payment of the judgment debt & costs by debt.:—Held: (1) the £110 was not paid to the purchaser as the price of any interest which he had in the land, but on the basis that he had no interest, & only for the purpose of getting him out of possession; (2) the judgment creditor had no claim against the vendor, & the action must be dismissed.—RIDOUT v. 1496. ———.]—On a bill filed for specific performance of an alleged contract for sale of premises by debts. to pltf., debts. contended that they never entered into the contract alleged. Upon the evidence before the ct. upon a motion for an injunction to restrain debts. from selling the property except to pltf., their lordships, even assuming that pltf. would succeed in his suit, were governed by the consideration that the inconvenience of granting the injunction would be far greater than that of withholding it; & therefore dissolved the injunction which had been granted.

So long as the contract is an undisputed contract the whole of the property is in equity transferred from the vendor to the purchaser; the vendor then becomes a trustee for the purchaser & the trustee cannot be permitted to deal with the legal estate so as to inconvenience the purchaser. . . . In a case where there is an undisputed & clear contract, there the ct. will undoubtedly interfere in restraining the vendor from transferring the legal estate to a third person (TURNER, L.J.).—HADLEY v. Sect. 1.—Rights and liabilities with respect to the property: Sub-sect. 1, B. (a).]

1497. —[F. entered into a contract with P. to sell him some leasehold property. P. paid part of the purchase-money, & obtained from F. a lease of the premises for a short term of years, in favour of a nominee of P. P. had dealings with bankers, to whom he became much indebted. Being called on to give the bankers some security, he handed to them the title deeds of a freehold estate, which he charged with the debt, & at the same time he deposited with them his contract for the purchase of the leasehold property. He accompanied this deposit with a written memorandum in which he agreed to make to the bankers "a valid assignment of my contract with F. for the purchase of" the leasehold premises, "by way of mtge. for further securing," etc. The bankers, by their solrs., some time afterwards gave to F. notice, in the above words, of this agreement, & the solr.'s letter called it "a charge by P. on his purchase." F. acknowledged the receipt of this notice. He heard nothing more of the matter. P. did not complete his purchase at the stipulated time, but did so afterwards, & then F., according to the terms of the original contract, executed to him a conveyance of the leasehold premises, without any notice being taken in the conveyance of the claims of the bankers:—Held: the rule of equity, that a vendor of an estate is, after the making of the contract of sale, a trustee for the purchaser, did not apply to this case, & F. was in no way liable to the bankers.

There cannot be the slightest doubt of the relation subsisting in the eye of a ct. of equity between the vendor & purchaser. The vendor was a trustee of the property for the purchaser; the purchaser was the real beneficial owner in the eye of a ct. of equity of the property, subject only to this observation, that the vendor, whom I have called the trustee, was not a mere dormant trustee, he was a trustee having a personal & substantial interest in the property, a right to protect that interest, & an active right to assert that interest if anything should be done in derogation of it. The relation, therefore, of trustee & cestui que trust subsisted, but subsisted subject to the paramount right of the vendor & trustee to protect his own interest as vendor of the property (LORD CAIRNS).

P., the purchaser, being the real & beneficial owner . . . there cannot be any doubt of the rights of P. with regard to the property of which he had thus become beneficial owner. He had a right to devise it; he had a right to alienate it, he had a right to charge it (LORD CAIRNS).

The moment that a contract for sale & purchase is entered into & the relation of vendor & vendee is constituted, the vendor becomes a constructive trustee for the vendee. It is but a constructive trust (LORD HATHERLEY, C.).—SHAW v. FOSTER (1872), L. R. 5 H. L. 321; 42 L. J. Ch. 49; 27 L. T. 281; 20 W. R. 907, H. L.

1512. Right to injunction against vendor—In relation to user of property.—A contract having been entered into for the purchase of land, it is not competent to the purchaser, before the title has been accepted, to obtain an injunction restraining the vendor from using or continuing to use the external wall of the building, the subject of the contract, as a party-wall, or from encroaching on the land, or from building so as to obstruct the light or air coming to the premises contracted to be purchased.—HEATH v. MAYDEW (1864), 11 L. T. 473; 13 W. R. 199.

SUB-SECT. 2.—POSSESSION.

A. In General.

1515. When right to possession accrues to purchaser.—From time of payment of purchase-money.—ACLAND v. CUMING, No. 1612, post.

1516. — Where special agreement.—Agreement for the sale of a lease, “with possession on Dec. 1, the rent to commence at Christmas.” Possession was not given until Jan. 31, through the default of the vendor:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to compensation, & an inquiry was directed.—GEDYE v. MONTROSE (DUKE) (1858), 26 Beav. 45; 53 E. R. 813.

1517. Implied agreement by vendor to give possession within reasonable time.—When a person employs a house agent to sell the lease of a house of which he is in occupation, & nothing is said about going out of possession, there is an implied promise to do so within a reasonable time.—NOSOTTI v. AUERBACH (1899), 15 T. L. R. 140, C. A.

1518. Possession of vendor as security for purchase-money.—The moment you have a valid contract for sale the vendor becomes in equity a trustee for the purchaser of the estate sold, & the beneficial ownership passes to the purchaser, the vendor having a right to the purchase-money, a charge or lien on the estate for the security of that purchase-money, & a right to retain possession of the estate until the purchase-money is paid, in the absence of express contract as to the time of delivering possession. In other words, the position of the vendor is something between what has been called a naked or bare trustee, or a mere trustee, that is, a person without beneficial interest, & a mtgee. who is not, in equity, any more than a vendor, the owner of the estate, but is, in certain events, entitled to what the unpaid vendor is, viz. possession of the estate & a charge upon the estate for his purchase-money. Their positions are analogous in another way. The unpaid mtgee. has a right to foreclose, that is to say, he has a right to say to the mtgor., “Either pay me within a limited time, or you lose your estate,” & in default of payment he becomes absolute owner of it. So, although there has been a valid contract of sale, the vendor has a similar right in a ct. of equity; he has a right to say to the purchaser, “Either pay me the purchase-money, or lose the estate.” Such a decree has sometimes been called a decree for cancellation of the contract; time is given by a decree of the ct. of equity, or now by a judgment of the High Ct. of Justice; & if the time expires without the money being paid, the contract is cancelled by the decree or judgment of the ct. & the vendor becomes again the owner of the estate (JESSEL, M.R.).—LYSAGHT v. EDWARDS (1876), 2 Ch. D. 499; 45 L. J. Ch. 554; 34 L. T. 787; 24 W. R. 778.

B. Possession Taken before Payment of Purchase-Money.

1519. Order for delivery up or payment of purchase-money into court.—The co. have taken possession as purchasers, & the whole question is, whether they have or not accepted the title. The ordinary course is to direct, either that the purchase-money be paid into ct., or that the possession be given up. The vendor by filing this bill has elected his ct.; & in a case of specific performance he can require nothing more than that the purchase-money should be secured (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—HYDE v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1839), 1 Ry. & Can. Cas. 277, L. C.

1520. ——The ordinary rule is where possession has been taken by a purchaser, & he is in possession, not to permit him to retain possession soil, & when wrongfully severed it becomes a chattel; & debts, the vendee of the land & others, who had at first removed it into the highway, & afterwards took it away, were held liable in trespass for taking the goods of plff., the owner of the soil.—*GASCO v. 1533. — *Duty to take care of property—Consistent with prudent ownership.]—*The title appearing on the abstract not being satisfactory, & the purchaser for that reason not having taken possession, the vendor to account for the rents received, or which without his wilful default might have been received. Specific performance decreed without costs, the abstract delivered not containing a satisfactory title.

Consider the situation of the purchaser: the objections to the title not being removed, it would not be safe for him to enter into possession, as that would be a waiver of the objections. . . .

. . . The care of the estate must of necessity be left to the vendor; he becomes a trustee for the purchaser, & what hardship is there in expecting him to take the same care of it as he would if it were his own? He must take the measures that are adopted by every prudent landlord. If ultimately the estate is determined to continue his own, he retains the rents; if not, he hands them over to the vendee (PLUMER, M.R.).—WILSON v. CLAPHAM (1819), 1 Jac. & W. 36; 37 E. R. 289.

(2) A dispute arose between the trustees for a deceased vendor & a purchaser, the purchaser claiming to be entitled under his agreement to an additional piece of land. The trustees filed a bill & obtained a decree for specific performance, excluding the additional piece of land. The trustees had not allowed the purchaser to take possession of the rest of the land whilst the purchase-money remained unpaid, & in the meantime the rest of the land was allowed to lie waste:—Held: the purchaser must be allowed to set off against the interest payable by him the amount of rent which might have been received & the amount of deterioration.—*PHILLIPS v. While a vendor so remained in possession, a trespasser without his authority or knowledge removed large quantities of surface soil from the property. A conveyance of the land was subsequently executed, & completion took place, neither party being then aware of the removal of soil:—Held: notwithstanding the conveyance, the purchaser could maintain an action against the vendor for a breach of trust in taking no care to prevent such removal of the soil.—CLARKE v. RAMUZ, [1891] 2 Q. B. 456; 60 L. J. Q. B. 679; 65 L. T. 657; 56 J. P. 5; 7 T. L. R. 626, C. A.

1537. — —.—By a building agreement deft. agreed to erect certain buildings, & carry out certain works, on pltf.'s land within a specified time, & "forthwith to proceed" with & complete the works, when a lease for ninety-nine years was to be granted; the agreement provided that if deft. did not perform the several stipulations therein contained, pltf. might by notice in writing determine the agreement & re-enter; it also contained an option to deft. to purchase the freehold. Pltf. being dissatisfied with the slow progress made by deft., gave him notice to determine the agreement; but deft. having previously given notice to pltf. of his intention to exercise the option to purchase, declined to give up possession. On an action by pltf. to restrain deft. from trespassing on or interfering with pltf.'s possession of the land:—Held: (1) on the evidence, deft. had made default in not "forthwith proceeding" to carry out the stipulations of the agreement; but as there was no condition precedent that deft. should not have committed any breach of the conditions contained in the building agreement, the option to purchase was well exercised, & a binding contract was thereby made for the sale & purchase of the property: (2) the determination of the leasing part of the building agreement by the notice given to deft. for breach of its conditions, did not destroy or affect the contract for sale created by the exercise of the option to purchase; & pltf.'s action must therefore be dismissed.

(3) The rights & position of a purchaser in the interval between the commencement of the contract & the completion of the purchase discussed.

As between vendor & purchaser of a property which at the date of the contract is in occupation of a tenant, the purchaser is generally speaking entitled to have the property preserved pending completion in its existing state, & the vendor would not only not be entitled as against the purchaser's desire to determine the tenancy, but if he did determine it he would be liable to the purchaser for any loss thereby accruing (ROMER, J.).—*RAFFETY v. They are bound to maintain the premises on the footing that they are trustees of the property, though not in the fullest sense, for the purchaser; & as they are trustees with that obligation to maintain, it seems to me that, where they have had to pay money out of their own pocket which is entirely unremunerative to them, they have a claim against the purchaser in respect of money so expended (KEKEWICH, J.).—*BOLTON PARTNERS v. 1546. Repairing covenant—Incident to reversion—Right of purchaser to benefit of.—A dwelling-house was put up for auction on Mar. 2, 1887.

The particulars announced the sale as “with possession” & stated that the purchaser could take the late tenant's fixtures at a valuation if he desired. The conditions provided that the purchase should be completed on Mar. 25. There was no mention, except as above, in the particulars & conditions of any tenancy. B. purchased the house at the auction. It was in evidence that the auctioneer stated at the auction that the house was not in good decorative repair. It appeared from the abstract delivered to the purchaser that the house had been let upon a lease, which had been determined by notice expiring on Mar. 25, 1887, & which contained covenants by the lessee to keep & deliver up the premises in good repair. On Jan. 20, 1887, a receiving order in bkpy. had been made against the lessee, & an arrangement had afterwards been come to giving the vendor power to take immediate possession. The vendor had carried in a proof in the lessee's bkpy. for damages for breach of the repairing covenants. The purchaser delivered a requisition claiming to be entitled to any sum recovered by the vendor from the lessee in respect of his breach of covenant to repair:—Held: the purchaser having in the meantime gone into possession of & improved the property, afterwards applied to be relieved from the purchase, & to have the improvements paid for out of the estate, alleging his inability to carry out the bargain. The ct. relieved him from the purchase but refused to make him any allowance in consideration of his improvements, or return to him the money he had paid.—Re YAGGIE (1858), 1 Ch. Ch. 52.—CAN.

1547. —[—]—On July 8, 1919, the purchaser bought a freehold house at a sale by auction from the vendor. In the particulars of sale it was stated that the property was "let on lease expiring Sept. 29, 1919, at a rent of £500 per annum, & to be sold with possession on completion of the purchase." The conditions of sale, condition 3, provided that the purchase should be completed on Sept. 29, 1919. Condition 4 was as follows: "Possession or receipt of the rents & profits will be retained, & all outgoing discharged by the vendor up to Sept. 29 next, & as from that day the outgoing, including any rates made but not demanded till after that day, shall be discharged by, & possession shall belong to the purchaser, & the outgoing shall, if necessary, be apportioned for the purpose of this condition, but the purchaser shall not be let into actual possession of the property until the completion of the purchase." At the date of the contract the property was in a bad state of repair, & the lessee was bound under his lease to make good the repairs. In the interval between the contract & completion, namely, about Aug. 28, 1919, the amount payable by the lessee was arranged between the vendor & lessee at £2,000 & that amount was paid into a joint account, the rights of the vendor & purchaser thereto being reserved. The purchase was completed in the afternoon of Sept. 29, 1919. On a summons taken out by the purchaser under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), asking for a declaration that he was entitled to moneys payable at or at any time after the date of the contract of July 8, 1919, by the lessee of the property sold, as compensation for breaches of the repairing or other covenants by the lessee:—Held: what was sold was not the house subject to & with the benefit of the lease which was existing at the date of the contract, but the house with possession, altogether apart from & independent of the lease, the obligations & rights under which were only a matter between the vendor & the lessee, & the purchaser was therefore not entitled to the sums paid by the lessee as compensation for his breaches of covenant.—Re LYNE-STEPHENS & SCOTT-MILLER'S CONTRACT, [1920] 1 Ch. 472; 123 L. 1548. Cost of compliance with dangerous structure notice—Vendor under covenant to repair.—A purchaser on July 1, 1901, entered into an open contract with a vendor for the purchase of a leasehold house, the lease of which contained a covenant by the lessee to keep in good repair. At the date of the contract the purchaser was aware that the lease contained such a covenant, he was also aware from previous inspection that the house was, as the vendor in fact admitted, in bad repair, & on that account the vendor agreed to accept a reduced price. The ct. held that Nov. 6 was the date fixing the rights & liabilities of the parties under the contract. On Sept. 27, the vendor was served with a "dangerous structure" notice from the London County Council under London Building Acts, 1894 & 1898, requiring him to pull down or render secure a part of the house. The notice not being complied with, a police ct. order was made on Nov. 1 requiring him to do the repairs within fourteen days from service of the order, but he was not served with it till Nov. 9. On Oct. 24 the vendor paid the Michaelmas rent due under his lease, & he produced the receipt for it to the purchaser.

Upon a summons taken out by the vendor under the Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), for a declaration that he had made a good title & that the expenses of complying with the police ct. order should be borne by the purchaser:—Held: apart from the question as to the date at which the requirements of the "dangerous structure" notice & the subsequent police ct. order had ripened into an obligation, as to which the ct. expressed no opinion, the purchaser had proved a breach of the vendor's covenant to repair, & therefore Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 3 (4), which requires a purchaser of leaseholds, on production of the receipt for the last payment due for rent, to assume, "unless the contrary appear," that all the covenants of the lease have been performed, did not apply, since the contrary did appear; & the vendor's obligation to make a good title was not removed by the knowledge of the purchaser at the date of the contract that the title was bad by reason of the breach of covenant; & accordingly the expense of complying with the police ct. order must be borne by the vendor.—Re HIGGETT & BIRD'S CONTRACT, [1903] 1 Ch. 287; 72 L. If, between the contract & conveyance, a loss arises by accident, which brings with it legal obligation, which must be immediately satisfied, the expense incurred by the vendors is payable by the purchaser.

After the confirmation of the report a part of the premises fell down & damaged the neighbouring property, the owner of which threatened to bring an action, & the remainder was ruinous & dangerous to the public. The vendor having reinstated & repaired the premises, the ct. held that the purchaser was bound to indemnify him, & on petition ordered a reference to ascertain the expenses properly incurred.—*ROBERTSON v. (3) Before paying the purchase-money for a piece of land, & after having expended a large sum in building upon it, the purchaser became insolvent, & entered into an agreement with the vendor for the rescission of the contract, & the vendor resumed possession of the property; but before he did so the purchaser committed an act of bkpcy. by absconding. Amongst the buildings erected by the purchaser were some stables on a vast scale, & quite unsuited to the kind of house that any prudent man would build on the property. The vendor on resuming possession pulled down these stables. The purchaser's assignees in bkpcy. filed a bill against the vendor for specific performance of the original contract for sale, & by the vendor's consent a decree was made for specific performance, & an inquiry was directed as to the damages sustained by plffs. by reason of certain acts of defts. complained of in the bill:—Held: as the demolition of the stables did not diminish the selling value of the property, deft. was not liable to pay damages in respect of such demolition.—*KREHL v. 1562. Duty of vendor to prevent deterioration.—Two houses stated in the particulars to have been "recently in the possession of F.," were put up by plffs., mtgees. from F., for sale by auction, & were bought by deft. A day was fixed for completion of the purchase, when rents or possession were to belong to the purchaser. At that day F. was still in possession, & remained so until he was turned out by the sheriff, more than a month after. The purchaser had agreed to let the houses to a tenant as from a day five days later than the day fixed for completion, but the tenant, finding that he could not have immediate possession, had refused to take the houses, which had remained unoccupied, & had also been damaged by the removal of some fixtures & otherwise. The vendors brought an action for specific performance simply. Deft. counterclaimed for specific performance with compensation:—Held: (1) the purchaser was entitled to damages in the nature of compensation for loss of a tenant, & the damages would be the amount of rent lost; (2) the purchaser was entitled to damages for the deterioration of the property.

When loss falls on purchaser—Act of purchaser.]—(1) A vendee, before a conveyance, having agreed with a tenant, that if he had a conveyance by a given time, the tenant should quit at that period, & the tenant misconstruing the agreement, quitted before a conveyance was made, so that the land was untenanted & deteriorated, the loss held to fall upon the vendee, it being occasioned by his agreement with the tenant.

If after the contract the estate be improved in the interval, or if the value be lessened by the failure of tenants, or otherwise, & no fault on either side, the vendee has the benefit, or sustains the loss. If there is a loss by fire after the contract, & before the completion of it, if neither party is in fault, the loss falls upon the vendee (PLUMER, V.-C.).

1571. — — Completion delayed.]—The completion of a contract having been delayed for thirteen years, the property became deteriorated by dilapidations:—Held: under the circumstances the loss must fall on the purchaser, as the state of the title was such, that he ought to have completed his purchase & taken possession.

In Aug. 1828, pltf. agreed to sell a property to deft. The contract was to be completed on Oct. 9 following, & the purchaser was to be entitled to possession up to that time, & if the purchase should not be then completed, the purchaser was to pay interest at 5 per cent. from that day until full payment. The abstract having been delivered, all parties seemed to agree that a good title was not shown; & in Nov. 1828, the time for completion was enlarged to Feb. 21, 1829, when the purchase-money was to be paid without interest, & deft. let into possession; & if pltf. should fail to make a good title, the deposit was to be returned, with interest at 4 per cent. from Oct. 9. Deft. refused to complete, & in 1829 brought an action for his deposit, & pltf. filed his bill for specific performance. Deft. had not taken possession, & great dilapidation had occurred. It was decided that a good title had been shown in Aug., 1828. A decree was made against deft. with costs; & it was determined that A. should sustain the loss by dilapidation, & should pay interest at 4 per cent. only on his purchase-money from the time of filing the bill.—MINCHIN v. NANCE (1841), 4 Beav. 332; 49 E. R. 367.

1575. —.]—The declaration stated that pltf. was lawfully possessed of a certain dwelling-house & premises, etc., & also of certain furniture, tenant's fixtures, etc., then being on the said premises, for the residue of a term of six years; & that pltf. agreed to sell & assign the said lease, with the outbuildings & premises; at a certain sum; & all the household furniture, etc.; then on the said premises at a fair valuation; & that possession should be given to deft. on or before a certain day. It then averred, that from the time of making the agreement, pltf. was ready & willing to transfer the household furniture, etc. This averment was traversed. It appeared that upon the day upon which the agreement was entered into, the house together with the furniture was destroyed:—Held: on this issue pltf. could not recover.—*BACON v. The treaty however proceeded upon a proposal to waive the objections upon certain terms. The houses being burnt before a conveyance, the purchaser is bound, if he accepted the title; & the circumstance, that the vendor suffered the insurance to expire at the day, on which the contract was originally to have been completed, without notice, makes no difference. A reference to the master was therefore directed to inquire, whether the proposal was accepted, or acquiesced in, on behalf of the purchaser.

The contract was not completed by the specified time. There was no default on the part of the purchaser, but the vendors did not keep up the insurance after the time at which the contract should have been completed:—Held: the purchaser ought to be discharged from his contract.—*PALMER v. 1583. — — — — Leasehold property was sold by auction on June 8, 1858, with a condition for completion on July 20, following. The title was accepted by the purchaser on July 16, but owing to disputes as to the value of the fixtures the meeting for completion did not take place till Aug. 26. The purchaser then discovered that the vendors had renewed the insurance, which expired on June 24, for one month only, so that the property became uninsured on July 24, & thereupon became forfeited to the lessors. On Sept. 7, the purchaser absolutely repudiated the contract. The vendors subsequently renewed the insurance, & obtained a waiver of the forfeiture from the lessors, & the purchaser refusing to complete, they filed a bill for specific performance:—Held: although the vendors were not bound to renew the insurance, yet having done so in so unusual a manner, the ct. would not decree specific performance, & the bill was dismissed, but without costs.

(2) That up to July 20, the day fixed for the completion of the contract, it was their [the vendors] duty to keep up the insurance, & not only to do so, but to do it at their own expense, I have no doubt, for by the express terms of the contract, the vendors were to clear all outgoing up to that day. But the question is, was it their duty to do so after the day fixed for the completion of the purchase? Now to try this question, let me suppose that the purchaser knew, as he did know, that by the terms of the lease the estate was liable to forfeiture if the insurance dropped. . . . Upon the dry question by whom the expenses of renewing the insurance after July 20 ought to have been borne, I am of opinion that it ought to have been borne by the purchaser (KINDERSLEY V.-C.).—*DOWSON v. property after the contract. It is purely a question of the contract contained in that lease binding the lessee to insure all the buildings standing on the land or to be erected thereon, & I have not a scrap of evidence as to what the nature of all those buildings was. Then again, unfortunately, the insurance policy does not in any way help me. As a matter of fact it expired on Mar. 25, 1898, & could not even be sued on. I confess that my present impression is that this structure was a building, but if that question were an essential one for me to decide I should have to request further evidence on that point to be placed before me. Assuming, then, that this was a building, the second question arises whether the pltf. could sue on that covenant. Here the purchaser is suing in equity to enforce the covenant. There has been no breach of this covenant to insure, except so far as the amount is concerned. No time was fixed for the completion of the contract, & the period had not arrived when the vendor could say that the policy, so far as he was concerned, had lapsed, & the liability to insure was shifted on to the purchaser. I think that in this respect the present case is covered by the decision of KINDERSELEY, V.-C., in Dowson v. Solomon, No. 1583, ante (KEKEWICH, J.).—NEWMAN v. MAXWELL (1899), 80 L. The insurance co. paid the insurance money to the trustee, who, without the concurrence of his cestuis que trust, allowed the purchaser to deduct the amount from the purchase-money upon completion of the sale. The trustee having become bkpt., & a bill having been filed by the cestuis que trust against the purchaser:—Held: in the absence of any provision in the contract the purchaser was not entitled to the benefit of the money received from the insurance co., & the cestuis que trust were entitled to a lien upon the property for the amount deducted, as being unpaid purchase-money.—*POOLE v. SUB-SECT. 4.—RENTS AND PROFITS.

A. In General.

1595. Right of purchaser to rents & profits.]—On a bill by a purchaser for specific performance of a contract for the sale of an estate, a vendor who, during fifteen years, had retained possession of the whole estate, & of one-third of the purchase-money, was, under the circumstances, charged with interest on one-third of the rents & profits.

The usual course is, that the purchaser shall receive the rents, & pay 4 per cent. interest on the purchase-money (PLUMER, V.-C.).—BURTON v. TODD (1818), 1 Swan. 255; 36 E. R. 380.

The farm at the time of the sale in possession of a tenant at a rent payable one half at Candlemas, the other half at Lammas, in each year:—Held: the seller, not the purchaser, was entitled to the rent payable by the tenant at these two terms in 1807.—SHEPPARD v. WATHERSTON (1817), 5 Dow. 278; 3 E. R. 1328, II. L.

1598. — —[.]—(1) In conditions of sale a time was fixed for the delivery of the abstract, & also for the payment of the purchase-money, or for interest to run if the money were not paid at that time "from whatever cause the delay might have arisen." The vendor did not deliver the abstract at the time stipulated:—Held: the purchaser was only liable to pay interest from the time a good title was shown.

(2) In this case the purchaser, finding that the vendor had failed to deliver an abstract, set apart his purchase-money, & gave notice to the vendor:—Held: the purchaser did this in his own wrong, the conduct of the vendor having rendered it unnecessary for him to pay the purchase-money until a good title was shown.

(3) If the abstract did show a good title, then, according to the rule of the ct. the property would belong to the purchaser from the time at which the contract ought to be completed, & the money would be the money of the vendors, & therefore the one would be entitled to the fruits of the property, & the other to the fruits of the money. Such is the ordinary rule, & such would be its practical effect in all cases where there merely is a time fixed for the performance of the contract, & nothing specific is said as to the time from which interest is to run (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).

(4) Where nothing appears to occasion the delay, the rule no doubt is that if the purchaser who on the face of the contract is under the necessity of paying on a certain day, sets apart his money & gives notice that it is ready, interest stops from that time, provided it be shown he made no interest of it; but if the purchaser refuses to pay interest because the delay is occasioned by the vendor, & the case is made out, no question can arise about intermediate interest, because it does not begin to run till the vendor has put himself right (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—DE VISME v. 1609. Deduction from purchase-money—Order for payment of purchase-money into court—Whether deduction made part of order.]—An order was made in an administration action directing the freehold property of testator to be put up for sale by auction. The conditions of sale provided that each purchaser should pay the balance of his purchase-money, after deducting the amount paid as deposit, into ct. to the credit of the action, on or before July 21, 1885, or, in default should be charged interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum until payment of the purchase-money; & that upon such payment the purchaser should be entitled to possession, or to the rents & profits, as from July 21, 1885. The purchaser of one of the lots having refused to comply with this condition, a summons was taken out, upon which an order was made that, on or before Apr. 7, 1886, or subsequently within seven days after service of the order, the purchaser should lodge in ct. the balance of the purchase-money, after deducting the deposit, with interest thereon from July 21, 1885. The purchaser then asked that after the direction for the payment of the money less the deposit, there should be inserted in the order the words "less the rents & profits of the premises from July 21, 1885." He contended that there ought to be no difference made between a completion of a purchase, where the property was being sold under the direction of the ct. & when it was being sold outside the ct. in the usual way, the course then adopted invariably being to allow the rents & profits to be set off against the interest, the balance being either paid or received by the purchaser:—Held: the practice in circumstances like the present was not to allow the addition of the words referred to; & therefore, the application must be refused.—Re SMITH, DAY v. BONAINI (1886), 55 L. T. 329, C. A.

1610. What included in rents & profits—Underwood.]—A fall of underwood which must be cut by the person in possession at the regular season, is no more than gathering a crop of corn or hay.

In the absence of proof that the fall was improper or contrary to custom, it is only an annual crop which a tenant for life would enjoy as one of the ordinary fruits incident to the possession, & of which it could not be intended that the party in possession was not to have the benefit (GRANT, M.R.).—*BURROUGHS v. 1611. — Quarry on property purchased—Money payable under lease thereof.]—By an agreement, dated Nov. 30, 1887, M. agreed to sell certain land to F. Part of the purchase-money was to be paid on the signing of the agreement, & the purchase was to be completed on May 1, 1888. It was provided that if the purchase was not completed on that date that the vendor should receive the "rents & profits" of the premises until completion in lieu of interest on the balance of the purchase-money. There was a stone quarry on the land which had been worked for several years under a lease. Part of the purchase-money was paid on the signing of the agreement, but the remainder was not paid on the date fixed for completion:—Held: "rents & profits" included whatever was payable under the lease of the quarry, & the vendor was entitled to such amounts from the date of the agreement to the date of the completion of the purchase.—*LEPPINGTON v. B. Nature of Vendor's Liability.

1612. Whether on footing of wilful default.]—When purchase-money is agreed to be paid, & a conveyance made at a given time, & disputes arise as to the title, & the purchaser proposes to the vendee to lay out the purchase-money in Exchequer bills till it is wanted, but the vendor returns no answer, & the money is laid out in Exchequer bills, the vendee is at the risk, & is entitled to the benefit of such purchase-money, with 4 per cent. interest. When a purchase is completed the vendee is entitled to the rents & profits of the estate till possession is given, & the vendor to his purchase-money, with interest; & if, by the neglect of the vendor, no rents & profits have been received, he will be liable for what he might have received unless the purchaser has taken possession.

With respect to possession, there is no change in the notion of equity until the purchase-money is paid. The vendor has a clear right to possession until the purchase-money is paid; if the purchaser enters before he has paid his purchase-money, he is a trespasser. Quoad possession, the estate belongs to the vendor, it is not the estate of the vendee for the purpose of possession; for though in many cases the purchaser is responsible, as if rent, the purchaser was entitled to the whole rent.—MILLER v. NICHOLIS (1892), 23 C. L. T. 176.—CAN.

1613. —.]—The account of rents given against a purchaser for value, who, after being in possession, is evicted by a party having a better title, ought not to extend to such rents, as, without his default or neglect, might have been received, if no special case of fraud is made against him. The decree for such an account ought to contain a direction for just allowances.

The question, then, is, whether it is consistent with the practice, that the decree should charge deft. with the rents & profits which might have been received without his default or neglect. The introduction of these words at once struck me as unusual; & I have ascertained on inquiry that no precedent for it can be found, this being neither the case of a mtgee. in possession nor of a trustee against whom a special breach of trust is charged (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—*HOWELL v. On completion after that date the purchaser claimed to be allowed a rent at the rate of £150 a year, the sum which the undertenants paid the tenant, on the ground that, in allowing the tenant to continue in possession at the rent of £50 a year after the date of the contract for sale, the vendors were guilty of wilful default. On a claim by the vendors to enforce specific performance :—Held : the purchaser not having required the vendors to turn the tenant out, they were not guilty of wilful default in allowing him to remain at the lesser rent; & specific performance was decreed, pltf. accounting only for the lesser rent.—*CROSSE v. C. Occupation Rent.

(a) As Against Vendor.

1617. Execution delayed through suit pending.—The reasonable course which I shall adopt, unless precedents can be produced against it, is, that for the time, elapsed before the execution of the agreement in consequence of the pendency of the suit, interest shall be paid by the purchaser; & a rent shall be set upon the premises in respect of the possession of the vendor (GRANT, M.R.).—*DYER v. 1618. Sub-purchaser kept out of possession.—Where an owner of an estate contracts to sell to another, who thereupon sells a part of the property so contracted for by auction to a third person & he, the sub-vendee, gets possession & the original vendor afterwards refuses to perform his contract which occasions a suit in equity, pending which the original vendor obtains possession from the sub-vendee on a demand to be restored to it, it being rumoured that the original purchaser had failed in the suit instituted for specific performance, if, in fact, pltf. should ultimately succeed in that suit, & the estate is in consequence conveyed to the purchaser under a decree of the ct., the sub-vendee may maintain use & occupation against the original vendor, for all the time during which he held the possession so obtained from the second purchaser.—*HULL v. 1620. —.]—In July, 1867, pltf. sold to a railway co. a house in which he was carrying on the business of a victualler, the terms being that the purchase-money was to be paid on Mar. 25, 1869, or at such earlier time as the co. should choose, possession to be given on payment, they paying 5 per cent. interest in the meantime; & pltf. was to be their tenant at a given rent, the tenancy not to be determined before Mar. 25, 1869, unless the co., after three months' notice, paid the money sooner, but to be determinable on Mar. 25, 1869, by a week's notice. The interest & rent were paid up to Mar. 25, 1869. Pltf. gave due notice to determine the tenancy on that day; but the co. not having the purchase-money ready, he refused to give up possession, & in Apr. filed a bill for specific performance. On Nov. 18, 1869, a decree for specific performance, with a declaration that the title had been accepted, & an order for payment of the purchase-money, with interest from Mar. 25, 1869, was made; & an inquiry was added, whether, having regard to the circumstances & conduct of the parties, the co. were entitled to any & what allowance in respect of pltf.'s occupation of the premises after Mar. 25, 1869 :—Held : the co. were not entitled to any allowance by way of occupation rent.

It is the ordinary rule as between vendor & purchaser, that after the time fixed for completion the vendor is entitled to interest, & the purchaser to the rents & profits (JAMES, L.J.).—LEGGOTT v. METROPOLITAN RY. CO. (1870), 5 Ch. App. 716; 35 J. P. 135; 18 W. R. 1060, L. J.

That the purchase was not completed until Mar. 13, 1876, & that plffs. had duly paid the interest. That defts. had remained in possession, but had paid no rent. That plffs. claimed rent for use & occupation at the rate of £150 per annum as a fair value. Defts. demurred:—Held: under the agreement a fair rent must be paid by defts. for the time they remained in possession, & by demurring they had admitted £150 a year to be a fair rent.—*METROPOLITAN RY. 1623. From when good title shown.—(1) A purchaser's right to repudiate the contract is an equitable right arising from want of mutuality, & may be a defence to an action for specific performance; but in order to avail himself of that defence he must repudiate the contract as soon as he finds that the vendor cannot make a good title.

Now I think it is reasonably clear on the authorities quoted to me that, before decree, a purchaser who becomes aware of a defect in the vendor's title, which defect cannot be removed without the concurrence of a third party whose concurrence the vendor has no power to require, may, except possibly in the case of trifling matters which the ct. would at the vendor's instance treat as matters of compensation or abatement of purchase-money, repudiate his contract, & that such repudiation will be a bar to any relief being subsequently given by way of specific performance at the vendor's instance, even though the defect has been removed before trial (PARKER, J.).

(2) After a decree for specific performance has been made the purchaser cannot repudiate the contract without the leave of the ct.

(3) Where an order is made for specific performance, interest on purchase-money is payable from the time when the master certifies that a good title is first shown, not from the time when such a title is first shown as would enable the purchaser safely to take possession.

(4) I think there ought to be an occupation rent as far as at any rate this lady has continued, after the date fixed by the master's certificate as the date when title was first shown, in possession in the same way as she was before (PARKER, J.).—*HALKETT v. The validity of a leasehold title depended on the lessor's assent to the assignment. The assent was not given until after suit by vendor:—Held: the vendor must bear the rent, rates, taxes & outgoings, down to the date of the assent, & on the other hand, the purchaser must pay interest from that time.

At what time could the purchaser, acting prudently, have taken possession of the premises sold? Up to that time the expenses & outgoings must be borne by the vendor, & from that time they fall upon the purchaser. Although this is not universally true, yet usually this inquiry is answered, by considering at what time a good title was first shown, it being commonly clear that no purchaser can prudently take possession of what he has contracted to buy, until he is satisfied that he will be able to retain possession of it, or, in other words, until a good title is shown (ROMILLY, M.R.).—*CARRODUS v. If, from any cause whatever, other than wilful default on the part of the vendor, the completion of the purchase is delayed beyond the before-mentioned day, the remainder of the purchase-money is to bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum from that day to the day of actual payment thereof, or, at the option of the vendor, he may receive the rents & profits up to the day of the actual completion of the purchase. The property shall, as from the day of sale, be at the sole risk of the purchaser, & the vendor shall not incur any liability by reason of its then or subsequently becoming or remaining untenanted, uninsured or deteriorated." Through default of pltf., who had purchased one of the lots, his purchase was not completed on Aug. 11, although the title had then been accepted, & deft., the vendor, remained in possession. In Nov. 1898, notices were served on deft. as "owner" by the vestry under Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (c. 70), to abate nuisances on the property, & the cost of making the abatement, about £24, was paid by deft. In Feb. 1899, pltf. was ready to complete, & offered to pay interest at 6 per cent. on the balance of the purchase-money from Aug. 11 on receiving the rents & profits from that date & in that case to repay the £24, but he insisted that if deft. retained the rents & profits he ought to bear the cost of the abatement:—Held: the £24 being an outgoing which from the time when a good title was shown must clearly be borne by the purchaser in the absence of express stipulation, pltf. would as from Aug. 11 have been entitled to the rents & profits & liable to pay the £24 if the conditions had not given the vendor the option to keep the rents & profits in lieu of interest, but that there was nothing to relieve pltf. from the obligation to pay the outgoings, & that he could only obtain specific performance on paying the £24 & the balance of his purchase-money.

I think it is settled law that, in the absence of any stipulation on the subject, the vendor must bear all expenses & outgoings of property sold down to the time when a good title was first shown, so that the purchaser could prudently take possession, & also pay interest on his unpaid purchase-money from that time & as from that time all such expenses & outgoings must be borne by the purchaser (COZENS-HARDY, J.).—*BARSH v. 1635. —Stipulations in agreement—Indemnification of vendors.]—Upon the sale of premises, held under a lease by which the consent of the landlord was necessary to an assignment, & which were in a bad state of repair, the purchasers agreed to purchase at a low price "subject to the consent of the superior landlord & to the premises being taken in their present condition." The purchasers were aware of the state of the premises. No notice to repair had been given by the landlord at the time of the contract, but, upon the vendors applying for a licence to assign, the landlord served a schedule of dilapidations with a notice to repair, & refused to grant the licence until the repairs were done. The purchasers refused to do the repairs, & they were executed by the vendors at a cost of £225. The purchasers claimed that on the principle of Re Highett & Bird's Contract, No. 1548, ante, the vendors were bound to do the repairs, which were necessary for them to make a good title, notwithstanding the purchasers' knowledge of the state of repair:—Held: (1) although the contract was an open one, the vendors were bound to show a good title; (2) under the provision as to the purchasers taking the property "in its present condition," the vendors were from the date of the contract trustees for the purchasers of the property in its existing condition; (3) the purchasers were liable to indemnify them against all moneys they spent upon the property, & the vendors were entitled to an order for specific performance on the footing that the purchasers paid them the £225, & the arrears of rent, rates & taxes in addition to the purchase-money.—*LOCKHARTS v. 1636. —Improvement rentcharge imposed after contract of sale.]—An improvement rentcharge imposed on land within the improvement area under London County Council (Improvements) Act, 1899 (c. cclxvi), s. 61, is not an effective charge on the land until after a resolution of the Council approving the assessment notwithstanding that the improvement itself has been completed at an earlier date. If, therefore, the land is contracted to be sold free from incumbrances after the completion of the improvement but before the date of such resolution, the purchaser is not entitled to a conveyance of the land free from the improvement rentcharge.—Re FARRER & GILBERT'S CON-

Then as a last point it is said that these expenses were an "outgoing" which the vendors were bound to pay, because there was an inchoate liability from the moment of the service of the notice to do these paving works. In my opinion there was no liability, inchoate or otherwise, until the local authority had completed the works (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.).—Re ALLEN & DRISCOLL'S CONTRACT, [1904] 2 Ch. 226; 73 L. J. of the land prior to the date of the agreement for sale to him. If the vendor is not the registered owner, the right of the purchaser to recover such portion of the tax is not affected by a provision in the agreement for sale between such vendor as purchaser & his vendor which protects the latter from being called on to reimburse the purchaser from him for the tax which such purchaser may be required to pay on registration of the transfer.—*DAHM v. A. had at the time of making the agreement paid part of the purchase-money, & he promised, for the considerations aforesaid, that he would, on May 1, pay the remainder as & for the absolute purchase, etc. A. further agreed to pay all & every such sum & sums of money for the increased value of the messuages, etc., by or in consequence of the deaths of any persons for whose life or lives any of the messuages were theretofore granted. The purchase was not completed for a very considerable period. The vendor filed his bill for a specific performance. The ct. made a decree, referring it to the master to inquire when the vendor could make a good title, & how much the value of the estate had been increased by the deaths of the persons on whose lives any portions of it were holden:—Held: this decree was correct, & the contract did not give the vendor a right to demand payment for the increased value of the estate from the wearing as well as the dropping of lives.

There is nothing said in terms as to the interest on the rest of the purchase-money, but it necessarily follows, from the reservation of the rents to the vendor, that the purchaser was not to be called on to pay interest upon the purchase-money (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—*BROOKE v. Under the provisions of a private Act passed in 1892, when the workings of a mine owner in the position of plffs. approached within a prescribed distance of the canal he was to give a two months' notice to the co. of his intention to proceed with the work, & within the two months was not to continue working within the prescribed distance. If the co. considered that the further working was likely to damage the canal & was willing to purchase & make compensation for the seam, it could give a counter-notice to that effect, & then the seam was not to be wrought or gotten, but was to be purchased & paid for by the co., the amount, if not agreed upon, being settled by arbn.

The mine owner's notice having been given, the co.'s counter-notice was given on Nov. 19, 1892. An arbitrator was appointed in Nov. 1897, & it was subsequently agreed that all questions between the parties should be left to the arbitrator & that his decision should be accepted without dispute, except that on the question of interest on the amount found due for purchase-money & compensation either party might obtain the decision of a ct. of law.

q. Interest on deposit—Until date of full payment.]—When a purchaser lodges his promissory note for his deposit of one-quarter of his purchase money, he must pay interest on the amount when he completes his purchase. The purchaser's deposit of one-quarter of his purchase money does not bear interest for him until the remaining three-quarters are lodged.

Sect. 1.—Rights and liabilities with respect to the property: Sub-sect. 6, A. (a), (b) & (c).]

The arbitrator awarded £16,565 for purchase-money & compensation, on the footing of pl'tfs.' seam having been purchased on Nov. 19, 1892, & that interest at 4 per cent. on the amount should be calculated from the date of payment:—Held: when the co. gave its notice to the mine owners, the latter were by force of the statute prevented from enjoying the minerals in their way, namely, by working them, & the co. thenceforth obtained the enjoyment in its way, namely, by way of support, & became liable to pay the purchase-money; from that time the mine owners had been deprived of their property, & the co. had enjoyed both that & the purchase-money, & on the principle laid down in Birch v. Joy, No. 1656, post, with reference to ordinary vendors & purchasers, the mine owners were entitled to the interest as awarded.

When such a state of things arises between a vendor & purchaser as that the latter has become entitled in equity to the thing purchased & to the receipt of the rents, if there be such, or to the enjoyment, if there can be enjoyment, of the thing purchased, there arises in equity a correlative right in the vendor to have interest on his purchase-money if remaining unpaid (BUCKLEY, J.).—*FLETCHER v. B., in Mar. 1812, contracted for the purchase of an estate from C., for £90,000. The estate was very much incumbered, & C. was to make a title free from all incumbrances, except one mtge. of £12,000. B., on being put into possession of part of the estates, was to pay £16,000 on June 24, 1812, " & a further sum of £4,000 at Michaelmas next, on C. putting B. into the actual possession of the remainder, free from all incumbrances, except the mtge. for £12,000; the further sum of £25,000 in Mar. 1813; £16,500 in Mar. 1816; & £16,500 in Mar. 1818." B. was to grant C. a mtge. of all the estates for securing these three sums at the respective time, aforesaid, "with legal interest from Michaelmas next." The £20,000 thus agreed to be paid in two sums within the first year not having been paid by B., nor any of the incumbrances cleared off by C., a new agreement was entered into in Oct. 1812. B. was forthwith to advance £10,000 to pay off certain incumbrances, he was to be let into immediate possession, to be entitled to the rents & profits "from Michaelmas last," & to be at liberty to cut timber, etc. The conveyances were to be executed as soon as existing difficulties could be removed, & every possible exertion was to be made to that end. It was further agreed, that "the interest of the remainder of the purchase-money shall not commence till Lady Day next, in case the title shall be perfected, & the conveyances & other assurances 1660. — By implied agreement.—A purchaser, taking possession without a conveyance, was compelled to pay interest; though the money was to be paid at a particular day on the execution of the conveyance.

The act of taking possession is an implied agreement to pay interest: for so absurd an agreement, as that the purchaser is to receive the rents & profits, to which he has no legal title, & the vendor is not to have interest, as he has no legal title to the money, can never be implied (GRANT, M.R.).—*FLUDYER v. 1661. — Without prejudice to claim for compensation—Undue delay by vendor.—On a sale under the ct. in June, 1839, it was provided by the conditions, that the abstract should be delivered in the twenty-one days, that the purchaser should be entitled to the rents from Oct. & pay his purchase-money in Nov. & if "from any cause whatever" it should not be paid at that time, he should pay interest at 5 per cent. The vendors were unable to deliver the abstract within the time, & there was great delay & difficulty, on their part, in making out their title, which was not complete till 1845. The purchaser had entered into possession. On a motion made in 1845 to pay the purchase-money & interest into ct., the ct. held that it could not relieve the purchaser from payment of interest but made the order without prejudice to any application for compensation.—*GREENWOOD v. 1662. — Possession without prejudice to question of title.—A purchaser under an agreement entered into possession & into receipt of the rents & profits of certain messuages & premises in the year 1827, without prejudice as to any question of title. After the delivery of the abstract, the purchaser took objections to the title, & by reason of a party necessary to the conveyance being a minor, the conveyance was postponed. The purchaser remained in possession down to the time of filing the bill, performing certain acts of ownership, & still offering objections to the title. Upon motion of the vendor in a suit for specific performance:—Held: deft. ought to pay the purchase-money into ct. with interest, at the usual rate of 4 per cent.—ADAMS v. HEATHCOTE (1846), 7 L. In 1842 the mtgor. died & in the same year the devisees of the equity of redemption sold by auction the mtged. premises together with other lands of the mtgor.'s for £2,700 to the mtgee. The usual deposit was paid at the time of the sale, & by the conditions of sale 4 per cent. was payable on the balance of the purchase-money. The mtgee. entered into possession in 1842 & remained in such possession until her death in 1847 when her devisees entered into possession. Upon a claim filed by the devisees of the mtgor. against the devisees & exors. of the mtgee. for specific performance of the contract to purchase eleven years after the sale, no demand having been made during that period either for the payment of the residue of the purchase-money into ct., or for interest on the mtge. :—Held: in the circumstances a set-off pro tanto was to be inferred at the date when possession was taken by the mtgee. & from that period, interest at 4 per cent. only was payable upon the balance of the purchase-money.—*WALLIS v. 1674. — — — — —.]—An agreement dated Sept. 26, 1898, for the sale of land provided that, if from any cause whatever, other than wilful default on the part of the vendors, the completion of the purchase should be delayed beyond Jan. 2, 1899, the purchase-money should bear interest at 5 per cent. per annum. The title having been accepted, a dispute arose about the form of the conveyance, & the purchase was not completed on the day fixed. On June 12, 1899, the vendors threatened in effect that, if the purchaser did not within ten days assent to the form of conveyance which they proposed, they would cancel the contract & forfeit the deposit. On June 22, 1899, the purchaser commenced an action for specific performance of the contract. At the trial on Feb. 2, 1900, the judge held that the purchaser was in the right as to the form of the conveyance, & gave judgment for specific performance, with costs up to the date of the judgment. The judgment directed that interest, if any, should be computed on the balance of the purchase-money from Jan. 2, 1899, & that an account should be taken of the rents & profits of the land received by defts. since Jan. 2, 1899; & it was ordered that what should be coming on the account of rents & profits should be deducted from the amount of the purchase-money & interest when computed. On a motion by pltf. to vary the master's certificate, money should be separated from the purchaser's general bank account, & notice of the appropriation must be given to the vendor.

the judge held that there had been no "wilful default" by the vendors, & that, even if there had been, the delay in completion was due, not to the default, but to the inability of the purchaser to find the money to complete the purchase, & consequently that the purchaser must pay interest on the balance of the purchase-money from Jan. 2, 1899, down to completion:—Held: either there had been no wilful default by the vendors, or, if there had been, the delay in completion was not due to the default, & the decision as to payment of interest was right.

There may, however, be conduct on the part of the vendor, or of the purchaser, which suffices to relieve the purchaser wholly or in part from the liability to pay interest. A familiar example is where the purchaser, complaining of delay, informs the vendor that the purchase-money is lying idle on deposit at a bank, & that he will object to pay anything beyond the bank interest (COZENS-HARDY, L.J.).—*BENNETT v. B. From what Time Payable.

(a) In General.

1680. From time good title shown—Enabling purchaser safely to take possession.—A purchaser under a decree for sale having accepted, & on a report of an objection to the title, for which compensation was ordered, returned, possession, must pay interest on the purchase-money, from the time at which he took, or at which a title was shown under which he might have safely taken, possession, & is entitled to an allowance for prior, not for subsequent, deterioration of the estate.

With regard to possession, the purchaser was not to take possession till he had paid the purchase-money, & that condition of payment could not be performed unless prior to the time appointed for giving possession, the vendor could show a title under which the purchaser would be safe in taking possession & paying his purchase-money. The case therefore requires, that it should be ascertained when a good title could be made, for without that, the purchaser was not bound to take possession. That might raise another question: whether, by taking possession, which he was not bound to take, he waived objections to the contract. If he ultimately obtains a title, he must be considered, by relation, as in possession, under that title, from the time at which he took possession, & from that time must be understood to say, that if he could hereafter have a title made to him, he was to be considered as in possession, & must receive the rents & profits, & account for interest on the purchase-money (LORD ELDON, C.).—*BINKS v. 1684. ———.]—In May, 1897, B. contracted to sell to K. certain lands, the purchase to be completed on Oct. 11, & failing completion on that date, interest to be paid by the purchaser at 5 per cent. on the balance of purchase-money then due. In June, 1897, K. contracted to sell the same premises to S., subject "to the same terms as to title, etc.," as in the original contract. S. eventually refused to complete until Jan. On a summons by K. asking for a declaration that Oct. 11 was, by reference to the original contract, the time fixed for completion, & that debt. might be ordered to pay interest from that date:—Held: a clause of this kind which might possibly involve serious liability on the purchaser could not be read into the agreement of June, 1897, & the contract was therefore an open one. But that, as interest was payable from the time when the purchaser could prudently have taken possession & the abstract was delivered on Oct. 22 interest should run from Nov. 1, 1897.

The contract is left an open one, which does contain no express stipulations as to the date of completion. What is the rule which applies to such a case? That is stated in the judgment of JESSEL, M.R., in Re Pigott & Great Western Ry. Co., No. 1682, ante, where he says this: "Where the vendor has shown his title, the purchaser pays interest from the time at which he might prudently have taken possession, supposing it to have been offered to him—that is the time when a good title is shown." What time is this in the present case? Giving him the utmost benefit for the purpose of verifying the abstract delivered on Oct. 22, I think he ought to pay interest from Nov. 1 at 4 per cent. This agreement was subsequently executed by the co., but pending its execution, the co.'s solr. purchased B.'s property, as he alleged, on his own account, & after selling a part of it to the co., for their purposes, retained the residue. On the completion of the line, the co. agreed to sell a portion of that residue to a second railway co. the purchaser to certain houses, including those to be sold. On July 11, 1908, the purchaser heard for the first time that debtor had committed an act of bkpcy. on the previous June 30. On Oct. 12, 1908, a receiving order was made against debtor in a county ct., & adjudication followed. The purchaser, having accepted the title & entered into possession, applied to the county ct. judge, against the trustee in bkpcy., for specific performance of the two contracts & for a declaration that he was entitled to set off the £257 due to him from debtor against the balance of the purchase-money due from him to debtor after deducting the amount due on the mtge. The county ct. judge held that the purchaser was only entitled to specific performance on payment of the balance of the purchase-money in full to the trustee:—Held: there had been mutual dealings between debtor & the purchaser within Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (c. 52), s. 38, & the purchaser was therefore entitled to specific performance upon the terms that the £257 due to him from debtor be set off against the balance of the purchase-money.

The purchaser can under ordinary circumstances by application to the ct. enforce his rights to a conveyance of the land against the new owner of the legal title (that is to say he can require that the land shall be transferred to him) on his payment to such owner of the balance of the purchase-money (FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J.).—*Re TAYLOR, Ex p. SUB-SECT. 2.—ASSIGNMENT OF THE CONTRACT.

A. Transfer of Benefit.

Assignment of contracts generally.—See CONTRACT, Vol. XII., pp. 596–607.

1717. Assignment by purchaser.—It is extremely clear that an equitable interest under a contract of purchase may be the subject of sale. A person claiming under that contract becomes in equity a trustee for the persons with whom he afterwards contracts; without entering into any covenants for that purpose, they are obliged to indemnify him from the consequence of all acts which he must execute for their benefit; & a court of equity not only allows, but actually compels, him to permit them to use his name, in all proceedings for obtaining the benefit of their contract (LORD ELDON, C.).—WOOD v. GRIFFITH (1818), 1 Swan. 43; 1 Wils. Ch. 34; 36 E. R. 291, L. C.

1718. — Of right to accept offer.—The assignment of an unaccepted offer made to one individual with specific views, & for a specific purpose, could not easily enable the assignee to give an acceptance which should turn the offer into an agreement as against the person who made it. The acceptance of an offer, unless it be a single acceptance without any variation whatever, cannot amount to an agreement. The first thing essential in a valid contract is certainty as to the parties to the contract, & in the simple case of an offer by A. to sell to B. an acceptance of the offer by C. can establish no contract with A. there being no privity (STUART, V.-C.).—MEYNELL v. SURTEES (1854), 3 Sm. & G. 101; 24 L. T. O. S. 120; 1 Jur. N. S. 80; 3 W. R. 36; 65 E. R. 581; on appeal (1855), 25 L. J. Ch. 257, L. C.

1720. — To repudiate contract—On notice of assignment.—If A., for valuable consideration, undertakes to surrender a copyhold to B., & B., on borrowing money from C., enters into a written agreement with C., that he, B., will surrender the same copyhold to C. by way of mtge. security, A. is not justified in refusing to surrender the copyhold to B., because he, A., has received notice from C. of the agreement between him & B. The surrender by A. to B. does not prejudice, but promotes, that agreement.—v. WALFORD (1828), 4 Russ. 372; 38 E. R. 845.

f. — Right of assignee to rescind.—Where a vendor of land holds the same under an agreement for sale from a prior vendor to him which contains a provision against reselling without the prior vendor's consent, & he makes an agreement for sale without such consent, his purchaser cannot rescind for that reason if he, the vendor, is in a position to make title, for example, by his having paid the purchase-money in full to the prior vendor, or where the vendor, after action commenced by him against his purchaser on the agreement, but before judgment, obtains the consent of the prior vendor to the agreement.—MOSIMAN v. CARVETH, [1923] 2 W. W. R. 372; [1923] 2 D. L. R. 725; varying, 68 D. L. R. 232; 16 Sask. L. R. 23.—CAN.

1719 i. Right of vendor — Against original purchaser—After acceptance of assignment.—Where an agreement for the sale & purchase of land is made with the purchaser, "or assigns," the former is not relieved from his obligation under the contract by assigning it, unless the vendor has accepted the assignee in place of the purchaser.—VIVIAN (H. H.) CO. v. CLERGUE (1908),

Sect. 2.—Assignment by either party pending completion: Sub-sect. 2, A. & B. Sect. 3: Sub-sect. 1, A. (a).]

1721. — To receive purchase-money—After notice of assignment.]—A vendor of land may receive the balance of the purchase-money, & convey the estate to the purchaser, without regard to the receipt of a notice that the purchaser had agreed to assign the contract.

A vendor agreed to sell leaseholds which were under a heavy rent, & received part of the purchase-money. The purchaser afterwards agreed to assign to a bank, if required, the contract for the purchase by way of security for money advanced, & the bank gave notice of this agreement to the vendor. The bank afterwards refused to advance to the purchaser the money required to complete, but this was not known to the vendor. The purchaser, after the time fixed for completion, paid the balance of the purchase-money, the vendor executed an assignment, & the purchaser assigned to an assignee without notice of the security to the bank:—Held: the vendor was entitled to complete without giving notice to the bank, & the bank had no remedy against him.—McCREIGHT v. FOSTER (1870), 5 Ch. App. 604; 39 L. J. Ch. 792; 23 L. T. 224; 18 W. R. 905, L. C.

m. — Priority of vendor's mechanics' lien.—Where assignment without consent in breach of agreement.]—A provision in an agreement for the sale of land that no assignment thereof by the purchaser shall be valid without the consent or approval of the vendor is for the benefit of the vendor only & only in his capacity as vendor, & cannot be invoked by him to protect an interest he acquired as assignee of a mechanics' lien registered after the purchaser assigned his interest in the agreement & after the assignee had protected his interest by caveat.—NASH & CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE v. FITZPATRICK, [1924] 4 D. L. R. 1207; [1924] 3 W. W. R. 913; 19 Sask. L. R. 114.—CAN.

p. — Assignment by purchaser in breach of agreement—Right to removal of caveat filed by assignee of purchaser.]—An agreement of sale of land provided that no assignment thereof should be valid unless approved & countersigned by the vendor & that nothing between the purchaser & an assignee should preclude the vendor from the right to convey the premises to the purchaser. The purchaser assigned the agreement without such being approved or countersigned & the assignee filed a caveat to protect his interest. The vendor transferred the land & assigned his rights under the agreement to the applicant, who applied to have the caveat discharged. The ct. refused to discharge the caveat.—Re CAVEAT No. 109121, IWANICKI v. LEVIN, [1924] 1 D. L. R. 171; 33 Man. L. R. 420; [1923] 3 W. W. R. 1122.—CAN.

q. Right of assignee of purchase against original vendor—Assignment in breach of agreement.]—An assignee of an agreement for sale of lands containing a restriction against assignment, without the approval of the registered vendor, has no status to file a lis pendens or caveat without obtaining such approval. Such an assignee cannot be said to have an interest in land; he has merely a personal right against his own vendor.—ATLANTIC REALTY & IMPROVEMENT CO., LTD. v. JACKSON (1913), 18 B. C. R. 657.—CAN.
